Extended Forecast – Mostly dry tonight through the early afternoon on Saturday. There remains a chance for some afternoon storms, mainly after 4pm, but these chances will be low. Coverage will likely remain conditional but any cells that can develop will pose a threat for severe criteria conditions and heavy rainfall accumulations. Rain chances pick up after dark, with higher confidence in storms moving through during the early AM hours Sunday. Conditions expected to clear out by late morning with low chances for isolated storms in the afternoon. A slight chance of tstorms will hold into early next week as well. Saturday is still expected to be the windiest day of the tournament, with gusts of up to 40-45 mph likely. Winds stay elevated to 30-35 Sunday morning, lessening to 20-25 mph by mid-afternoon.
