Today – Dry conditions will prevail with some fair-weather clouds during the afternoon. Elevated wildfire smoke should also produce a hazy looking sky, however this won't affect air quality. Afternoon temperatures will reach the lower 80s with southeast winds expected throughout the day. Some gusts over 15 mph will be possible. Sunrise: 5:50am / Sunset: 8:47pm

Extended forecast – A warmer and breezier pattern will develop on Friday and then continue into the weekend. Wind gusts over 20 mph can be expected each day with gusts over 25-30 mph possible on Saturday and possibly Sunday. Dry conditions will also persist for much of this period, however a low threat (25% chance) for showers/T-storms is warranted on Sunday. A more substantial threat for shower/T-storms likely develops Sunday night into Monday morning.
