Extended forecast – Outside of a few brief showers, dry conditions with diminishing winds can be expected tonight into Friday. An area of low pressure will track towards Bermuda Friday night with higher rain chances returning to the island. This rain could be heavy with T-storms possible. The other concern will be strong winds Friday night and again Saturday afternoon. Gusts of 30-40+ mph are possible. The threat for precipitation will diminish for the second half of the weekend, however brisk winds will persist.

Forecast prepared by meteorologist Kyle Koval.
