

Scottish Open Forecast 5 AM Update Thursday, 11 July 2024

Synopsis -
 Low pressure will gradually pull away to the northeast today but not before some occasional light showers move down from the north through the day. There will be some breaks of sun with max temperatures around 16C/61F. Expect a west-northwesterly breeze this morning then winds will turn more easterly late this afternoon and ease. Showers will end around midnight with some clearing and light winds. A small ridge of high pressure will keep conditions partly sunny for Friday with warmer temperatures. Winds will switch in the to the east in the afternoon. An area of low pressure will rotate in from the North Sea on Saturday with showers in the afternoon and mainly cloudy skies. Winds will become northeasterly. Skies will remain mostly cloudy for Sunday with slightly warmer temperatures.
