Today – Onshore flow will persist with a mix of clouds and sun, along with a low (20%) threat for a passing shower. Any shower that affects Ponte Vedra will be brief in nature and most of the day will remain dry. Winds will be less persistent compared to yesterday, however a period of stronger (near 20 mph) sustained winds and gusts closer to 30 mph will be possible during the afternoon. Again, strongest winds favor Sawgrass CC. Forecast rainfall: Trace. Sunrise: 7:14am / Sunset: 5:27pm

Extended forecast – East to northeast flow remains in place through the end of the weekend. A low (20%) shower chance remains warranted, however most of this period remains dry. Wind gusts of up to 25 mph will remain possible as well. The shower threat will diminish by Monday with pleasant conditions in place.
