Extended forecast – A trough of low-pressure is expected to approach the northwest coast this weekend providing an on-shore flow and cooler temperatures. Areas of low clouds and patchy fog will be possible Saturday morning and become likely on Sunday as the moisture increases and the trough moves closer to California. Otherwise, Mostly sunny skies can be expected Saturday with highs around 80F with cooler temperatures Sunday with highs in the low to mid 70s. A few showers will be possible Sunday night into Monday as the trough moves through the region.
