Extended forecast – Dry conditions will persist through Friday with seasonal temperatures in place. Increasing southerly flow will cause humidity levels and cloud cover to increase by Saturday. In fact, periods of drizzle or even light rain showers could develop during the day Saturday. A slightly higher threat for rainfall should develop Saturday night into Sunday morning as a weak cold front pushes through. Wind gusts of 25-30 mph will be possible Friday/Saturday while gusts should remain under 20 mph Thursday/Sunday.
