Extended forecast – A developing low-pressure system will move east bringing areas of rain and the chance for a few thunderstorms throughout the day on Friday. Storms could be strong with gusty winds, small hail and heavy rainfall. It will be windy out of the southeast with gusts up to 30-35 mph at times. The low will move into Georgia by Saturday morning dragging a cold front through Central Florida. This will keep the chance for scattered showers and thunderstorms for the first half of the day before drier conditions return Saturday afternoon. Partly cloudy skies can be expected Sunday with mild temperatures
