Today – Sunny skies this morning will become partly cloudy during the afternoon as a weakening trough approaches from the west. This may produce an isolated shower or thunderstorm during the late afternoon/early evening. Otherwise, it will be a warmer day with highs warming into the mid to upper 80s. The wind will be light starting the day out of the east and gradually switching around to the west and northwest late in the day.

Extended forecast – Partly cloudy, hot and more humid conditions can be expected Saturday with highs in the upper 80s. Cannot rule out an isolated shower or thunderstorm developing during the afternoon hours. Otherwise, most locations will remain dry through the day. A higher chance for scattered thunderstorms returns Sunday afternoon as weak upper-level energy approaches from the northwest.
