Today – Cloud cover this morning should gradually give way to more sunshine this afternoon. Otherwise, skies likely remain hazy with lingering wildfire smoke over the Calgary area. The forecast will mention a 5-10% chance for a shower/T-storm after 4pm, however any development most likely remains north of Calgary. Light northwest winds this morning likely become variable during the afternoon.

Extended forecast – Some increase in cloud cover is expected late tonight into Sunday morning as a weak disturbance passes overhead. In fact, a few sprinkles can't be ruled out. Otherwise, skies will quickly clear out by Sunday afternoon with pleasant temperatures. Southeast winds can be expected during the afternoon with some gusts over 15 mph (25 kph). Partly cloudy and warm conditions can be expected on Monday.
