Extended forecast – Saturday, increasing clouds are expected along with a slight chance of an isolated shower/t-storm developing in the area in the afternoon/evening, mainly after 4pm. Light and variable winds early will become northwesterly by late morning, with gusts to 14-18 mph at times in the afternoon. Sunday, an increase in moisture is expected to lead to a few scattered showers/t-storms in the area, highest chance after 3pm. Any activity that does develop will move from southwest to northeast. Winds will be light on Sunday, generally from the northwest but may become variable around any shower activity.

Forecast prepared by meteorologist Kyle Schanus.
