Today – Partly to mostly cloudy skies can be expected today with temperatures reaching 90F/32C. The northerly wind flow will continue and likely average 10-15 with a few gusts to 18 mph. This will likely be strong enough to keep most of the shower or thunderstorm activity away but can't rule out a shower at the course this afternoon if the sea breeze can move far enough inland.

Extended forecast – The northerly wind flow weakens and may allow the sea breeze to move inland on Friday. This will increase the chances for scattered showers and isolated thunderstorms, especially during the afternoon hours. Scattered showers will remain possible into Saturday before the northerly breeze strengthens Saturday night into Sunday with drier conditions returning.
