Today – Dry with clouds building throughout the morning. There is a low chance for a few passing showers after 4pm, but chances look no higher than 10% before sunset. The good news is lightning is not expected, and any rain should be very light, if any occurs at all. Winds will be very light throughout the day, with nothing over 10 mph expected. Total Rainfall: Trace-0.05”.

Sunday – Forecast will be a tricky one. There is a chance for a few spotty showers throughout the morning hours, but overall, largely dry conditions are expected. Rain is expected to become more scattered after 2pm with chances continuing to increase as the day progresses. Main question will be lightning. This could be a case where most of the rain is showery in nature through 3-4pm before lightning chances begin to increase further. Any lightning that does occur is expected to be spotty. Winds remain light for the final round, with winds under 10 mph expected once again. Total Rainfall: 0.10-0.30”.
