Today – After some overnight shower activity in the area, conditions have generally cleared across Punta Cana with partly cloudy to mixed skies expected through the morning hours. Later this afternoon, the threat for more scattered activity has slowly backed off with isolated showers now becoming the expectation. SE winds through the AM will gradually turn E/NE late in the day.

Extended forecast – Little change to the extended weekend outlook with increasing NE'ly winds commonly gusting over 25mph Saturday and Sunday afternoon. Isolated marine showers (some briefly moderate) remain possible in the area tomorrow with coverage and intensity further decreasing as Saturday approaches. A few brief light sprinkles/showers would be the main possibility both Saturday and Sunday.
