7 AM Weather Update

Friday, April 11, 2025

Synopsis: Clouds will gradually decrease this morning, becoming partly cloudy to mostly sunny for a portion of the late morning to early afternoon. Skies will become a mix of sun and clouds after 2PM as a few showers and thunderstorms pop-up with upper-level energy rotating overhead. Westerly winds will increase to 12-20 mph along with gusts in the 22-27 mph range from late morning through the afternoon. Cooler temperatures are forecast Saturday with isolated showers possibly developing Saturday afternoon as upper-level energy lingers for one more day. Cool and dry conditions can be expected for Sunday's final round with sunny skies and highs in the low 70s.
