Extended forecast – Outside a slim chance for a brief light shower or area of drizzle during the late afternoon or early evening hours on Friday, anticipate dry conditions will continue through the weekend. A few thunderstorms may develop in the Sierra Madre Mountains southeast of Puerto Vallarta Friday afternoon, but this activity is forecast to remain 20+ miles/32+ kilometers away and will pose no threat to the course. Friday through Sunday should see winds remaining light and variable through 10-11am before turning southerly at 5-10 mph through 1-2pm. After 1-2pm, a sea breeze will cause southwesterly winds to increase to 10-15 mph along with gusts in the 16-20 mph range.
