Extended forecast – Mostly cloudy, hot and humid conditions can be expected Friday with highs around 90F/32C as high pressure remains in the area. A cold front is forecast to move through North Carolina mid to late morning Saturday. This will produce cloudy skies and a slight chance for showers as the front passes. Otherwise, drier air will overspread the area during the afternoon making for less humid conditions under partly cloudy skies. The front will stall south of the region Sunday with slightly cooler temperatures.
