Today – A warmer start to the day with temperatures in the low 60s. Otherwise, sunny skies will help temperatures warm into the mid 70s by early afternoon before the sea breeze moves onshore cooling the temperatures back into the low 70s. Light wind this morning will increase by mid-day/early afternoon to 10-15 gusting 18-20 mph as the sea breeze moves inland.

Extended forecast – High pressure over the region will provide warm temperatures as we go through the weekend into early next week. Highs will likely reach the mid to upper 70s each day before the sea breeze cools the temperatures back into the low 70s. Dry weather is expected to continue into Monday before the chance for afternoon showers and thunderstorms returns by Wednesday as a front stalls over the region.
