Today – A cool start to the day with temperatures in the low 50s this morning. Sunny skies should help temperatures rebound into the low to mid 70s this afternoon before the sea breeze moves onshore cooling temperatures back into the upper 60s to low 70s. A light NE wind this morning will shift out of the southeast and average 10 mph during the afternoon as well.

Extended forecast – High pressure building over the region will help temperatures moderate as we go through Friday into the weekend with mostly sunny skies each day. Highs will likely return to the mid to upper 70s Friday with highs warming into the the upper 70s to near 80 degrees over the weekend. Dry weather will continue into Monday before the chance for afternoon showers and thunderstorms returns on Tuesday.

Forecast prepared by meteorologist Stewart Williams.
