Today – Cloudy skies and cool conditions can be expected to start the day with temperatures in the low 50s. An isolated shower cannot be ruled out late morning into the early afternoon before much drier air overspreads the area from the west. Otherwise, a mix of sun and clouds will help temperatures warm into the mid 60s this afternoon. A WNW breeze this morning of 10-15 mph will increase to 15-20 gusting to 30 mph for the afternoon making it feel cooler at times as well.

Extended forecast – The system finally pulls away this Saturday leading to drier conditions for the weekend. Partly cloudy skies can be expected Saturday and Sunday with lows in the upper 40s and highs in the upper 60s to around 70F. Mostly sunny skies will continue into Monday before the next low-pressure system brings the chance for showers Tuesday into Wednesday.
