Extended forecast – Marine clouds could develop tonight and then linger through much of Friday/Friday night. These clouds could lower to a fog Friday night, but this shouldn't have an impact on play. Higher-level cloud cover increases on Saturday with southerly winds developing. The next storm system will approach on Sunday, however the most substantial impacts should hold off until Sunday night. Regardless, some shower activity is still possible by Sunday afternoon. Brisk southerly winds are also expected with gusts upwards of 25 mph.
