Extended forecast – A more unsettled weather pattern develops this weekend with rain chances retuning to the Austin Saturday afternoon through Sunday afternoon. The most impactful weather (heavy rain & lightning) is expected along the approaching cold front on Sunday. Confidence in timing remains poor but the period between 9am-3pm currently has the highest threat. With the rain/clouds, temperatures likely remain in the upper 60s to near 70 degrees this weekend with east to southeast winds in place. Gusts around 20 mph will be possible.
