Extended forecast – Friday, trade winds lessen leading to lower winds than Thursday, with gusts generally remaining below 20 mph. Most of the day will remain dry and partly cloudy, though a brief passing shower will be possible. No thunderstorms are expected. Over the weekend, again expect largely dry weather with partly cloudy to at times mostly sunny skies, with a slight chance of a brief passing shower each day, highest chances in the morning. Winds will remain from the east to east-northeast, stronger on Saturday, where a few locally higher gusts to 25 mph are possible along the ocean. Temperatures will top out near 88F (31C) each afternoon, warmest across interior parts of the course.

Forecast prepared by meteorologist Kyle Schanus.
