

FRIDAY, JUNE 19, 2026 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

After a max gust of 31 mph yesterday, hot, dry air blew in from the west last evening causing temps to get up around 80 degrees when the humidity fell for an hour or so, then the temperatures stabilized in the lower 70s the rest of the night. West and a little northwest winds early this morning will become more of a west to southwest breeze today. Speeds will not be as strong as yesterday, but they won't be light either. Look for sustained speeds around 10-14 mph a good portion of the day with gusts of 20-24 mph often and a high gust could surpass 25 mph at random times. Look for more clouds than sun through the first half of the day, but only thick enough to give us the slimmest risk for a sprinkle around mid morning. Otherwise expect partial sunshine at times to become more frequent as we head through lunchtime into this afternoon with another mostly sunny finish to the day. Temps will warm into the upper 70s this afternoon and we'll keep those same high temps pretty much through the weekend. The wind will be stronger on Saturday with gusts of 30+ mph likely, then we'll see the least amount of wind on Sunday.
