Extended forecast– Isolated thunderstorms remain possible through the Sunday. Storms will primarily impact the area between 4 PM and 9 PM each day before gradually dissipating. Slightly drier air will begin moving into the Triad late Sunday into Monday, leading to lower thunderstorm chances into early next week. Otherwise, it will remain very warm and humid, with afternoon high temperatures generally in the upper 80s. Highs in the lower to mid-90s are expected Monday through mid-week.
