The Diners Club Peru Open was a founding partner of the South American Tour in 1991 and was part of the launch of the Tour de las Americas (2000) and PGA TOUR Latinoamérica (2012), and it was named PGA TOUR Americas Tournament of the Year in 2024, the tour's inaugural season.

Player Notes

Hunter Wolcott (Dickson, Tennessee) returns to Los Inkas Golf Club, where he walked away as the 2025 Diners Club Peru Open champion (two-shot win over David Perkins). He is coming off a tie for third at the Abierto del Centro Zurich to rank sixth on the PGA TOUR Americas Points List.

Patrick Flavin (Highwood, Illinois) is coming off a tie for 18th at the ECP Brazil Open and a victory at the Abierto del Centro Zurich to sit atop the Points List. He will be playing the Diners Club Peru Open for the third time (T37/2019, T66/2025).

Mason Greene (Tustin, California) tried to qualify for the 2025 Diners Club Peru Open but lost a 4-for-2 playoff at the Monday qualifier. This time around, he returns to Los Inkas as a PGA TOUR Americas champion after winning the season-opening ECP Brazil Open, and he enters the week No. 2 on the Points List.

Charlie Crockett (Surrey, England) is No. 5 on the Points List and is one of only two players who have recorded back-to-back top 10s to begin the season (T3/ECP Brazil Open, T10/Abierto del Centro Zurich). He missed the cut in his first start at this event last year.

David Longmire (Laguna Niguel, California) joins Crockett as the only other player with two top-10s in as many starts this season (T8/ECP Brazil Open, T10/Abierto del Centro Zurich) to rank No. 9 on the Points List. He missed the cut in his first start at this event last year.

Marcos Montenegro (Loberia, Argentina) is coming off a T10 finish at the Abierto del Centro. He is a former tournament winner, having won the 2023 Diners Club Peru Open on PGA TOUR Latinoamérica. Last year, he finished T14 in this event and went on to finish No. 48 on the season-long Points List.
