Extended forecast – Rain will be likely through the early afternoon behind the front before shifting east and allowing for some clearing late in the day. It will be a chilly, breezy and raw day with temperatures likely holding in the low to mid-50s. This will be 30 degrees colder than previous days and 10-15 degrees below the average high for this time of year. Skies are expected to clear by Saturday night allowing temperatures to cool into the low 40s by daybreak Sunday. Mostly sunny skies and breezy conditions are forecast for Sunday afternoon with highs struggling to reach 60F.
