*A Message From
Deane R. Beman
PGA Tour Commissioner*

The PGA Tour is one of the most positive influences on the sports scene today. For example, did you know that ...

The Tour... raises several million dollars annually for charity.

The Tour... contributes immensely to the interest in golf in each city where a tournament is held.

The Tour... exposes golf to millions of would-be golfers, young and old, who can come to love and enjoy the game as you and I do.

The Tour... sets an example of individual effort, self-reliance, honesty and living by the Rules.

The Tour... shows to millions of people a group of proud and talented men who win with courtesy to their fellow competitors and lose with dignity, and an honest appreciation for the man who is the winner.

The Tour... serves as an example of the necessity for a positive attitude. No one can go very far in this game, or in life, without having to accept what has happened and apply his talents toward the next challenge. In so many ways, golf is life.

The Tour... substantially assists the entire program of the United States Golf Association by the presence of our players in the field of the U.S. Open Championship. Our players make the Open an appealing and significant Championship, and the proceeds from the Open are the single largest source of funds available to the USGA.

The Tour... contributes, through player participation, a significant sum to the PGA education and other programs that have enhanced the enjoyment of the average golfer.

1976 AT A GLANCE

There were numerous positive signs for Tommy Aaron in 1976, although it was his poorest money-year in more than a decade. He collected $24,060 which dropped him to 91st place.

The last three years have not been good ones for Tommy as compared to those in the stretch from the mid-1960s through 1973. The former Masters Champion started 1976 by missing the cut in seven of his first 10 tournaments.

He had missed the cut four straight weeks when he headed for the Masters Tournament and posted a 42nd place there. From that point on, Tommy cashed checks in 16 of his final 20 starts.

His best finish was a tie for fourth in the Southern Open where he finished with rounds of 68 and 68. While that was the only top 10 finish he was able to register all year, his game was beginning to show positive signs of consistency.

Tommy entered 30 tournaments and made money in 18. He missed the cut 10 times and withdrew from another event. His stroke average was 72.5, but it was as high as 73.9 at the Masters. His low round was a 66 at the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

PRIOR YEARS

Late in 1973, the same year Tommy Aaron won the precious Masters title in his native Georgia, he slid into an uncharacteristic scoring slump from which he has yet to recover.

In 1974 he failed to make the top 60 money list for the first time since he came on the Tour in 1961. He entered 32 events, missed the cut 11 times, finished in the top 10 only twice and earned barely $31,000.

However, in the Fall of 1974 there were encouraging signs when he survived 11 of 13 cuts, and starting out in 1975 he had to believe he was back in the groove. He was third at Phoenix and tied for seventh at Tucson the following week. But they were to be his only top-10 finishes the entire year. He wound up 1975 making money in only 14 of 33 events, and he earned less than $30,000.

Throughout the 1960's, Aaron built a nagging reputation for runnerup finishes, but he ruined that image by beating Sam Snead in an 13-hole playoff for the Canadian Open title. The Canadian was not an official tour event that year, but Tommy always will regard it as a national championship.

If there were any critics remaining after that victory, Aaron erased them by winning the Atlanta Classic in 1970, beating back the challenges of only the finest, including Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, Tom Weiskopf and Jack Nicklaus, all pressuring within three strokes down the stretch.

Before turning pro in 1960, Aaron dominated amateur golf in Georgia and much of the South, winning the Georgia and Southeastern Amateur twice each and the Georgia Open three times.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Although Brian (Buddy) Allin had another successful year, it could have been even better if it were not for a nagging case of the flu.

Buddy won again as he captured the Pleasant Valley Classic in Sutton, Mass., by one stroke and seriously challenged in several others. His year was divided into three parts. He played well early in the year, but caught the flu during the Florida swing. Then he finished strong from mid-summer through early September.

"After I caught the flu," he said, "it wasn't until the Greater Milwaukee Open in early July that I got my strength back. During that time, I was having trouble walking 18 holes."

Buddy led through three rounds of the Bob Hope Desert Classic and finally finished third. He also led through two rounds at the B. C. Open, where he started with his best competitive round, an eight-under par 63.

Buddy played in 25 tournaments and earned money in 17. He missed the cut five times and had to withdraw from four more, all due to illness. He had seven top 10 finishes and compiled a stroke average of 71.8. He had 18 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

The year 1975, Brian (Buddy) Allin's fifth full campaign on Tour, was steady competitively but certainly not satisfying for a man who had won three times in the previous two years. He did not put together the type of stunning performance of which he had proved he was capable, and his earnings dropped well below half that in 1974.

A product of the Pacific Northwest, Allin played his college golf at Brigham Young along with Johnny Miller and Mike Reasor, then spent 16 months in Vietnam as an artillery officer and earned four decorations. He came to the Tour through the 1970 Qualifying School with absolutely no fanfare.

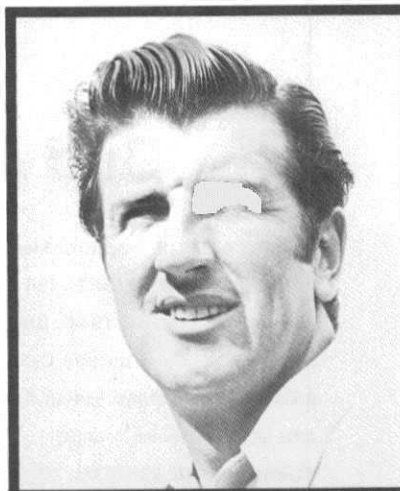

Allin won as a rookie, sinking a 20-foot birdie putt from the fringe of the first playoff green to defeat Rod Funseth and Dave Eichelberger in the 1971 Greater Greensboro Open. Slightly built and quiet, he caused little commotion for almost another two years, when he won the 1973 Florida Citrus Open at 23-under, one of the finest scoring performances in Tour history.

In 1974 he won twice more, again in the first half of the year. He surprised even himself in the Doral-Eastern Open. "It was an unexpected pleasure," Allin said. "I was just trying to hang in there and make a good check. There were just too many good players up there ahead of me."

Two months later he won by four shots in the Byron Nelson Classic in Dallas, following a course-record 63 in the third round, which led to a tournament-record 269 total.

As in 1974, Allin missed only four cuts in 1975, this time in 29 events, but he finished in the top 10 in only five events.

1976 AT A GLANCE

All year, George Archer kept telling everyone that his game was "getting better, getting better," yet there was nothing to indicate it was except for a fourth-place finish at the Quad Cities Open.

"My hand is getting stronger," he insisted, referring to his left hand that became nearly powerless as the result of a torn tendon in his left wrist that required surgery in the spring of 1975.

Going into the Sahara Invitational, the 42nd tournament on the schedule, George had won $8,062 for 147th place. Remember, $4,700 of that came at Quad Cities.

On the Sahara-Nevada Country Club course, though, George put together his Archer game of old with rounds of 67, 66, 69 and 69 to win by two strokes over Dave Hill and Don January. "I really didn't expect to win this year," he said, "but I knew my game was getting good enough to win next year."

He followed the victory with a tie for 17th in the San Antonio-Texas Open, tie for 12th in the Southern Open, and ties for fifth in the Pensacola Open and the Disney World Team Play event.

George earned $43,483 in official money. He played in 32 tournaments, collected money in 12, missed the cut 16 times and withdrew from three others. He had four top 10 finishes and had a stroke average of 72.9.

PRIOR YEARS

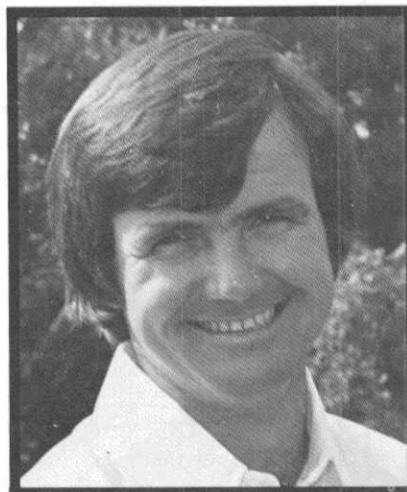

Since joining the tour 13 years ago, George Archer's yearly earnings in official tour purses suffered two startling plunges. He recovered from the first one in 1970 by cashing almost $150,000 in checks each of the next two years, but 1973 began a three-year slide which resulted in less than $10,000 earned in 1975, the low point in his career.

Most of his difficulties in 1975 can be attributed to physical ailments. He left the Tour for more than three months after the '75 Masters, for an operation on his wrist, and didn't return until the Pleasant Valley Classic in late July. He wound up the year making money in only seven of 21 appearances.

One of the tallest men to play the game professionally, and possessor of a legendary putting stroke, Archer began playing golf at age 12 around his native San Francisco, and by the time he turned pro 13 years later he had compiled an enviable amateur record. In 1963 alone he won the Trans-Mississippi Amateur, the Northern California Open and the San Francisco City Championship, reached the semifinals of the U.S. Amateur and was low amateur for the third straight year in the Lucky International.

Two years later he won the Lucky International as a professional, the first of 11 victories on the PGA Tour through 1972. His most productive earnings year was 1968, when he topped $150,000 and won three tour events, but nothing, in all likelihood, will surpass his achievements of the following year. He won the Crosby National Pro-Am and his only major championship, the 1969 Masters, when he won by a stroke from Billy Casper, George Knudson and Tom Weiskopf.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Each year has been a little better for Wally Armstrong and he seems to be getting closer to the elusive first victory. As an example, he missed the cut 17 times in 34 events in 1975, but reduced that figure drastically last year, missing only seven times in 35 tournaments.

His brush with victory came in the Houston Open where he either held the lead by himself or shared it through the first three rounds. Because of rain problems, the final 36 holes were played on Sunday, and Wally was deadlocked with George Burns at the 54-hole break.

The best he could muster in the afternoon was an even-par 72 and that dropped him into a tie for third with Burns, as Lee Elder slipped in with a 69 and the victory.

Wally had a strong finish, and in his final 11 events, he was eighth or better four times. His best round of the year was a 64 recorded at the Sahara Invitational where he finished tied for sixth.

Wally entered 35 tournaments, missed the cut in seven. He had seven top 10 finishes, won $58,125 for 47th place and compiled a stroke average of 71.8 and had 29 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Wally Armstrong crashed into the top 60 money list at the end of his second full year on the PGA Tour, when in 1975 he earned money in exactly half of the 34 events he entered. Included were five finishes in the top 10, the best a second at Pensacola when back-to-back 66s left him two shots back of winner Jerry McGee.

Armstrong started golf at age 12 on a nine-hole course outside Indianapolis. His game progressed markedly in high school and he won his state scholastic title in 1963. Then he accepted a scholarship to the University of Florida, where he captained the Gators golf team in 1967.

After turning pro in 1970, Armstrong twice failed to qualify for the PGA Tour. But success in mini-tour events convinced him that he would someday make it to the big circuit, and in the fall of 1973 he earned his card.

His rookie year, 1974, was divided into two distinct segments. In the first five months, Armstrong made only one major cut and earned $262.66 at Los Angeles. But for the remainder of the year he collected more than $30,000 and finished the schedule very strongly, tying for second at Las Vegas and for third in the San Antonio-Texas Open.

"Part of it was just getting adjusted to the Tour," Wally says, "and part of it was the teamwork that developed with my younger brother, Tom. He was my caddie from the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic (late February 1974) until the Atlanta Classic in 1975."

1976 AT A GLANCE

Butch Baird only managed three top 10 finishes for the year, but he certainly picked them at the right time.

His first was a tie for seventh in the Tournament Players Championship. A final-round 67 gave him a tie for fourth in the United States Open in Atlanta, just three strokes behind winner Jerry Pate. He saved his best for October, as he won the San Antonio-Texas Open in sudden-death playoff over Miller Barber. Butch's birdie on the first extra hole did it.

His only other individual victory in 17 years on the Tour was in the 1961 Waco Turner Open in Oklahoma.

At San Antonio, Butch opened with 68-70-70, but found himself five strokes in back of Miller Barber. They were playing 36 holes on the final day because of rain problems earlier in the week. During the afternoon, Butch fashioned a seven-under par 65 that included a hole-in-one to catch Barber.

The $25,000 first-place check gave him $58,192 for the year and that is nearly $27,000 more than he has ever won in a single season.

Butch played in 29 tournaments and cashed checks in 20. He missed the cut eight times and failed to qualify once. He compiled a stroke average of 72.0

PRIOR YEARS

Butch Baird has been a member of the PGA Tour for 17 years, but for nearly half of that period, he suffered with a painful right shoulder which seriously hindered his play.

"It started along about 1966," he says, "and it stayed with me until about 1973. I played terrible in those years, and I'm not sure if it was because of the shoulder or if it was my bad swing that made the shoulder ache."

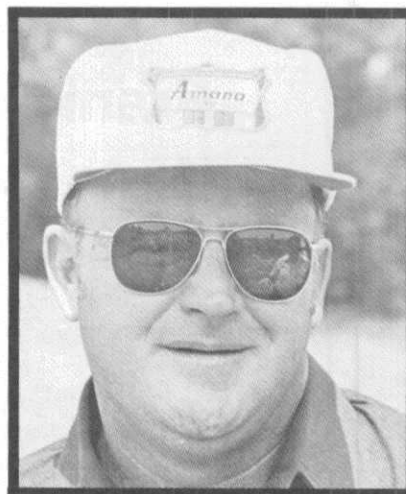

Prior to that, he had won twice, in the 1961 Waco Turner Open in Oklahoma, and paired with Gay Brewer in the 1965 National Team Play championship.

Butch started to play at age 15 through the encouragement of his father, a doctor and a one handicapper in Galveston, Tex. "One day he said to me if I'd pick up his golf balls on the practice range, he'd go out and pick up the practice balls I'd hit."

Butch discovered he enjoyed to practice and "I immediately took an interest in the game." Within a year Butch also was a one handicapper.

While at Lamar Tech, he decided he wanted to make the game his living, and during his senior year, he worked nights at an oil refinery. He earned about $1,100 that year and used the money to get him started on the Tour in 1959.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Miller Barber moved in with the select group of players who have won at least $1 million during their Tour careers. His check for $911.25 at the Tournament Players Championship made him the 10th player in history to reach the classic figure.

By year's end, he had moved into ninth place on the all-time list with $1,101,544.

He was in position to win at least two or three times during the year but couldn't find the secret for going the distance. His closest was in the San Antonio-Texas Open where he lost in sudden death to Butch Baird.

Miller had the lead after three rounds, but his closing two-under par 70 and a 65 by Baird threw them into a tie at 15-under par 273. Baird birdied the first extra hole to deprive Barber of his 10th Tour triumph.

He also was in the lead in the late stages of the Houston Open, but his steady game developed a shaky stance in the closing stages and he tied for fifth.

Miller was one of the Tour's busiest players, competing in 34 events and cashing checks in 26. He had eight top 10 finishes and a stroke average of 71.4. He had 33 rounds in the sixties with a pair of 65s as his lowest.

PRIOR YEARS

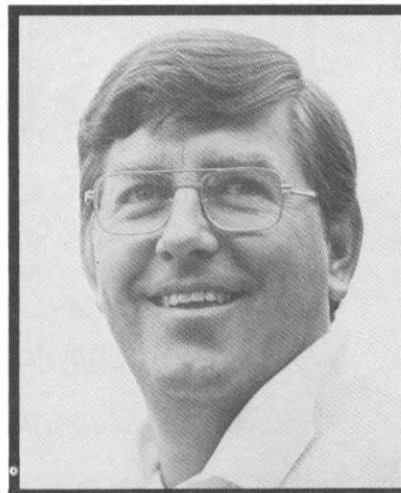

Although his streak of having won at least one tournament for eight successive years—matched by only Jack Nicklaus over the same stretch—was broken in 1975, there wasn't much wrong with Miller Barber's consistency. He made money in 26 of 33 tournaments, averaged 71½ strokes per round and easily finished among the top-60 money winners for the 13th straight year, as he approached his mid-40s.

In 1973, Barber lost playoffs to Jack Nicklaus in New Orleans and to Bert Greene in the L&M Open, but the year turned out to be the most memorable of his first 17 on Tour. In the first, half-million-dollar World Open, Barber won the record $100,000 first prize at the end of 144 holes and totaled $184,014 for the year.

Barber first tried the Tour in 1959 and continued to dabble in it while serving as a club pro at the Apawamis Club in Rye, N.Y. However, a number of club members convinced him to try the Tour fulltime and he proved their wisdom by earning a berth on the Ryder Cup teams of 1969 and 1971.

If anything rivaled the World Open victory in his logbook it was probably the 1971 Phoenix Open, when Barber shot 65-64-67-65—261, 23 under par and the lowest total on Tour since Mike Souchak's 257 in the 1955 Texas Open.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was late in the year and Frank Beard was on the practice tee. He enlisted the help of Phil Rodgers and Fred Marti as he searched for something that would work.

They suggested a slight swing change that made Frank "stand taller on the swing through the ball. I used to dip," he explained.

The result was that Frank nearly won the Pensacola Open, and might have if his putter had worked a little better. "It was a drastic turnaround for me," he said, "because I really played much better than I have in a long time. In fact, I played really good."

He finished in a tie for third, three strokes behind winner Mark Hayes, winning $7,375. During the rest of the year, he only won $5,279, to finish with $12,654 and in 131st place. Prior to Pensacola, his best finish had been a tie for 20th in the Greater Milwaukee Open.

Frank entered 36 tournaments and made money in 10. He missed 22 cuts, withdrew from two and was out of the money in two others. He compiled a stroke average of 74.1.

PRIOR YEARS

Although he dared not predict anything, Frank Beard must have hoped that his prolonged slump was ending. He held a three-shot lead over Tom Watson after three rounds of the 1975 U.S. Open at Medinah CC, outside Chicago.

The slide from leading money winner in 1969 had been gradual at first, then alarming as in 1972 he made only about half as much as the previous year. In 1973 he improved slightly, thanks largely to a $23,200 check for losing a four-way playoff in the $300,000 World Open, but 1974 found him sliding again, and into 1975.

The final day at Medinah in mid-June 1975 was a long one for Beard. He shot 78 and tied for third, only a stroke back of the playoff between Lou Graham and John Mahaffey. He had only one other top-10 finish all that year, a tie for ninth at Quad Cities, and earned money in only a third of the 36 tournaments he entered.

Beard won 11 events in his first nine on the Tour, not counting the brief appearance in 1962. Twice he won the Tournament of Champions, and in five straight years beginning in 1967 he earned more than $100,000.

1976 AT A GLANCE

One day a fellow competitor described the quiet-and-unassuming Don Bies by saying, "You don't realize he is in the field until you see him collecting a big check on Sunday."

Don did that on several occasions this past year as he enjoyed his most rewarding financial year, earning nearly $22,000 more than he ever has.

He cashed three big checks when he finished second by himself in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open and the Byron Nelson Classic. He also had a strong third-place finish in the Memorial Tournament.

He birdied five of his last 10 at San Diego to finish one stroke in back of J.C. Snead. Mark Hayes was a wire-to-wire winner in the Byron Nelson, but Don stayed close every day and finished two back.

Don played in 22 tournaments and earned money in 19. He had four top 10 finishes and compiled a stroke average of 71.6. He had 19 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Victory came late in his 15th year on Tour for Don Bies, a quiet man from the Pacific Northwest with an easy golf swing. "Now I've done it. I've won and I'll have this for the rest of my life," he said after winning the 1975 Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open.

He shot four superb rounds of 65, 66, 67 and 69 for his 267 total, 17 under for 72 holes at Wethersfield CC, then defeated Hubert Green on the second hole of a playoff with an eight-foot birdie putt.

Although he first played the Tour in 1961, Bies had been devoting full effort to it only since 1968. For more than a decade after he turned pro in 1957, Bies was involved heavily in club work and he ventured out on Tour only occasionally. Two incidents in 1968 changed his career.

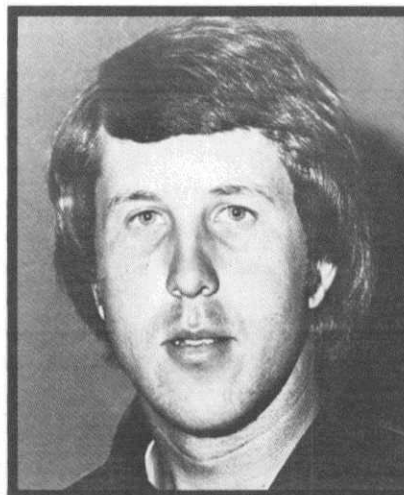

First, the Seattle Golf Club where he worked closed for several months for renovations and he decided to spend the free time on Tour. Next he finished fifth in the U.S. Open in Rochester and earned more than $30,000 in only 15 tournaments, cracking the top 60 money list.

"My wife and I talked it over later in the year," Bies said. "We felt that since I had the exemption for all of 1969, I should try it."

He played well enough to keep his exemption twice more in a five-year period, and his consistency made it necessary for him to qualify for only one tournament in all that time. In 1974 his earnings climbed over the $70,000 level, largely as a result of a runnerup finish to Johnny Miller in the Westchester Classic, where his check for $28,500 was easily the biggest of his career to that time.

Bies finished in the top 10 in three tournaments in 1974, and he had the same number of high finishes in 1975 when, in addition to winning at Hartford, he tied for sixth at Philadelphia and for ninth in the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1973 Runner-up Florida State Amateur. 1973 All-South Eastern Conference.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Woody Blackburn saved his best for last, and it earned him an exemption for all of 1977. He teamed with Bill Kratzert and they won the Walt Disney World National Team Play championship in a sudden-death playoff over veterans Gay Brewer and Bobby Nichols.

Woody and Bill joined the PGA Tour in June when they earned their playing privileges in the Tour's Qualifying School at North Myrtle Beach. Woody was the co-medalist. His first start was the Greater Milwaukee Open and he failed to survive the 36-hole cut.

Up until the Disney World event, the final one on the schedule, Woody had earned only $1,859 in official money, with his best performance being a tie for 27 in the Quad Cities Open.

The week of Disney World, though, he told his partner that "I have this funny feeling. I think we are going to win."

Kratzert couldn't believe what he was hearing, but when they tied for the first-round lead with a 63, both thought maybe it was possible. They added a second-day 68 for a 131 and trailed by three. A third-day 63 put them at 22-under par 194 and again tied for the lead with Jerry McGee and Allen Miller. Their final-round 66 put them in the playoff and they won it on Kratzert's birdie at the third extra hole.

Woody entered 16 events, made money in six, missed the cut six times and did not qualify for four others. He compiled a stroke average of 73.4.

PRIOR YEARS

It always has been a tough fight for Woody Blackburn to find his place in the game of golf, but his determination and his faith in his ability have always pulled him through.

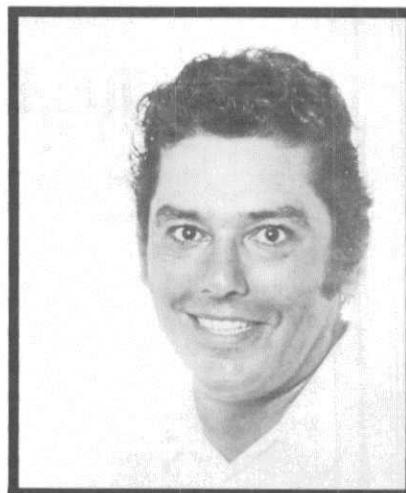

For example, during his four years at the University of Florida, he was only able to give his best performances during his sophomore and senior years. A bad back sidelined him one year and a case of mononucleosis hindered him another. As it was, he was the third man on the strong team headed by Andy Bean and Gary Koch.

He had his heart set on playing on the PGA Tour, but he tried three times before he made it in June of 1976.

Tour veteran Dan Sikes has played a key role in Woody's career. "He has been very helpful," he says. "Our family belonged to the Brentwood Country Club in Jacksonville, and Dan would be there a lot when he was home from the Tour. Once in a while I'd caddy for him or shag balls for him. And, Dan was very instrumental in my going to the University of Florida. I can't say enough about his help."

Woody started to play the game when he was nine years old. As a youngster he played all sports, but in high school decided to concentrate on golf.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1973 Ryder Cup Team. 1965 Rookie of Year. 1965 Mexican Open.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Homero Blancas says he has been on a "two-year vacation," but he would like nothing better than to find an ending to it. His earnings dipped to $21,621 and that is the lowest they have been during his 12 years on Tour.

Part of the problem has been his putting and his driving has not been as steady as he'd like. However, he adds, "Ever since I had an operation on my knee after the 1974 season, I've been in a slump. I created some bad habits and I haven't been able to shake them."

Homero's best effort came in the Greater Milwaukee Open as he tied for fifth. He was alone in second place after two rounds, but a closing 73 cost him dearly. His only other top 10 finish was a tie for eighth in the Byron Nelson Classic.

Homero played in 33 tournaments and missed the cut 13 times. He compiled a stroke average of 72.8.

PRIOR YEARS

For the first time since he joined the PGA Tour in 1965, Homero Blancas was not among the top 60 money winners at the end of 1975. He earned a check in 16 of 33 tournaments and twice finished in the top 10—in the Quad Cities and at Hartford—but his official total purses of slightly more than $22,000 left him in 97th place and with fewer dollars than in his rookie year.

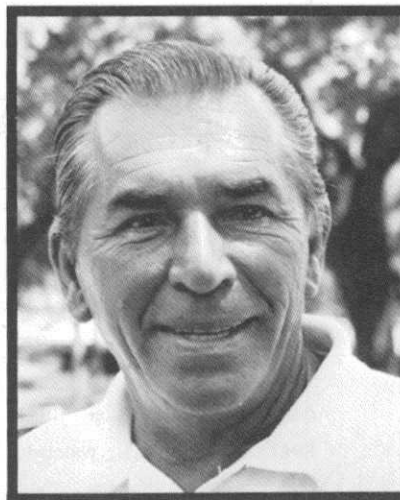

That rookie year, in which he placed 38th on the money ladder, was highlighted by victory in the Mexican Open. Although it didn't count in his PGA statistics, the triumph was a signal that Blancas should be a contender on the American tour.

He won at Seattle the following year, the first of four tour victories. The year 1970 was probably his finest, because not only did he top $100,000 in official earnings, but he beat Lee Trevino and Gene Littler by a stroke each to win the Colonial National.

He topped $90,000 in both 1972 and 1973 after winning Phoenix and the Monsanto Open, in that order. While defending at Phoenix in 1973, Blancas shot 31-30-61, which stood up as low round of that year. Also in 1973 he won a place on the Ryder Cup team.

As an amateur Blancas attracted considerable attention before earning his degree at the University of Houston. Twice he was picked as an All-America and he scored a 55 on the 5,002-yard Premier course in Longview, Texas.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was a difficult year, physically, for Julius Boros. A variety of ailments kept him from reaching a milestone in the game, becoming one of the $1 million-dollar winners.

He only needs $3,148 to reach the coveted mark. He had planned on making it in 1976, but collected checks in only four tournaments. His best finish was a tie for 31st in the Doral-Eastern Open and he earned $1,160.

He only had one round in the sixties and that came on the tough Colonial Country Club course in Fort Worth at the National Invitation Tournament. He had a third-round 66.

During the summer schedule, he tried to play in seven tournaments, but missed the cut in six, all due to problems with his hip and back.

He plans to keep playing as long as he is able. When asked about retiring, he said with a grin, "Retire to what? I already play golf and fish for a living."

Julius entered 16 tournaments and missed the cut in nine. He was forced to withdraw from another.

PRIOR YEARS

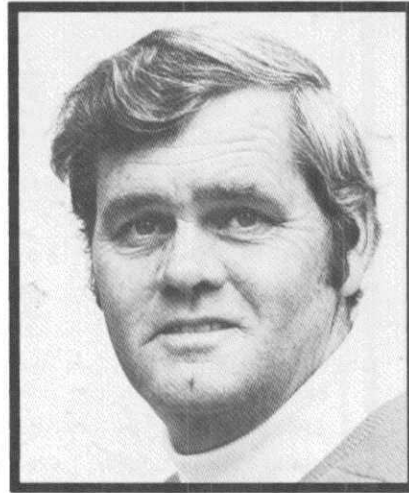

It was in July, 1975, that Julius Boros had occasion to congratulate 51-year-old Art Wall on his victory at Milwaukee two weeks earlier. "You're bringing all us old guys back out, Art," Boros said. "In fact, I think I passed Ky Laffoon on the way here."

It was another two weeks after that when Julius, himself 55, came in for a measure of back-slapping, although he lost to Gene Littler on the first hole of a playoff in the Westchester Classic. In extreme heat at Westchester, Julius paced himself as always to remarkable rounds of 70, 66, 70, 65 for a 271 total, 17 under par, then bogeyed the first extra hole after flying the green with his approach.

One of the all-time gallery favorites, Boros turned his back on a career as an accountant in Connecticut at age 30 and headed out on the Tour in 1950. Two years later he won the U.S. Open at Northwood in Dallas and 11 years after that he won the same championship at The Country Club, Brookline.

His third major championship came in the 1968 PGA Championship in San Antonio, when he outlasted Palmer down to the wire to win in the regulation distance. Weeks later he won his 18th Tour event at Westchester. He has since won the PGA Senior championship.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was a satisfying year in many ways for the hard-working Gay Brewer, but it had its disappointments, too. The saddest moments were saved for the year's closing event, the Walt Disney World National Team Play Championship.

Gay was with his longtime close friend, Bobby Nichols. They had a one-stroke lead with one to play, but Bobby hit his tee shot deep into the woods on the left and Gay went on to bogey the hole, missing the winning putt from six feet. In the playoff against Woody Blackburn and Bill Kratzert, they lost to a birdie on the third extra hole, but Gay missed again from in close with the putt that would have kept the playoff alive.

On the positive side, Gay played consistently, earning checks in four figures in 15 tournaments. It helped to give him $40,655 for the year and 68th place on the money list. Counting his Disney earnings, which are listed as unofficial, he totaled $56,495.

Gay played in 33 tournaments, the most he has in several years, and earned money in 26. He compiled a stroke average of 71.8 and had seven 66s.

PRIOR YEARS

As he was approaching his mid-40s and in his 20th year on the Tour, Gay Brewer came within an eyelash of winning his 12th Tour event. He was five-under at 275 at the Royal Montreal Golf Club but, after three-putting from just off the 13th green, he missed playing off with Tom Weiskopf and Jack Nicklaus by the single stroke for the 1975 Canadian Open title.

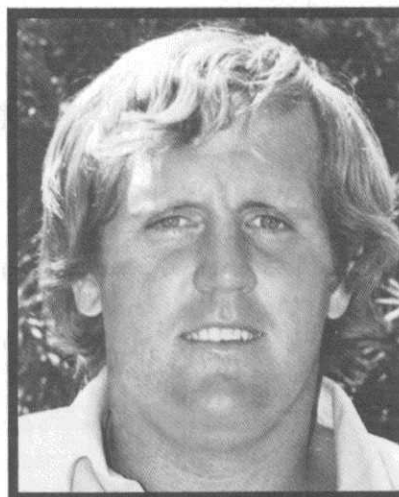

Otherwise, it was a year he would just as soon forget. His putting stroke deserted him and he earned money in only 11 of 26 events, and he totaled the least amount of money since 1963.

Each April, Brewer must go to Augusta, Ga., with mixed feelings. It was at the Masters in 1967, a year after he bogeyed the final hole to fall into a playoff with Nicklaus and Tommy Jacobs and lose the playoff, that he rallied to beat back companion Bobby Nichols and win his only major championship by a stroke.

But in 1972, on the eve of the Masters, Gay was hospitalized with bleeding ulcers which almost took his life. Also in 1972, he later won the $300,000 Taiheiyo Club Masters in Japan defeating David Graham in a playoff for the $65,000 first prize. That check was not much larger than two earlier payoffs on foreign soil, $55,000 in both 1967 and 1968 for winning the Alcan tournaments in Great Britain.

Brewer's official Tour earnings reached a high of $93,502 in 1973, although he didn't win a tournament, tying for second twice and placing in the top 10 on seven other occasions. But his 1974 earnings were less than half that as he placed in the top 10 only three times.

1976 AT A GLANCE

When George Burns joined the PGA Tour for the start of 1976, he did so with impressive credentials. He was the runner-up to Jerry Pate in the Qualifying School in the fall of 1975, and his followers knew he would do well.

George didn't disappoint them. He earned $85,732 to place 30th on the money list and among the first-year players, only Pate and Bob Gilder posted better records.

He finished third three times—in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur, the Houston Open and the World Open.

At Houston, he was in the lead late in the afternoon only to have a balky putter cost him a chance at victory. At Pinehurst for the World Open, he was tied for the lead after the first round, but had it to himself after the second and third rounds.

He said of his chances that "I've been in position to win before, but I think I started to count the money too early."

Whatever the reason at Pinehurst No. 2, George had a final 73 to finish one stroke out of the playoff between Ray Floyd and Jerry McGee.

George entered 33 tournaments and cashed checks in 21. He had eight top 10 finishes. He had two 65s, one of them giving him the first-round lead in the Canadian Open. His stroke average was 71.4.

PRIOR YEARS

When George Burns was in high school, he was too busy playing all sports to concentrate on golf. He lettered in football and basketball and then went to the University of Maryland, mainly to play football.

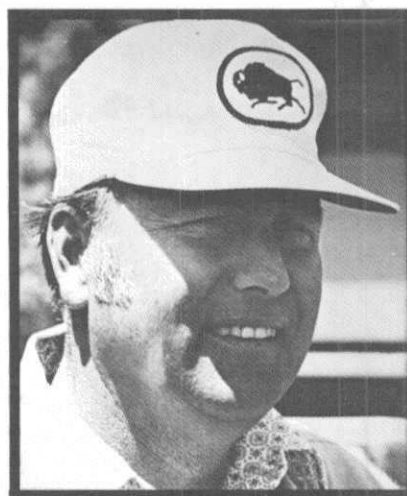

He was a defensive end at Maryland, but says, "I realized I wasn't going to go anywhere in football," so he turned to golf.

His game didn't start to develop until after he was graduated in 1972. He worked for two years in New York City in sales and promotion, but more important, he had a chance to play frequently.

Big and strong, his game developed quickly and his first important victory was in the 1973 Canadian Amateur. The next year, he won three significant tournaments and in 1975 was the low Amateur in the Masters.

Those performances led to his being named to the 1975 United States Walker Cup and World Cup Amateur teams. "Playing for my country on those teams," he says, "always will be among the biggest enjoyments I've had in sports."

1976 AT A GLANCE

You have to go all the way back to 1963 to find a year when Billy Casper won less than he did in 1976—$47,931. Never in his brilliant 22-year Tour career has he finished as low as 59th on the money list as he did last year.

It also is interesting to note that he was 58th on the list in his rookie year of 1955—with only $3,253 in earnings.

Billy's low round of the year was a 65 during the second round of the Bob Hope Desert Classic. He had a 29 on the back nine at El Dorado that day for his first sub-30 score on Tour. He went on to hold a one-stroke lead after four rounds, but a closing 74 dropped him to ninth place.

His best finish was a tie for fourth in the First NBC-New Orleans Open. He opened with a 67. His next best was an eighth place in the Masters, aided considerably by a closing 69.

Billy entered 23 tournaments and earned money in 17. He missed the cut five times and withdrew from another. His stroke average was 71.7.

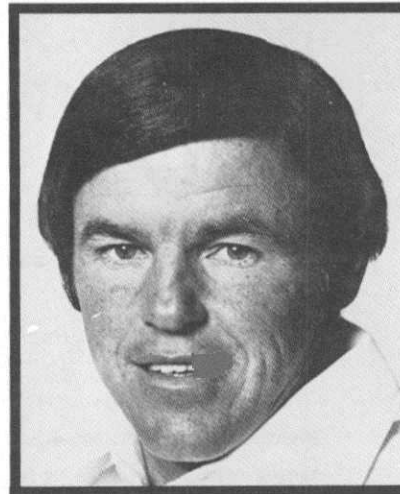

PRIOR YEARS

In his 21st year on the Tour, 1975, Billy Casper regained the $100,000 level in official earnings for eighth time in a 10-year stretch, which is quite an accomplishment for one who plays in less than two dozen events a year.

After skipping three tournaments while wife, Shirley, was presenting him with their 10th child, Casper captured his 51st Tour event in the First NBC-New Orleans Open, scoring 17-under 271.

He also forced Jack Nicklaus into a playoff at the World Open before losing on the first extra hole, he tied for fifth in the PGA Championship, grabbed sixth alone in the Masters, placed in the top 10 in four other events and qualified for his eighth Ryder Cup team. He earned money in 16 of 19 tournaments.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Jim Colbert was a happy man at the conclusion of the Southern Open in Columbus, Ga. He had just tied for fourth and pocketed a check for $4,637.

Going into the tournament, he was 60th on the money list. His showing at the Green Island Country Club was the boost he had to have to guarantee his position in the top 60.

The next week in the Pensacola Open, Jim tied for 11th to earn another $2,375 and finish the year with $52,722 for 55th place.

"It's a matter of pride," he said of the race for the top 60. "It's very important. No one on the Tour is going to hand you anything. You have to earn it yourself."

Not one to make excuses, it should be pointed out that Jim was hindered early in the summer with back problems.

Jim tied for fourth on two other occasions, in the Bob Hope Desert Classic and the First NBC-New Orleans Open. At the Hope, he closed with a brilliant 64 at Indian Wells that included an eight-under par 28 on the back nine. He had four birdies and two eagles.

Jim played in 32 tournaments, missed the cut in four, withdrew from one because of his back and finished out of the money in another. He compiled a stroke average of 71.4.

PRIOR YEARS

Although the $20,000 check didn't count in his official earnings for 1975, Jim Colbert won the last event on the '75 schedule, the Walt Disney World National Team Play Championship, partnered with Dean Refram, to extend his string of victory years to four. And his $50,111, although barely half of his 1974 earnings, placed him among the top 60 money winners for the seventh year in a row.

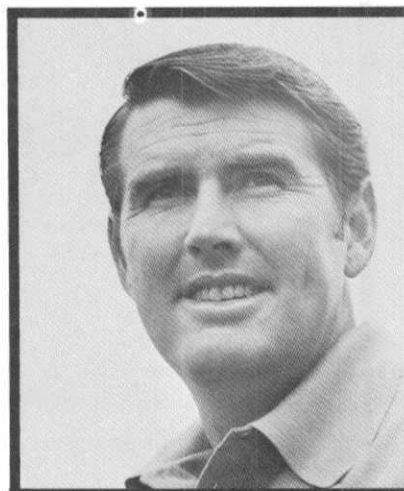

Colbert joined the Tour two years after earning a degree in political science at Kansas State, which he had entered with a football scholarship. Although he had been an All-State football star, he also had won the Kansas State Junior golf championship at age 11, and golf was to be his career.

He placed second in the 1964 NCAA championship and, in his second year as a touring pro, he cracked the top-60 list of money winners. He slipped out of the select group in 1968, but the following year he won the Monsanto Open in Pensacola.

In 1972, Colbert won the Greater Milwaukee Open and closed with a 65 to finish second to Jack Nicklaus in the Westchester Classic, earning $53,350 in those two events alone.

Colbert's best earnings year was easily 1974 when, a week after finishing fifth in the U.S. Open at Winged Foot, he entered the final round of the American Golf Classic trailing Forrest Fezler by three shots. A closing 70 at Firestone landed him in a four-way playoff, which he won on the second hole for a $34,000 payoff.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Charles Coody always has been known for his consistent play, nearly always in the money and collecting healthy checks. He followed that pattern in 1976, winning $85,587. Only twice before during his 14-year career has he won more in a single season.

His best finish was a tie for third in the Western Open, but he also tied for fourth in the Hawaiian Open and the Kemper Open. He tied for fifth in the Masters Tournament.

One of his strongest showings came in the PGA Championship at Congressional Country Club in Washington. A third-round 67 in the rain-plagued event gave him a two-stroke lead, but he fell to a 77 the final afternoon to tie for eighth.

Charles played in 30 tournaments and missed the cut in four. He had 25 rounds in the sixties as he compiled a stroke average of 71.5.

PRIOR YEARS

Charles Coody's second most profitable year, among his first 13 on the Tour, began slowly when he missed the cut in three of his first four efforts in 1975. Following the West Coast swing, the deliberate Texan tied for ninth at Inverrary and placed fourth in Orlando, and he was back in the groove.

A closing 65 on the difficult Harbour Town Links left him in third place in the Heritage Classic, a position he also won later at Atlanta. Although he again failed to win a tournament in 1975, Coody cashed checks in 21 of 28 events and easily stayed among the top 60 for the 11th year in succession.

Coody joined the Tour in 1963 after an enviable amateur career. He won 30 titles in his native Texas, including the State high school championship and various baubles while attending TCU. During a three-year hitch in the Air Force he qualified for the 1960 and '61 U.S. Open. After reaching the semifinals of the 1962 U.S. Amateur he was invited to play in his first Masters the following Spring.

The Masters provided Coody with perhaps his greatest moments in golf. He led the 1969 Masters by a stroke with three holes remaining but, after deciding to play defensively, he bogeyed in and finished fifth.

Two years later, Coody closed with birdie-birdie-par-par for 279 and captured the major championship which had eluded him in 1969. That victory got him into the World Series of Golf in September, 1971, which he won.

He was winless on Tour for the next four years, but in 1973 he did win twice in Great Britain, the Wills Open in England and the John Player Classic in Turnberry, Scotland.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1973 and 1975 Vardon Trophy winner. 1956 Australian Open.

1976 AT A GLANCE

After eight straight years of winning at least $100,000, Bruce Crampton only collected $50,094 to finish 58th on the 1976 money list.

His most serious challenges came in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open and the Tournament of Champions, which also is played in the San Diego area at LaCosta. He tied for third in both. A tie for seventh in the Bing Crosby was his only other top 10 finish.

He found it difficult to concentrate as deeply as he has in the past and that was the cause of most of his playing problems. His final event of the year was the PGA Championship in mid-August, so he skipped the last 12 tournaments.

Bruce played in 25 events, missed the cut in four and withdrew from another, even though he had made the cut. His stroke average was 72.0 with 18 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

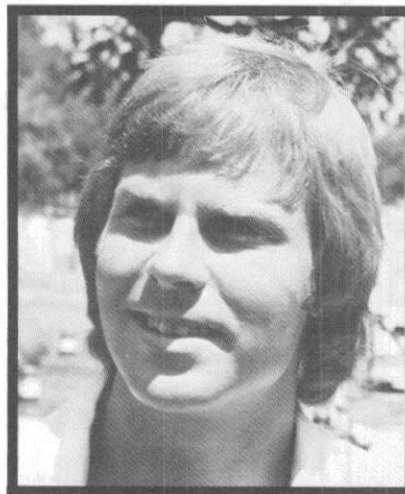

As he passed his 40th birthday in 1975 and completed his 19th year on Tour, Bruce Crampton enjoyed one of his finest campaigns. He won his 15th Tour event, he averaged 70.6 strokes per round to win the Vardon Trophy for the second time in three years, he was second in the PGA Championship to Jack Nicklaus—also for the second time in three years—and he earned more than $100,000 for the eighth year in succession.

He achieved all this despite missing six weeks out of the rich early summer schedule because of a fracture of the ribs. But before Crampton had to withdraw from the Kemper Open he won the Houston Open at 15-under-par 273, encountering only five bogeys in the 72 holes.

That same tournament was his first on the U.S. Tour way back in 1957, when he came here from Australia four years after turning pro.

Easily his greatest year was 1973, when he won four tournaments, was second in five others, earned over $270,000 to trail only Nicklaus in official purses, won the Vardon Trophy and became the fifth member of the Tour's million-dollar club for official earnings.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Ben Crenshaw's followers had been waiting for a year such as 1976. It was the year Ben became one of the game's brightest stars. He won three times, finished second three times, was in the top 10 14 times and collected $257,759 for the runner-up position in the money chase.

Ben's first triumph was in the Bing Crosby as he came from three strokes in back of Jack Nicklaus to win by two. The next week, he came from three back again, this time overtaking Hale Irwin, to win by four.

His other triumph came in September when he edged Andy North to win the Ohio Kings Island Open near Cincinnati. His seconds came in the Masters, Pleasant Valley Classic and Westchester Classic.

His final bid for victory came in the Southern Open. He was one stroke off the third-round lead and needed a high finish to capture the money title. Instead, he had a final-round 78. With a big grin hiding the disappointment, he said, "I tried, but I'm just worn out."

Ben played in 30 tournaments, missed the cut in one and withdrew from another. He had 35 rounds in the sixties and compiled a stroke average of 71.0. His low round was a 65 in Hawaii.

PRIOR YEARS

The startling fact concerning Ben Crenshaw's first three years on Tour was that his first "year" included only nine events at the end of the 1973 schedule, yet it was his most productive of the three.

In his first appearance after winning his Approved Tournament Player's card, Ben won the San Antonio-Texas Open. Then he finished second in the $500,000, 144-hole World Open in Pinehurst and wound up with more than $76,000 in checks for those nine events.

Although he failed to win again during the following two years, Crenshaw placed slightly higher on the money ladder in both 1974 and 1975.

In 1974 he started quickly with a second place at Tucson, finished sixth at San Diego, tied for second at New Orleans and placed in the top 10 on three other occasions, in 26 events. In 1975, among 29 tournaments, he was third at Orlando and tied for third in the U.S. Open and the Pleasant Valley Classic as the high spots.

Ben finished only a stroke out of the playoff for the U.S. Open championship at Medinah, after his two iron tee shot on the 71st hole splashed into the water and caused a double-bogey five.

Crenshaw came to the Tour with a list of amateur achievements almost too long to list. Aside from winning three straight NCAA titles while at the University of Texas, sharing it in 1972 with fellow Longhorn Tom Kite, Ben averaged 69.9 strokes for 42 competitive rounds in 1973 and won the Western and Sunnehanna Amateurs that year. Also as an amateur, he tied for third in the 1972 Heritage Classic and for sixth in the 1973 Houston Open, and he played impressively in both the U.S. Open and Masters.

Ben won the 1973 Tour Qualifying School by 12 strokes, scoring 18 under par for 144 holes split between Perdido Bay in Pensacola and the Dunes Golf and Beach Club in Myrtle Beach.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was a most unusual year for Bruce Devlin, as he never was in contention for a title. He did cut down on his schedule and played in 22 tournaments.

His best finish was a tie for 10th in the Houston Open and his next was a tie for 19th in the Masters. Most of his play was centered on the first half of the year and he did develop a certain amount of consistency. After the U.S. Open in June, he only played eight times, and missed the cut in five of those events.

He joined the telecast team for NBC, and served as one of the analysts, following a specific group. Bruce played in 22 tournaments and missed the cut nine times. He compiled a stroke average of 73.1.

PRIOR YEARS

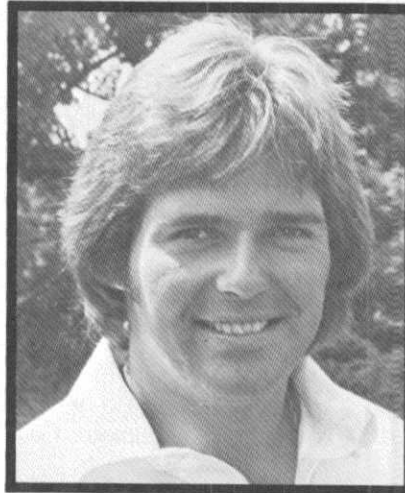

Two years after joining the PGA Tour following the 1962 Masters, Bruce Devlin spent some time on the practice tee with Jack Nicklaus preceding the St. Petersburg Open. Whatever it was the stringbean Australian gained from Nicklaus that day, he put it to immediate use by winning the tournament.

Devlin won nine times in his first 14 years on Tour, the most productive of which was 1972. Although heavily involved with partner Bob Von Hagge in course design, he won the 1972 Houston Open and the U.S.I. Classic, lost a playoff to countryman David Graham at Cleveland, was fifth in the Masters and finished in the top 10 in three other events.

After earning almost $120,000 and placing eighth on the money list in 1972, Devlin declined steadily in performance the next three years. He placed in the top 10 only twice in both 1974 and 1975, earning less than $30,000 officially in the latter year when his performance was the worst since he suffered leg problems in 1967.

Bruce played in 24 tournaments in 1975 and made money in only 16. His highest finish was a tie for fifth at Orlando.

1976 AT A GLANCE

When Terry Diehl was good in 1976 he usually was very good, indeed. Such was the case at the IVB-Bicentennial Open in Philadelphia, when he tied Tom Kite, only to lose on the fifth extra hole of their playoff.

He also had an excellent week at the B.C. Open in Endicott, N.Y., as he finished with rounds of 69 and 67 to tie for third. He had a tie for eighth in the Kemper Open and his closing 64 gave him a tie for ninth in the Southern Open.

Terry earned $55,553 for his efforts to finish 50th on the money list. He earned $22,800 of that at Philadelphia. Against Kite in the playoff, Terry missed the green with a seven iron on the fifth extra hole but it was his misfortune to have the ball come to rest on "hard-pan" making it nearly impossible for him to get the ball close to save par.

His pitch ran 25-feet past the cup and he two putted for a bogey.

Terry played in 32 tournaments, missed the cut in 12, failed to qualify in five and withdrew from another. He compiled a stroke average of 72.2.

PRIOR YEARS

Terry Diehl never will experience anything in golf to equal his triumph in the 1974 San Antonio-Texas Open.

It was the final individual event of the year and Terry had only won $1,900. He faced the loss of his playing card on the Tour. "I was so frustrated and depressed that I felt like skipping the tournament," he said. It was his rookie year, and had failed to qualify 17 times while finishing only once better than 54th.

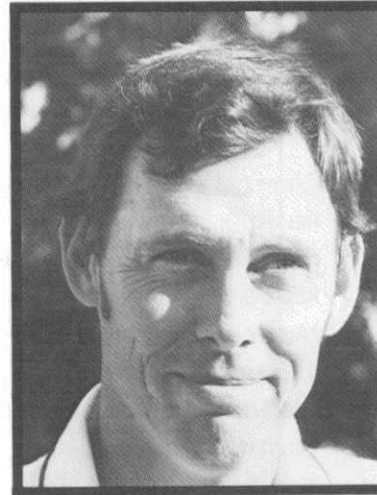

He qualified that week, though, with a 73, and then posted scores of 68, 65, 65 and 71 for a 19-under 269 to collect $25,000. It was the second lowest score of the year.

Terry's earnings dropped slightly in 1975 but his overall play was steadier and he was pleased with that aspect of his game.

He started in golf at age 12 and, by the time he was 16, his game was good enough for his father to tell him, "If I were you, I'd start hitting a lot of golf balls and forget about some of the other sports." He became one of New York State's better amateurs, winning six State or city junior tournaments and in 1969, won the State Amateur championship. He attended the University of Georgia as a pre-med student, and in 1969, tied for second in the NCAA championship.

Terry turned professional in 1972 and applied for the PGA Tour Qualifying School in 1973. He obtained his card in the fall school of that year.

1976 AT A GLANCE

When Dale Douglass left the Pensacola Open after missing the 36-hole cut, he was shaking his head, wondering what was in store for him.

He started 1976 reasonably well, winning nearly $14,000 through the first 11 tournaments. He had just tied for ninth in the Greater Jacksonville Open and the outlook for the year seemed bright.

He played in 24 more tournaments, though, and only finished six, earning a little over $3,000 in that stretch. In his last nine starts, he was unable to finish any of them, missing the cut in eight.

Dale put together two good tournaments early in the year on the swing along the West Coast, as he tied for 15th in the Bob Hope Desert Classic, thanks to a final-round 65; and a tie for 12th in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open, closing with a 68.

He played in 35 tournaments and missed the cut 22 times. His stroke average was 73.3.

PRIOR YEARS

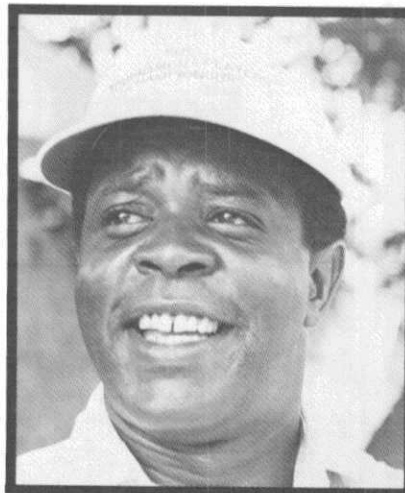

Dale Douglass recovered from a disastrous earnings performance in 1973 by nudging into the top 60 the following year, but in 1975 slipped back out of the charmed circle to 68th place despite an encouraging start on the schedule.

Douglass placed in the top 10 in three straight events in February—at Hawaii, San Diego and Los Angeles—but he never again reached that level in 1975, although earning money in 24 of 31 tournaments.

A native of Wewoka, Okla., Douglass polished his game at the University of Colorado and turned pro a year after graduating in 1959. The backing of a group of Denver businessmen led him to try the Tour in 1963, and three years later he squeezed into the top 60. He fell out in 1967, barely, but followed with four straight years on the exemption list, while winning three tournaments.

Quiet with a wry sense of humor, Douglass says he differs from Mr. Average Guy only because of the two "s's" at the end of his last name.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Lee Elder reached two significant goals in 1976. He won again, capturing the Houston Open, and he passed the $100,000 mark in earnings for the year.

The victory in the rain-interrupted Houston tournament came as a mild surprise. Because of an earlier rainout, it was necessary to play the final two rounds on Sunday. Lee was six strokes in back of the leader at that point.

He put a five-under par 67 on the board in the morning and moved to within one stroke of the lead at the lunch break. While the leaders were going off the first tee in the afternoon, Lee was off the tenth, and he completed his final round with a 69 for a 10-under par 278.

He wanted to catch a flight home, but was persuaded to stay for the finish, "just in case." He waited in the clubhouse for about an hour-and-a-half as the leaders fired and fell back. His margin finally was by one stroke over Forrest Fezler.

Lee reached the coveted $100,000 mark in his last tournament, the Pensacola Open where he finished second to Mark Hayes, winning $14,250 and giving him $113,263 for the year and 21st place on the money list.

Lee entered 27 tournaments, missed the cut five times and withdrew once. He had seven top 10 finishes. He had 27 rounds in the sixties as he compiled a stroke average of 71.1.

PRIOR YEARS

What he had envisioned as his most rewarding year on the Tour actually turned sour for Lee Elder in 1975. Victory in the 1974 Monsanto Open qualified him for an invitation to the Masters, but his becoming the first black ever to play in the Augusta, Ga., event made Elder a target for incessant interviews and other distractions which doubtless affected his peace and concentration.

Not only did Elder fail to make the cut in the 1975 Masters, scoring 72-78—150, but he wound up the year in 81st position on the money list with only three top-10 finishes, marking only the second time in his eight years on Tour that he missed the top 60 money list.

Elder qualified for the Tour in the Fall of 1967 and in his rookie year he served notice that he would be a factor for years to come. He tied Jack Nicklaus and Frank Beard at the end of the American Golf Classic and, after Beard dropped out on the first extra hole, he took Nicklaus to the fifth hole before losing the playoff to a birdie.

His earnings climbed in 1969, but in 1970 he finished 93rd on the money ladder. Elder followed that with four straight years among the top 60 earners.

At Pensacola in 1974, Elder made good. He beat Peter Oosterhuis with an 18-foot birdie putt to win the fourth playoff hole of the Monsanto.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Forrest Fezler was off to a slow start, but by the time the Tour moved into the month of May, he had his game in high gear. He only had won about $6,000 through the first four months of the year and then posted a pair of second-place finishes in May at the Houston Open and the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

A final-round 67 gave him the runner-up spot in Houston, just a stroke in back of Lee Elder. It was a 74 in the third round that hurt his chances there.

Gibby Gilbert was in control in Memphis, but Forrest used strong middle rounds of 69 and 67 to gain a tie for second, four strokes off the winning pace.

Those were his only top 10 finishes, but he finished the year with a flurry, making his final seven cuts and gaining a tie for 11th in the World Open after a 66 first round; and a tie for 13th in the Ohio Kings Island Open with a 67-69 finish.

Forrest played in 31 tournaments and earned $59,793, good for 44th place. He missed eight cuts and was forced to withdraw from another. His stroke average was 72.2 and he had 19 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Two years after winning the California Amateur, Northern California Amateur and California Junior College championships—all in 1969—Forrest Fezler qualified to play the Tour in the Fall 1971 school, and two years later he was established.

Fezler passed the $100,000 barrier in 1973, but he hadn't yet won a tournament. The game's super stars were denying him victory.

In 1973 he was second to Lee Trevino at Inverrary, second to Tom Weiskopf in Canada and second to Gary Player in the Southern. The following year produced more of the same when he was runner-up to Hale Irwin in the 1974 U.S. Open and the following week tied for second in the American Golf Classic, dropping out of a four-way playoff on the first extra hole.

Fezler came to Columbus, Ga., in the fall of 1974 with a record of five seconds and three close thirds. But in the Southern Open he hung a closing 65 on the scoreboard and finally won by a stroke. "Winning, not the money, was the big thing. I had to get over that image of finishing second," he said.

The year 1975 began encouragingly when Fezler was in the top 10 four times in his first nine appearances. But, chiefly because of a wrist injury, they were to be his best showings the entire year.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1969 and 1975 Ryder Cup team. 1960 National Jaycees Champion. Elected Player Director on Policy Board in fall of 1975.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Ray Floyd had a brilliant year in 1976. He won twice and was in position to win on several other occasions as he established his position as one of the premier players on the Tour.

His performance in the Masters at the Augusta National Golf Club was one of the most memorable in the history of the tournament. He had rounds of 65-66-70-70 for a 17-under par 271. That equaled the lowest total ever posted at Augusta, and he also won by eight strokes.

His final event was the World Open at Pinehurst, and he won in a sudden-death playoff over Jerry McGee, with a birdie on the first extra hole.

He tied for second in the PGA Championship, just one stroke in back of the winner. He was third in the Byron Nelson Classic. He was tied for the lead after three rounds of the American Golf Classic, but a final-round 76 was costly. A closing 65 in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open gave him a tie for fifth.

Ray started the year by missing the cut at the NBC-Tucson Open, but his wife, Maria, was expecting, so he was anxious to get home, anyway. A son, Robert Loran, was born January 23, and Raymond did not return to the Tour until the Tournament Players Championship, the eighth event on the schedule.

He played in 23 tournaments, had nine top 10 finishes and missed the cut only twice. He compiled a stroke average of 70.8 with 23 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

A native of Ft. Bragg, N.C., and son of an Army man who now is co-owner of the Cypress Lakes Club in Fayetteville, Raymond Floyd was exposed to golf at an early age but almost chose baseball for a career. After winning the National Jaycees Junior in 1960, his mind was made up.

He turned pro the following year, joined the Tour in 1963 and won the St. Petersburg Open as a rookie. He has placed out of the top 60 money winners only twice since, in 1972 and 1973, but he recovered smartly by earning more than $100,000 in each of the next two years.

In 1974, Floyd finished in the top 10 on eight occasions and missed the cut only twice. Although 1975 was slightly less lucrative in dollars, it contained one ingredient that 1974 lacked: victory. He won his sixth Tour event, the Kemper Open by beating out Gary Player and John Mahaffey by three strokes, and also tied for second at Orlando while earning money in 20 of 27 appearances.

When asked about his resurgence, Floyd replied, "I've just begun to like to play golf. Some of this comes from maturity, but I've been applying myself and working hard. The game's enjoyable for me."

BEST 1976 FINISHES: T-7—Andy Williams San Diego Open. T-8—Memorial Tournament.

1976 AT A GLANCE

The final round proved costly to Rod Funseth through most of 1976. One exception was the Andy Williams-San Diego Open as he finished 69-67 to tie for seventh, his best.

His only other top 10 finish was a tie for eighth in the Memorial Tournament. He was close to the lead most of the way, but a closing 77 put him four strokes out of the playoff.

There were other examples, such as a last-round 75 in the U.S. Open to tie for 11th and a closing 74 at Tucson to finish tied for 13th.

Although Rod dropped out of the top 60 only the second time in the last eight years, he retains his exempt status because of his career earnings of $486,495. He pocketed $32,800 for 73d place in 1976.

Rod played in 29 tournaments and missed the cut in seven. His stroke average was 72.0 with a third-round 66 at Tucson his lowest mark.

PRIOR YEARS

In 1975, Rod Funseth recovered from a hand injury—which had forced him in 1974 to his lowest placing on the money-winning ladder in a dozen years—by jumping 40 places back into the top-60 list. Rod made the cut in 20 of 26 events in 1975, placing fourth at San Diego and tying for fourth in the Byron Nelson for his best finishes.

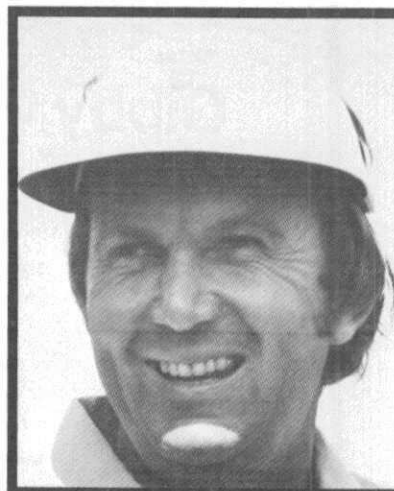

Funseth turned pro in 1956 and came on the Tour five years later after working as an assistant pro at various clubs. It was another four years before he cracked the top-60 list, a position he was to maintain nine times in an 11-year stretch.

He began that stretch principally because of victory in the 1965 Phoenix Open. He tied for third in the 1965 and '66 Canadian Opens, was second in the 1967 "500" Festival in Indianapolis and third in the 1968 Phoenix Open.

In 1971 he lost a three-way playoff with Dave Eichelberger and Buddy Allin at Greensboro and added two third-place finishes toward his best year in purses to that time. He finished in the top 10 four times in 1972, and the following year he captured his second Tour victory.

Funseth began 1973 by winning at Los Angeles and wound up the year with almost $90,000. But in 1974, troubled by the hand injury, a tie for third in the Crosby was to be his lone top 10 finish, and he plunged to 89th on the money list.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1954 National Jaycee winner. 1967 and 1975 Ryder Cup.

1976 AT A GLANCE

The way Al Geiberger seems to be improving with age, it is difficult to imagine what he might do in 1977. He recorded his finest year in 1976, winning $194,821 for fifth place on the money list, won two tournaments and challenged in several others.

His first victory was in the Greater Greensboro Open and his middle rounds of 65-65 made the difference. He won again in the Western Open on the difficult Butler National course. His total of four-over par 288 was the highest of the year.

The week before the Western, Al finished with a 69 in the United States Open to tie for second, two strokes behind Jerry Pate. He also tied for second in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open with a closing 64.

It seems likely that Al will become the 13th player to win more than $1 million on the Tour. His earnings now are at $989,327.

Al played in 26 tournaments and missed the cut in four. He had 10 top 10 finishes. His stroke average was 70.9, a half-stroke better than it was in 1975. He had 28 rounds in the sixties with the 64 at Hartford and another at Memphis his best.

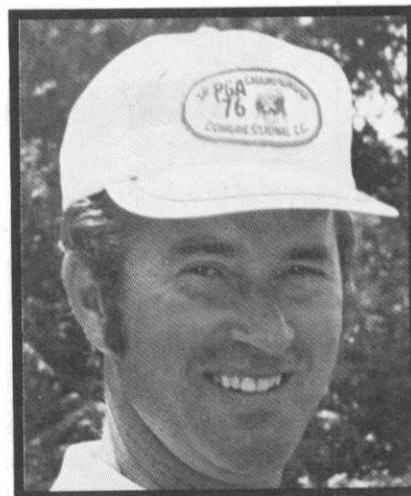

PRIOR YEARS

After winning the 1966 PGA Championship, and gaining lifetime exemption to play the Tour, Al Geiberger seemed to be resting on his oars through the next eight years. A succession of personal and physical problems, the latter sending him home to California for long periods, went practically unmentioned.

However, slightly more than eight years after his PGA triumph, Geiberger broke the long victory drought in 1974 when he won the Sahara Invitational by three strokes. He wound up with easily his greatest money-winning year since he joined the Tour in 1960 out of the University of Southern California.

The year 1975 proved that Geiberger was not content to win only occasionally. He won two of the Tour's most important events, the Tournament of Champions and the Tournament Players Championship, and almost doubled his earnings to more than $175,000. He scored only three bogeys in the T of C at Fort Worth, the last coming on the 72nd hole and dropping him into a tie with Gary Player, whom he defeated on the first hole of the playoff with a nine-foot birdie putt.

BEST 1976 FINISHES: 1—Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic. T-2—Kaiser International Open. T-3—Sea Pines Heritage. T-4—NBC New Orleans Open. T-7—Greater Milwaukee Open.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Gibby Gilbert says that when he won the 1970 Houston Champions International title, "I didn't consider myself a good player, but I believe I have become a good one in the last couple of years."

His record for 1976 tends to bear that out, as he won the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic by four strokes with a 15-under par score of 273. It was a third-round 66 that triggered the action.

He far surpassed his best previous year as he won $97,476 for 25th place. He tied for second in the Kaiser International Open with the help of an opening 66 and a third-round 65; and tied for third in the Heritage Classic.

Gibby started the year as the first-round leader in the NBC Tucson Open, posting a 66, but a final-round 77 was costly. There were other cases where strong finishes made the difference, such as the 68-69 at the Greater Milwaukee Open for a tie for seventh.

Gibby played in 31 tournaments, missed the cut three times and withdrew three times. He had five top 10 finishes. His stroke average was 71.6 with 23 rounds in the sixties. He had a low of 65 and two 66s.

PRIOR YEARS

Gibby Gilbert was not favored with a first name at birth—C.L. Gilbert Jr., constituting his full handle—but he began to make a name for himself in golf when he took up the game at age 13 in his native Chattanooga. In 1962 he quit the University of Chattanooga, married and two years later became an assistant pro in Hollywood, Fla.

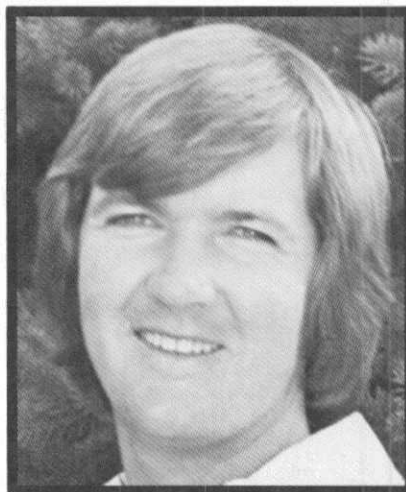

Gilbert earned his card in the 1967 Qualifying School when he finished second to Bobby Cole. He struggled for two years before victory in the 1970 Houston Champions helped him place solidly among the top 60 money earners that year. In 1971 he recorded six straight birdies in the Westchester Classic and wound up the year again over the $60,000 level. But he slipped badly in 1972 and by the following spring he was on the verge of giving up the Tour when his play improved remarkably.

Beginning with the American Golf Classic in June of 1973, Gilbert made the cut in 13 straight events, and once more he finished a year with more than $60,000. A highlight of 1973 was a course-record 62 at the famed Pinehurst No. 2 during the World Open. It shattered the previous record by three strokes, but Tom Watson matched it a week later during the 144-hole tournament.

The year 1974 was better still as he earned almost $70,000 and almost won his second tournament, the Heritage Classic, where he started 71-71-68 but wound up four back of Johnny Miller in second place.

In 1975 Gilbert played steadily again, if not quite as effectively, as he recorded seven top-10 finishes and earned money in 25 of 34 appearances.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1974 New Zealand Open; 1973, won Western Athletic Conference title.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Bob Gilder turned in one of the great performances by a first-year player. He won $101,262 and is only the fourth rookie in the history of the Tour to pass the century mark.

Bob opened the year by missing the cut in the NBC-Tucson Open, but the next week in the Phoenix Open, he outdueled Lee Trevino and Roger Maltbie to win the title. He had rounds of 68-67-66-67—268 and a two-stroke margin over Maltbie.

During the third round, he was paired with Maltbie and Trevino and he gave them credit for helping to keep him calm. "Lee's good for a young player. He made me feel right at home and controlled the crowd."

Bob went on to prove that the victory was not a once-in-a-lifetime situation. He played well for most of the year. He had five top 10 finishes, one being a second place in the B.C. Open. He bogeyed the final hole there, otherwise he would have been in a playoff with Bob Wynn.

It was a tie for fourth in the American Golf Classic on the North course at Firestone that put Bob over the $100,000 figure. Strangely, he played in five more individual events and survived the cut only in the Pensacola Open, where he tied for 44.

Bob entered 33 tournaments and missed the cut in 10. He compiled a stroke average of 72.6. He had 23 rounds in the sixties with a 65 at the B.C. Open his lowest.

PRIOR YEARS

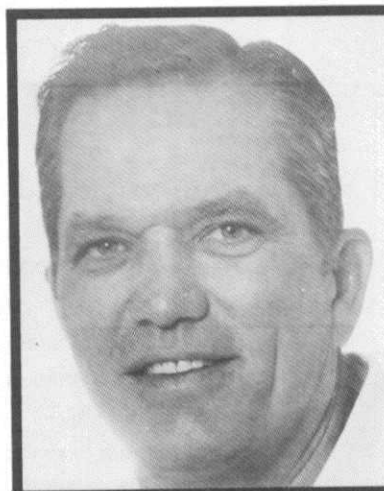

After graduating from Arizona State University in 1973 and turning pro the same year, Bob Gilder failed in three straight attempts to earn his card in the Tour Qualifying Schools, before he succeeded in November, 1975, at Walt Disney World.

After his first failure in the school, Gilder played in pro tournaments wherever he could, including a swing in Europe where, by his own admission, he played poorly.

"So, in 1974, I jumped down to New Zealand," he relates. "I played well in the National Open down there and ended tied with Bob Charles and Jack Newton after 72 holes. I won the playoff on the third extra hole, and that really gave my confidence a boost."

The following spring, Gilder missed qualifying for the Tour for the third time, but in November at Lake Buena Vista, Fla., he shot 71-72-72-69 for the first four rounds, and 73-74 for the last two rounds left him tied for eighth among 25 qualifiers.

BEST 1976 FINISH: T-32—Greater Greensboro Open.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1963 Ryder Cup team.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Bob Goalby only made 13 appearances on the Tour in 1976 as he devoted much of his time to his duties at The Springs, a plush new country club in Palm Springs, Calif.

He plans to be out more often in 1977, though, and his career earnings of $632,107 guarantee him an exemption for the year.

Because of his infrequent appearances, it was difficult for him to hone his game to the competitive sharpness it once knew. His best finish was a tie for 32d in the Greater Greensboro Open. He collected checks in six of the 13 tournaments for a total of $2,650.

PRIOR YEARS

Bob Goalby stands as one of the fiercest competitors the Tour has ever known. During his 19 years on the Tour, he has won 11 times.

His first victory was in the 1958 Greater Greensboro Open, his first full year. His last was the 1971 Bahamas Open. The biggest triumph came in the 1968 Masters Tournament when he posted four rounds in the 60s for an 11-under par 277, that stands as the sixth lowest winning score in the history of the famed event.

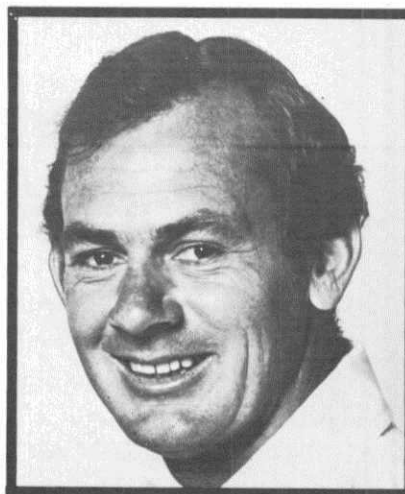

He still shares an all-time Tour record of eight straight birdies. His came in the 1961 St. Petersburg Open, en route to his fourth Tour victory. The mark was tied in 1976 by Fuzzy Zoeller at the Quad Cities Open.

For a period starting with 1958, he failed to make the top 60 for exemption only once. His best year, position-wise, was 1962 when he won twice and placed fifth.

As an example of his competitiveness, his last three victories—1969 Robinson Fall Classic, the 1970 Heritage Classic and 1971 Bahamas Open, came near the end of the year. He knew what he had to do to make the year successful, and he did it.

Bob earned 11 varsity letters in athletics at Belleville (Ill.) High School. He turned down several major league baseball offers to accept a football scholarship to the University of Illinois. However, golf was his first choice, so he left college after a year in order to devote his time to it.

1976 AT A GLANCE

David Graham opened the year with a tie for fifth in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am and that should have served as the indication that he was going to have a big year.

He has had a habit of starting slowly and playing better towards the end of the year, but he was firing birdies right from the start and never seemed to stop.

He won two tournaments on the U.S. Tour, the Westchester Classic and the American Golf Classic, and compiled a total of $176,174 to finish eighth on the money list. He also won twice overseas.

At Westchester, he was tied for the first-day lead at eight-under par 63 and never was headed after that to win by three strokes. In the American Golf Classic on the North course at Akron Firestone, he had four rounds in the 60s to win by four strokes.

David had nine top 10 finishes, but his two victories gave him a place in the World Series of Golf, and he finished fourth on the South course at Firestone. He also tied for fourth in the PGA Championship and added another fifth-place finish in the Doral-Eastern Open.

David played in 24 tournaments and missed the cut only three times. He compiled a stroke average of 71.1 with 24 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

David Graham obviously knew at a tender age the career he would seek because he turned pro in 1962 when he was 16. But his tournament career didn't begin until the late 1960s in his native Australia and on the Far East circuit.

A tournament-record 62 helped Graham tie for first in the 1969 Singapore Open but he lost the playoff. The following year he came to the U.S. and entered the 1970 Tour Qualifying School. He failed that test, but the very next week he and Bruce Devlin won the World Cup for Australia and David placed second individually in Buenos Aires.

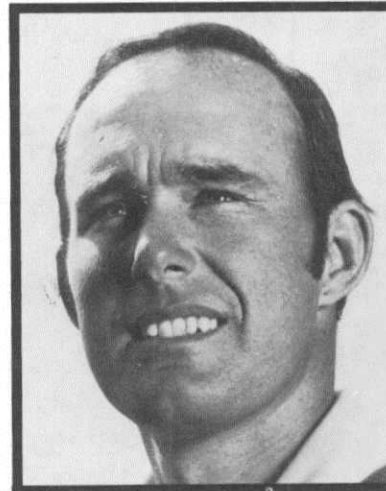

In 1971, Graham won the Caracas Open and the Japan Air Lines tournament and succeeded in the U.S. Tour School. In his rookie year of 1972, a full decade after he turned pro, Graham fulfilled all the promises of his obvious ability by winning the Cleveland Open.

Using a set of irons given him by Arnold Palmer (in exchange for an old Tommy Armour putter), Graham won at Cleveland by beating Devlin on the second playoff hole and easily made the top 60. Starting 1973, he tied for second at Los Angeles but that was to be his best of the entire year because he dropped to 71st on the money ladder.

He was fighting again in 1974 for exemption status when his fortunes changed for a two-month stretch. In the last six events in 1974 Graham won more than $30,000, his best a tie for sixth at Sahara. And in 1975 he repeated his late-season surge, although earning $10,000 less for the year.

"I don't work hard enough on my game early in the year," he explained his pattern of late-season surges.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Lou Graham reached a significant goal in 1976, even though he did not gain a victory. For the first time in his 13-year career, he earned more than $100,000.

"That always has been one of my goals," the soft-spoken Graham said, "but now that I've finally made it, it seems as if the magic number is $200,000."

Lou's best finish was in the American Golf Classic, as his final two rounds of 65-68 gave him second place behind David Graham. Three times he tied for fourth—in the Hawaiian Open, the Greater Greensboro Open and the Kemper Open.

A third-round 65 led to a fifth place finish in the Greater Jacksonville Open and he tied for sixth in the Memorial Tournament.

His best round of the year was an eight-under par 64 to tie the Colonial Country Club course record in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic. Afterwards, he laughed, "I was hitting the ball so bad on the practice tee that I was thinking of withdrawing to save myself some embarrassment."

Lou played in 29 tournaments, missed the cut in two and withdrew from two others. He compiled a stroke average of 71.2 and had 25 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

After tying for 34th place in the 1975 IVB-Philadelphia Classic—playing at times terribly, following an opening 65—Lou Graham told his wife, Patsy: "I've got no business going to the U.S. Open this week and playing a hard golf course like Medinah." Thus, Graham stunned not only the world of golf but himself as well, at Medinah CC outside Chicago.

Graham made the cut at Medinah with 74-72—146, but he was 11 shots back of Tom Watson's Open record 135. He made a big jump with a third-round 68, but he still trailed Frank Beard by four. A closing, two-over 73 left him shockingly tied with John Mahaffey for first, and he beat Mahaffey in an 18-hole playoff the next day by two strokes with par 71.

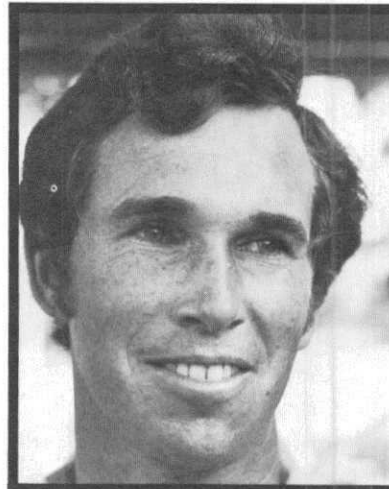

Lou began golf at age 10 in his native Nashville, Tenn., and earned a scholarship to Memphis State, where he stayed three years. "I didn't like school from the day I went into the first grade," he recalls. He enlisted in the Army and served in the President's Honor Guard, but he liked military service no better than school. "I wanted out from the day I got in."

What he wanted was a career in golf, and after discharge in 1962 he worked at two clubs near Baltimore before he found financial backing to send him on Tour in 1964.

It was three years before he won the 1967 Minnesota Classic and cracked the top 60 money list, but he had obviously found the right career. Only once in succeeding years, in 1969 when tendonitis in his left hand, and resulting surgery, limited his play, has he failed to place among the top 60.

In 1975, in addition to his U.S. Open triumph, Graham finished fourth three times and earned money in 23 of 26 appearances.

1976 AT A GLANCE

After Hubert Green missed the cut in the Florida Citrus Open, he decided he had better play in the Doral-Eastern Open. He felt he needed the work.

That was one of the smartest moves of the year. His game jelled completely at Doral and he won on the Blue Monster course by six strokes over Jack Nicklaus.

The next week, he won again, in the Greater Jacksonville Open by two strokes over Miller Barber. His putter still was working wonders the next week in the Heritage Classic on the tough Harbour Town links and he won by five strokes over Jerry McGee.

In those three events, he won $118,000, thus making it possible for him to have his best financial year on Tour. He finished with $228,031, good for fourth place.

Hubert also finished second twice, in the Tournament of Champions and in the Southern Open. He had three 68s in the latter event. His next best was a fifth place in the World Series of Golf, made possible by a brilliant 65 in the second round on the South course at Akron Firestone.

Hubert played in 27 tournaments and missed the cut only twice. He had nine top 10 finishes and compiled a stroke average of 70.7. He had 33 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

In 1975, although he didn't match his four victories of the year before—and few ever do—Hubert Green put together a four-week surge late in the summer which erased suspicions that he would wind up in a horrible slump.

After withdrawing from the PGA Championship because of the death of his father, Green lost a playoff to Don Bies on the second extra hole at Hartford, finished third the next week in the Tournament Players Championship at Fort Worth, tied for fifth in the B.C. Open and beat John Schroeder by three strokes with 68-66-66-64—264 to win the Southern Open in Columbus, Ga. The stretch netted almost $70,000.

And amid all that excitement, on the Monday after Hartford, wife Judi presented him with their first child, Hubert Myatt II, for his proudest moment of all.

Two years after graduating from Florida State, the cocky Alabaman turned pro and qualified for the PGA Tour in the fall of 1970. In his rookie year he won at Houston by beating Don January in a playoff.

Ten straight money finishes at the end of 1972 left him 58th on the money list, but he started 1973 slowly by missing the cut in four of his first six events. Then he won the Tallahassee and B.C. Opens and climbed above the $100,000 level for the first time.

If that was a tough act to follow, Hubert topped it easily by winning the Hope Desert Classic, Jacksonville, Philadelphia and joining hometown crony Mac McLendon to take the final event of 1974, the National Team Championship at Disney World.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Early in the year Mark Hayes let it be known that he had arrived. He did it in his own quiet way, by letting his shotmaking do the talking.

At year's end, he had two victories, the first in the Byron Nelson Classic where he led from wire-to-wire, and the other in the Pensacola Open, coming from off the pace with a 69-66 finish to win by two.

At the Byron Nelson in Dallas, he played the first 43 holes without a bogey.

He played exceptionally well in Florida with a fifth in the Tournament Players Championship, a tie for eighth in the Florida Citrus, a tie for Second in the Doral Eastern and a tie for 15th at Jacksonville. His final round at Jacksonville was the only one in the four tournaments that was over par. His string of 15 rounds at par or less was the best on Tour in 1976.

Mark finished with $151,699, good for 11th place. He played in 32 tournaments and missed the cut four times. He compiled a stroke average of 71.1, although, after the Byron Nelson in May, his average was 70.4. He had 31 rounds in the sixties with a pair of 65s his lowest.

PRIOR YEARS

Mark Hayes turned pro and qualified for the Tour in 1973, following an outstanding amateur record, and within two years established himself as a star. It probably didn't surprise him, because pro golf was his target from an early age.

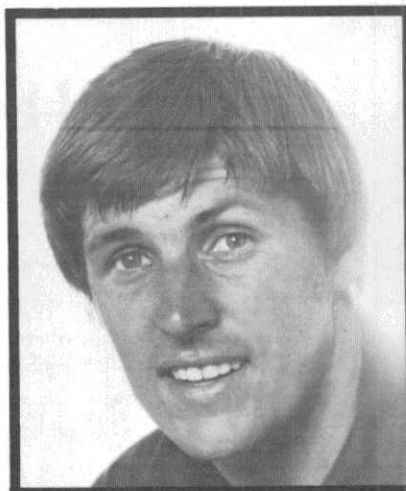

He started golf at age six under the eye of his father, a high school physical education teacher and golf coach. At 13, the family moved back to Mark's native Stillwater, Okla., and he came under the wing of Labron Harris Sr., the Oklahoma State coach and a good friend of Mark's dad.

"One of the reasons I was so dedicated," Hayes says now, "is that I was small for my age and couldn't do anything else. I practiced every day, before school and after school. I never thought of doing anything else for a living but play golf."

One of the highlights of his early career was when he defeated Tom Kite, of Austin, in the final of the Texas-Oklahoma junior championship. He entered Oklahoma State, was chosen All-America twice and was second to Gary Cowan in the 1971 U.S. Amateur. The same year he won his second Oklahoma Amateur title.

He spent two years in the Army, mostly at Fort Jackson, S.C., where he worked on the base golf course with Joe Inman, who is now a fellow tourist. In his rookie year on Tour, he tied for fourth in the Hope Desert Classic and, in 1975, Mark was third at Quad Cities among three top-10 finishes, earned money in 24 of 33 appearances and easily cracked the top 60 list for the first time.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was a frustrating year for Jerry Heard as he was hampered considerably by back problems. At one point, they became so severe that there was some question about his chances of returning to the Tour.

He missed more than three months in the spring, leaving the Tour after the Florida Citrus Open the first week in March and did not return until the Kemper Open the second week in June.

He only managed two top 10 finishes and both came early in the year, despite the pain in his back. He tied for fourth in the Bob Hope Desert Classic with a 69-67 finish, and tied for 10th in the NBC Tucson Open.

Jerry earned $28,236 to place 79th, but with career earnings of $646,558, he will retain his exemption for 1977.

Jerry entered 19 tournaments, which is eight-to-10 less than he normally plays, and missed the cut in seven of them. He missed it in four of his last five events. His stroke average was 71.8 with his best being a 66 the first day of the Canadian Open.

PRIOR YEARS

Although his official earnings on Tour slipped in 1975, by more than $60,000, Jerry Heard enjoyed a half-dozen finishes in the top 10 and still wound up 22nd on the year's final money list. One of those high finishes, however, followed a moment of doubtless terror.

In the second round of the Western Open at Butler National, in Oak Brook, Ill., Heard had a brush with a bolt of lightning and was admitted to a hospital, along with Lee Trevino and Bobby Nichols.

Jerry was discharged Saturday evening and, since the second round had been postponed both Friday and Saturday, he elected to continue play. He followed his opening 69 with 74-72-73 for a total of 288 and a tie for fourth place, remarkably enough.

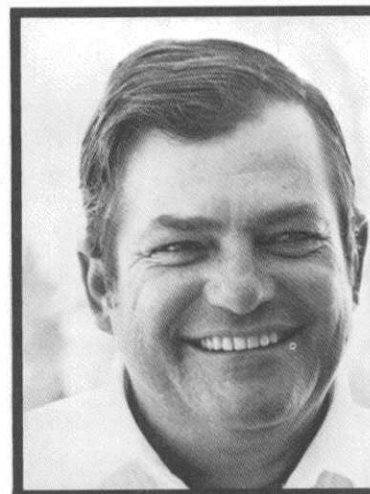

Heard began playing golf at age 11 and was scoring around par a year later, a result of daily practice on a municipal course operated by his father in California. He dropped out of Fresno State College in 1968 in order to try the Tour Qualifying School, and was graduated, but earned barely $10,000 in his first full year on Tour, 1969.

He began 1970 by earning $133 in his first five tournaments, but he married in May and his game took a startling turn upward. He recorded five top-10 finishes and cracked the top-60 exemption list.

"There's only one goal I've ever set," Heard says. "I want to win $100,000 a year. If you do that you usually have to win a tournament or two."

His record bears out that contention. In the three years in which he won tournaments, including two in 1972, he also won more than $100,000.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1957 Member of Ryder Cup team; 1961-63 Member PGA Tournament Committee; Chairman in 1962 and 1963. 1972-1974, Player Director, TPD Policy Board.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Lionel Hebert was a busy man in 1976, playing in 30 tournaments, but the cashier didn't treat him too kindly. He only won $2,380.

During his years on the Tour, he has been one of golf's finest good-will ambassadors. There are few who enjoy the game more than Lionel, and he has spent countless hours working for the betterment of the Tour.

He entered 30 events in 1976 and survived the cut only in six. His stroke average was 74.1.

PRIOR YEARS

One of the game's genuine good humor men, Lionel Hebert this year observes his 20th anniversary as a regular on the PGA Tour, although his very first appearance on the circuit came a full quarter-century ago.

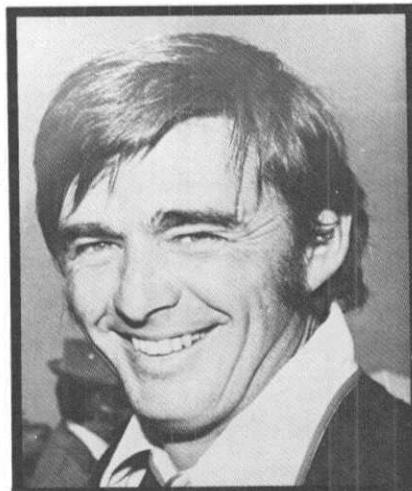

The year Lionel decided to make the Tour his full-time occupation he won the 1957 PGA Championship, defeating Dow Finsterwald in the final, 2 and 1, at Miami Valley in Dayton, Ohio. It was the last year this championship was contested at match play. Brother Jay, who is five years his senior, won the PGA three years later at Firestone in Akron.

Lionel was to win four other tour events, the last the 1966 Florida Citrus Open, but the PGA title remains his most precious victory. Not only was it a major championship which few men are fortunate to claim, but it earned him a lifetime exemption to play the Tour.

But Lionel has more than repaid the game for what it has bestowed on him by his involvement in Tour affairs. He was a member of the Tournament Committee from 1961 through 1963, serving as chairman in the final year. He was summoned to serve again on a similar body in 1972 and he became a player director of the Policy Board through 1974.

In 1975, Lionel finished in the money in seven of the 28 events he entered. Although a majority of his money finishes came late in the season, his largest checks came earlier in the year when he tied for fifth in the Houston Open and for 10th at Milwaukee.

1976 AT A GLANCE

From all standpoints, it was a very good year for Dave Hill. He gained the 13th victory of his career when he won the Greater Milwaukee Open and became the 11th player to earn at least $1 million on the Tour. He also topped the $100,000 mark for the fourth time.

Dave fired 66-67-68-69—270 for his triumph on the Tuckaway course in Milwaukee, winning by three strokes. Late in the year, he used a second-day 65 and a final-round 67 to tie for second in the Sahara Invitational in Las Vegas.

He also had two thirds, in the World Series of Golf and in the Bing Crosby. His 67 in the first round of the World Series tied him for the lead.

Dave joined the $1 million-winner class at the PGA Championship, when he tied for 22d to earn $2,064. By year's end, he had a total of $1,038,840.

Dave played in 27 individual tournaments and missed the cut only once. He also withdrew from one. He compiled a stroke average of 71.1 with 29 rounds in his sixties. His 65s at the Bing Crosby and Sahara were his lowest.

PRIOR YEARS

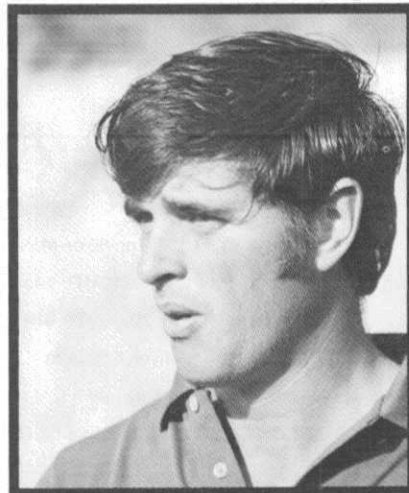

Dave Hill came out on Tour in 1959 and, except for that rookie season, has never placed out of the top 60 list. He came close in 1964 and 1965 to dropping out of the exempt category, but in 1969 he won three tournaments, finishing second to Frank Beard in official purses and winning the Vardon Trophy with a stroke average of 70.344 for 90 rounds.

Hill won more than $100,000 again in 1970, then began to cut down on his playing schedule. He limited his appearances further in 1972 but he played more efficiently, winning the Monsanto Open and placing in the top 10 in seven other events. In 1973 he won at Memphis for the fourth time and placed in the top 10 on eight other occasions, missed the cut only once and qualified for his second Ryder Cup team.

Hill underwent surgery in late 1973 for removal of cartilage in a knee which had troubled him for some time, and that decision probably contributed to his second most profitable year in 1974, when he won at Houston.

"I don't expect to win; I'm not playing well enough," Hill said on his arrival. But he did win. A year and a half later, his peers should have been forewarned when Hill said at Las Vegas: "My game is so bad it's embarrassing. I haven't hit but four good shots all week." He won his 12th Tour event that week, defeating Rik Massengale in extra holes.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Mike Hill regained his position among the top 60 money winners with a year that saw him in the lead in several tournaments.

His best finish was a tie for third in the Greater Jacksonville Open, but he led by one stroke after two rounds. He also held a one-stroke margin after two rounds of the Ohio Kings Island Open, thanks to a second-day 64.

He was tied for the second-day lead in the Greater Greensboro Open, with the help of a second-day 65; and he was tied for the first-day lead in the Florida Citrus Open.

He posted three other top 10 finishes, with ties for fifth at the Citrus and in the Westchester Classic, and a tie for 10th at Greensboro.

Mike finished the year with $58,478, good for 45th place. It was his third best money year.

Mike entered 31 tournaments and missed the cut in four. He failed to qualify once and was forced to withdraw from two others. His stroke average was 71.5 and he had 19 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Life on the PGA Tour has not been an easy one for Mike Hill, but he will not complain. Instead, he says, "I've made more money on the Tour in nine years than my dad made in his entire life."

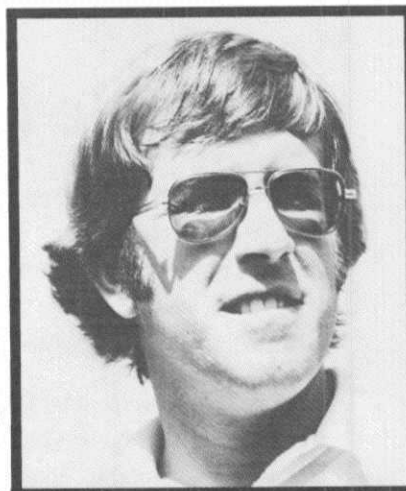

The younger brother of Dave Hill has won twice in those nine years, the 1970 Doral-Eastern Open and the 1972 San Antonio-Texas Open. In the fall of 1972, he went to San Antonio, hoping to cash a check big enough to propel him into the top 60 for a year's exemption, but he held off Lee Trevino to win it all by two strokes.

His most rewarding year financially was 1974 when he earned $76,802 to finish 28th. The year was highlighted by excellent play in the fall, as he finished second in the San Antonio-Texas Open, tied for second with brother Dave in the Sahara Invitational and was fourth in the Southern Open.

He appeared headed for his greatest year in 1975, after opening with fourth place finishes at Tucson and Phoenix. However, in April, while riding a motorbike on his farm in Jackson, Mich., he fell and the kickstand on the bike tore into his right leg, just above the knee. He was off the Tour for 12 weeks and finished the year with $41,696, good for 63d place.

Mike, one of the more persistent players on the Tour, displayed that attitude early when he tried three times to obtain his player's card and missed, but finally succeeded in 1968. He started in golf like Dave, as a caddie at the Jackson (Mich.) Country Club. After high school, he spent 42 months in the Air Force.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1969 North-South Amateur. 1969 Walker Cup team.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Joe Inman picked the perfect time and place to win his first Tour event. It was the Kemper Open at the Quail Hollow Country Club in Charlotte, N.C., and, being a North Carolinian, many of his close friends were there.

Joe started with 70 and 69 and was three strokes off the lead. A third-day 67 moved him to within one, and then he found his one-under par 71 on the last afternoon good enough to nip Tom Weiskopf and Grier Jones by one.

"I can't believe this," the excitable Inman said. "I was off to a bad start this year, mainly due to my putting. But, I could feel it getting better. I didn't seem to be motivated at the start of the year. I couldn't get my mind on it."

That was Joe's only top 10 finish, his next best being a tie for 15th in the Florida Citrus Open. With his $50,000 from the Kemper, Joe went on to total $69,892 for the year.

He entered 29 tournaments and missed the cut in 13. His stroke average was 72.6.

PRIOR YEARS

One of a long line of Wake Forest University products to make a success of the Tour, Joe Inman won the 1968 Carolinas Open, the 1969 North-South Amateur and the 1970 North Carolina Amateur before taking his bachelor of arts degree. But it was more than three years before he joined the Tour, by qualifying in the Fall 1973 School.

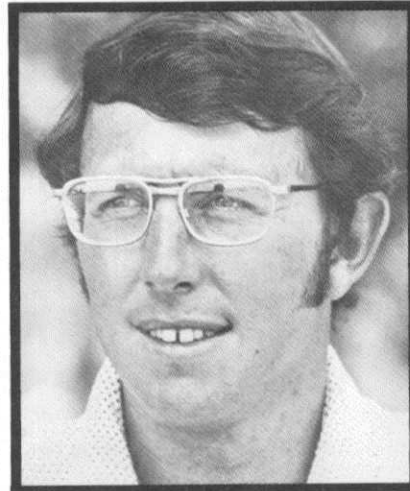

He couldn't understand the advisability of taking a week's rest occasionally. "I couldn't figure out why the players didn't compete every week," he said. "But, after a year of the Tour, and the pressure, and the problems involved with traveling all over the country, I knew."

He said this after surviving the pressure of the end of 1974 season, when he arrived in San Antonio needing a good finish to make the exemption list for all of 1975. He tied for 13th in the San Antonio-Texas Open and finished 55th in exemption points, although 61st on the money list.

Twice in 1975, the talkative Carolinian closed with 67s to wind up in third place at Houston and Las Vegas, finishing the Sahara Invitational only a stroke out of the playoff. He had two other top 10 finishes and increased his official earnings to more than $50,000. Eight times during the year he scored in the 60s in the first round but slipped into the 70s in the second.

He made money in 22 of 32 tournaments and compiled a stroke average of 71.8 in 1975.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Hale Irwin's position as one of the great players in the game is unquestioned. He owns such enviable marks of having improved his record in each of the nine years he has been on Tour, reaching a high of $252,718 last year.

His second-place finish in the World Series of Golf netted him $50,000 and established him as the 12th player in history to pass the $1 million in earnings figure.

He owns the longest no-cut streak on the Tour, going through 41 tournaments without missing it. Hale is one of the most solid performers in the game. He had 12 top 10 finishes in 1976.

Hale won twice, in the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open, coming from three strokes back to win by two over Tom Watson. Two weeks later, he was involved in the longest playoff of the year. He edged Kermit Zarley on the sixth extra hole in the Florida Citrus Open.

He was second three times—the World Series of Golf, the Hawaiian Open and the Memorial Tournament. In the latter, he lost a playoff on the fourth extra hole to Roger Maltbie.

Hale played in 21 tournaments and made the cut in them all. His stroke average was 70.6, the third best on the Tour. He had 29 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

In the six years from 1970 through 1975, the player least known to the public at the time he won the U.S. Open championship was probably Hale Irwin. This does not mean, however, that Irwin was not worthy of what many consider the game's most important title.

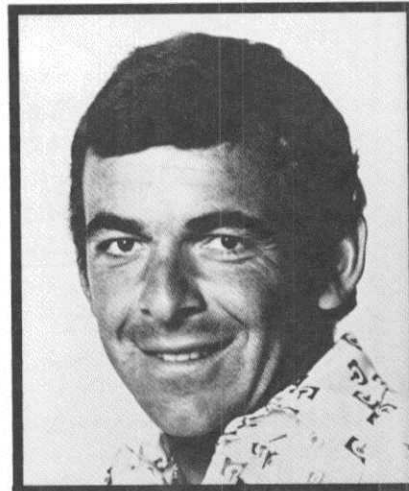

Irwin is invariably a contender, especially on the more difficult courses, as evidenced by his victories. None of his first five triumphs on the Tour was achieved on a pushover layout.

Twice he won the Heritage Classic at the Harbour Town Links, his 1974 U.S. Open title was won at Winged Foot and, in 1975, he took the Western Open at brutal Butler National and the Atlanta Classic, although at 17 under par at Atlanta CC, on a classy course.

Irwin was graduated from the University of Colorado in 1968 with a degree in marketing, an NCAA golf championship and two selections as an All-Big Eight Conference defensive back. He joined the Tour that fall, earned almost $20,000 in official purses in his rookie year and kept improving on the money ladder through 1975.

In his seventh full year on the Tour, 1975, he finished in the top 10 in 14 of 22 events, earning more than $200,000; played on his first Ryder Cup team and finished ninth in the British Open.

Credited with 17 world-wide victories. 1966-70-71-72 Member World Cup team. 1976 Kerrygold, Ireland champion.

1976 AT A GLANCE

There were times when it appeared as if Tony Jacklin was ready to return to his old form, but he simply couldn't find the secret to posting the good round when he needed it.

Early in the year, he used a final-round 67 to tie for 12th in the Bob Hope Desert Classic. The next week, four steady rounds gave him a tie for 15th in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open; then he tied for 18th in the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open.

His best finish was in the Canadian Open as he tied for seventh, but he did it with rounds of 73, 66, 71 and 68.

Tony played in 17 tournaments and missed the cut three times. He had a stroke average of 72.1 with 66s at the Canadian Open and the B.C. Open as his low rounds.

PRIOR YEARS

Certainly one of the finest players ever to come out of Great Britain, Tony Jacklin started in golf as a caddie for his father, a truck driver in Scunthorpe, Lincolnshire. His first victory of consequence was in the 1965 British Assistants Championship. Two years later he won the Dunlop Masters on home soil and the New Zealand PGA title.

When Jacklin won the 1969 British Open he became the first native Englishman to do so since Max Faulkner in 1951. When he won the U.S. Open 11 months later at Hazeltine in Chaska, Minn., he became the first Briton ever to hold both major titles at the same time, and the first since Ted Ray in 1920 to take the U.S. crown to Great Britain.

Five years after earning his player's card on the U.S. Tour in the fall of 1967, Jacklin gave up his privileges in order to support the European tour and be closer to his family. He moved his residence to the Isle of Jersey and less than three years later, in the spring of 1975, he was back on the PGA Tour.

His first event here was at Greensboro and he tied for 12th place and that was to be his highest finish in 15 events for the year.

"I know now," Jacklin said, "that I have to continue to play in the States, always, if I want to continue as a world golfer."

1976 AT A GLANCE

The incredible comeback story of Don January continued in full bloom in 1976. He did such things as win the Tournament of Champions at LaCosta, Calif.; earn $163,622, which is well over $90,000 more than he has ever won in a single season; run his two-year no-cut streak in individual tournaments to 40 and compile a brilliant 70.562 stroke average for 96 rounds. It is interesting to note that the only cut he missed in 1976 was in the final event, the Walt Disney World Team Play championship. Don and his partner, Miller Barber, had one stroke too many. Twice he tied for second, in the PGA Championship, just one stroke in back of Dave Stockton, and in the Sahara Invitational, two in back of George Archer. He also was third three times as he finished in the top 10 a total of 10 times in his 25 starts. He had 34 rounds in the sixties with 65s at San Diego and the Kaiser as his lowest.

PRIOR YEARS

For as long and as successfully Don January has played the PGA Tour, one would expect that sometime in those first two decades he would have reached the $100,000 level in official yearly earnings. But through 1975 he never came close. He explains: "Once I made about $65,000 I'd just pick up and go home. I didn't care if it was July or September or what."

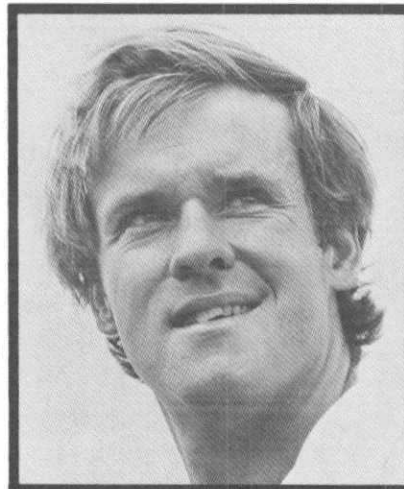

Four times in a five-year period starting in 1967—when he won the PGA Championship—the slender Texan did earn in the $60,000 range, and then in 1972 he embarked on what was to be a 2-1/2-year recess from the Tour in order to build golf courses around his hometown of Dallas. When course construction financing dried up he was left with nothing to do, so he returned to the Tour in 1975, soon after his 45th birthday.

Again, somewhat astonishingly, January made more than $60,000, but he didn't do it in July. In the next-to-last event, at San Antonio in mid-October, he defeated Larry Hinson with a four-foot putt for birdie two on the second playoff hole to win $25,000 and his 11th Tour event over the two decades.

Commenting on his startling comeback at his age, January said, "Physically, it wasn't too bad. Mentally, it was tougher than I expected." After San Antonio, he added: "I am here to stay. I shall not leave on my own. It will take my game to force me off."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1966 NCAA champion. Medalist in 1968 Tour Qualifying School. 1969 Rookie of Year.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was a big comeback year for the hard-working Grier Jones, and he gives Bob Toski a large share of the credit.

"At the end of 1975, I went to see Bob," Grier explains. "He taught me a lot about the game. I had developed some bad habits, and Bob worked to get me back to my old swing, the one that had worked for me before."

The result was $69,087 and 40th place on the money list, highlighted by five top 10 finishes.

His best effort was in the Kemper Open. After his third-round 65, he led the field by one, and he eventually finished in a tie for second, one stroke behind Joe Inman.

Just prior to the Kemper, he had three other top 10 finishes, as he tied for eighth in the Colonial National Invitation and then the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic. Two weeks later, he tied for seventh in the IVB-Bicentennial Open in Philadelphia.

Grier played in 34 tournaments. He missed the cut six times, withdrew from one and failed to qualify in another. His stroke average was 71.4 with 29 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Grier Jones would like to forget 1975. He won only $15,719 and finished 112th on the money list. Three years earlier, he had hit the high point of his career, winning two tournaments and collecting $140,177 to place fourth on the list.

He said he couldn't blame anything in particular for his decline. "A lot of it was just a bad swing," he said. He also missed 10 weeks of the year after catching pneumonia the week after the PGA Championship.

Both of Grier's victories in 1972 came after playoffs, defeating Bob Murphy in Hawaii and Dave Marad at Robinson.

He has had a history of back and hand problems, and, at one stretch in the summer of 1974, he had to withdraw from six of seven tournaments.

During his career, Grier has known considerable success. He was highly-touted when he joined the Tour after being the medalist in the 1968 Qualifying School. He had won the 1968 NCAA title for Oklahoma State, the Big Eight championship, the Oklahoma Intercollegiate and the Oklahoma Invitational titles. After earning $37,194 in his first year, he was named the Rookie-of-the-Year.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Tom Kite was trailing by three strokes when the final round of the IVB-Bicentennial Open in Philadelphia started. "There were 10 guys in front of me," he said, "and I knew I'd have to shoot 65 or 66 to win."

Mainly, he was looking for a good, solid finish. He had that, all right, a five-under par 66 for a seven-under par 277 at the Whitmarsh Valley course to tie with Terry Diehl for the No. 1 spot.

The playoff lasted five holes, and Tom was the victor with a par, as Terry missed the green and suffered a bogey. A big victory it was, though, because it was Tom's first.

He went on to win $116,180 for the year and place 20th on the list. Twice he tied for fifth, in the Masters and the Colonial National Invitation, while ties for sixth came in Memphis and the Memorial Tournament. The latter three were in succession, the weeks prior to Philadelphia.

Tom played in 28 tournaments, missed the cut once and withdrew from another. He had a stroke average of 71.1 with 23 rounds in the sixties. His low was a 65 the last day at Phoenix.

PRIOR YEARS

Tom Kite's career in golf, starting at age six when his father urged him to strike his first ball, has yielded steady progress. He won his first tournament at 11, an age-group event at the Country Club of Austin, Tex., and began to take the game seriously three years later.

In 1970, before his 21st birthday, Kite was medalist in the Western Amateur, second to Lanny Wadkins in the U.S. Amateur, second in the Southern Amateur and was chosen to the four-man U.S. team in the World Amateur Team Championship.

The following year he was chosen to the U.S. Walker Cup team and, in 1972, he shared the NCAA championship with his University of Texas schoolmate, Ben Crenshaw, before turning pro and earning his Tour card that Fall.

Although victory eluded him in his first three years as a pro—not including the 1973 Hope of Tomorrow, a second Tour event—his progress continued steadily. He was named Rookie-of-the-Year in 1973 after he missed the cut in only three of 35 events, an extremely impressive beginning, and finished 56th on the money list.

In 1974, Kite missed the cut only once, finished in the top 10 in eight tournaments and boosted his earnings 50 percent to more than $80,000. In 1975 he finished in the top 10 on nine occasions, his best a second to Pat Fitzsimons at Los Angeles.

All nine of Kite's high finishes came in the first five months of 1975, including a 10th at the Masters, but he finished the year with almost $90,000 and compiled a stroke average of 71.4.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Gary Koch wasted no time in establishing himself on the Tour. He went the distance and earned checks in his first six starts.

He saved his best performance for Tallahassee in mid-April. He was five strokes off the lead after the first and second rounds. A 67 on the third day moved him to within two of the lead. On the final afternoon, his two-under par 70 gave him an 11-under par 277 and a one-stroke margin over John Mahaffey. He had to knock in a five footer to save par at the final hole to get it.

The victory was worth $16,000 and guaranteed him an exemption from qualifying through the 1977 Tournament of Champions. At year's end, he had won $38,195 which placed him 69th on the money list.

During his fine amateur career, Gary was known as an excellent putter. His formula for playing the Tour is to "drive it in the fairway, hit it on the green and make a few putts." He said that at Tallahassee, he knew he was putting well and "If I could keep my tee-to-green game solid, I felt I could shoot a good score."

His next best finish was a tie for fourth in the San Antonio-Texas Open and then a tie for 14th in the Sahara Invitational.

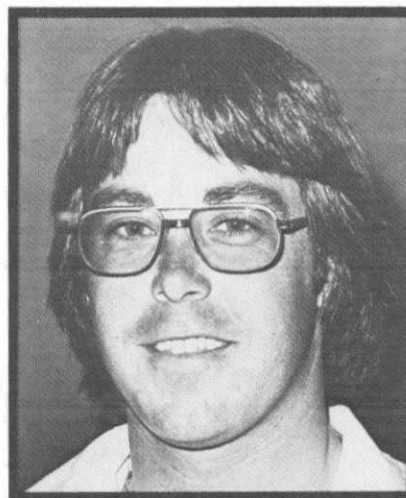

Gary played in 34 tournaments. He missed the cut 10 times and withdrew once. His stroke average was 72.3 and he had four 67s for his low rounds.

PRIOR YEARS

About a year and a half after leaving the University of Florida, Gary Koch tied for third after 108 holes at Walt Disney World in the Fall, 1975, Tour Qualifying School and came out on the big circuit with an impressive list of amateur credentials.

Koch won the 1969 Florida Open before his 17th birthday, and the following year captured the U.S. Junior championship. While at Florida he won the 1973 Trans-Mississippi Amateur and played on the first of two Walker Cup teams that same year. He also represented the United States in the 1974 World Amateur Team Championship.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1968 Indiana Amateur winner. 1969 Indiana Open winner. All-Southeastern Conference team for four years. All-America selection two years.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Bill Kratzert tried to qualify for the PGA Tour twice before he finally made it on the third try in June of 1976 at North Myrtle Beach, S.C. "I think it was good that I didn't make it the first time," he says. "I probably wasn't ready. Now, I know my game. I've done some experimenting and I know what I have to do to play well."

Play well he did, finishing in a tie for seventh in his first official start, the Greater Milwaukee Open. "That was a great confidence booster for me because I did everything consistently there," he said.

His goal was to make the top 25 in as many tournaments as he could. Those who finish that high are exempt for that particular event the following year. He did it seven times before the great day arrived at Walt Disney World in the National Team Play championship.

Paired with Woody Blackburn, they played exceptionally well, with 63-68-63-66—260 to tie veterans Gay Brewer and Bobby Nichols. On the third extra hole, Bill hit one of the great five irons of the year to within a foot of the flagstick. The ensuing birdie gave them the victory.

Bill earned $21,253 in official money—plus $20,000 for the Disney triumph. He entered 16 tournaments, missed three cuts and failed to qualify only once. His stroke average was 71.0.

PRIOR YEARS

It was a natural thing for Bill Kratzert to become a professional golfer. His father is the head pro at the Fort Wayne Country Club and has been there for more than 18 years.

"I didn't start to play until I was about 13," he says. "My dad never pushed me into it. It was just always there. It wasn't until I was 14 or 15 years old that I decided golf was my game."

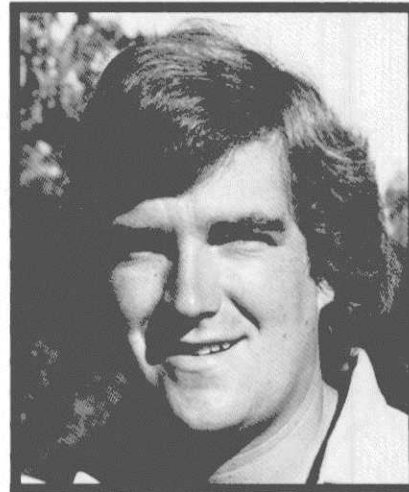

He seemed to be a natural. He won the Indiana State Amateur when he was 16 years old and the Indiana Open at 17. After his victory in the Amateur, he was invited to play in the Sunnehanna event in western Pennsylvania.

"One night I became nauseated and Allen Miller happened to be there, too. He helped me up the stairs and got a doctor for me. We became friends and he was influential in my eventually going to the University of Georgia.

He was named to the All-Southern Conference golf team all four years at Georgia and was named to the All America team his final two years.

Twice he tried to qualify for the Tour and didn't make it. After the first attempt, he said he was so frustrated he "quit" the game, went home to Fort Wayne and worked for six months as a fork-lift operator. In the spring of 1975, he accepted a job as an assistant pro at a local club and was back in the game to stay.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1971 Texas Amateur champion. 1973 second team All-America.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Bruce Lietzke opened his year with a tie for fourth in the NBC-Tucson Open. The next week, he fashioned rounds of 65 and 67 on the final two days to tie for third in the Phoenix Open.

Just as suddenly as he found success, his game turned sour, and in his next 13 events, he missed the cut five times and failed to qualify for two others.

It wasn't until mid-May that Bruce started to put it together again and in his last 19 tournaments, he only missed the cut once. In only three of the other 18 starts did he fail to win a check of at least four figures. The end result was $69,229 for the year and 39th place.

Bruce had six top 10 finishes and he had another third, in the San Antonio-Texas Open. His last-round 67 placed him two strokes out of the playoff.

The third round in the Ohio Kings Island Open and the Sahara Invitational was costly. He tied for sixth place in each event, but it was that one day that prevented him possibly from winning.

Bruce, in his first full year, entered 34 tournaments, missed the cut six times and failed to qualify twice. He compiled a stroke average of 71.6 and had 31 rounds in the sixties. His low was a 65 the first day at Westchester.

PRIOR YEARS

Late in the spring of 1973, Bruce put his golf clubs in the closet and said he was finished with the game. "I had played so much through high school and in college at the University of Houston, I was tired of it.

"I suppose that in the back of my mind, I knew I would come back, but at that point, I was tired mentally of the competition and needed the time to think about some other things."

His "retirement" only lasted six months. He was back on the course for the start of 1974, and, with a fresh new outlook, turned professional in 1974. "My goal then was to get on the Tour," he added.

He entered the Tour's Qualifying School in the fall of 1974 and missed getting his card by one stroke. He was back again in the spring of 1975 and this time he did make it.

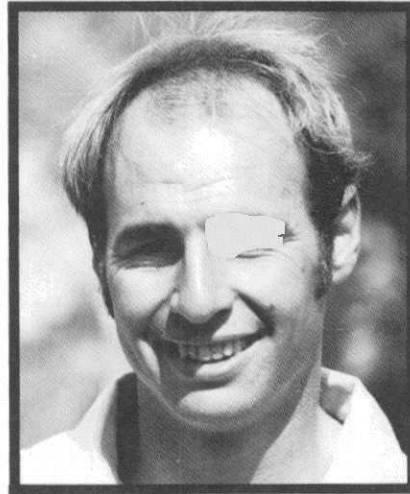

During the last half of 1975, he played very well, indeed. He was in contention in the Westchester Classic and finished fourth. He also had a tie for fourth in the San Antonio-Texas Open and finished with $30,780, good for 74th place.

"The fourth at Westchester was a big confidence booster for me," he said. "It was the turnaround that let me know I could play out here."

Bruce started in the game at age five when his brother Duane, then an assistant professional in Wichita, Kans., gave him a cut-down set of clubs. During his days at Forest Park High School in Beaumont, Tex., Bruce won the Texas State Scholastic golf title as a sophomore, and he led the team to one championship and three runner-up finishes during his four years. He went on to Houston and won several collegiate titles.

Bruce says his Dad is his biggest booster and always has been. "But, he said he would quit playing the day his little boy beat him. I did that one day when I was eight years old, and he hasn't played since."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1969, 1971 and 1972, World Cup for New Zealand. 1971 and 1976 New Zealand PGA champion. 1970 Northern Ireland Open Winner. 1970 Picadilly Medal play winner in England. 1972, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976 Garden City Classic winner in New Zealand.

1976 AT A GLANCE

John Lister says it probably was the happiest day of his life when he won the Quad Cities Open in early July on the Oakwood course in Coal Valley, Ill. He always felt he had the game to win, but after years of trying, was beginning to have his doubts.

The victory assured John of a place in the top 60 and an exemption for all of next year. It will be the first time he has enjoyed such luxury. John's first two rounds of 68-68 left him two strokes off the lead but he made a big move in the third round with a six-under par 65 to take a one-stroke lead.

His closing round of 67 was enough to hold off Fuzzy Zoeller and assure him of the $20,000 check. John collected another big check when he tied for second in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic, winning $15,466. His 69-68 finish made that one possible.

He closed with a 67 at the Pleasant Valley Classic to tie for six for his only other top 10 finish. John entered 27 tournaments, missed the cut in 10 and failed to qualify in four. He compiled a stroke average of 72.0.

PRIOR YEARS

Through his first five years on the PGA Tour, John Lister never earned $25,000 officially in any single year, and he admits now that he was beginning to doubt that he would ever succeed.

John missed his first attempt in the Tour School in 1969 but earned his card the next year and joined the Tour early in 1971. "When I first joined the Tour it was a combination of things," he says. "I was a bit overawed by everything, and then I put extra pressure on myself by thinking too much about the Monday qualifiers."

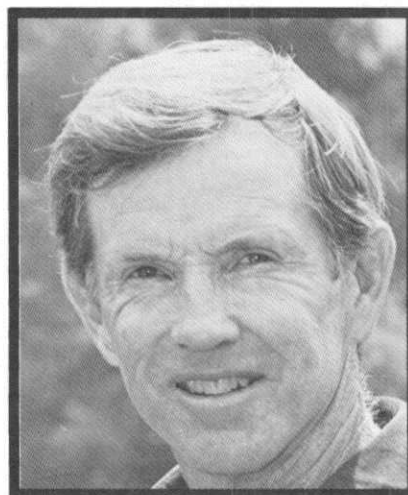

Lister started in golf when he was about 11 in his native New Zealand, after his family moved from Temuka to Timaru, across the street from a golf course. He joined a School Boys Golf Club.

"It was a great start," Lister says. "We had good coaching every Saturday, and a lot of tournaments. It was because of the Boys Club that I decided I wanted to be a professional someday."

At age 19, mainly because of the encouragement of countryman Bob Charles, Lister headed out on the world tour in 1966. "At that time, Bob gave me a lot of encouragement. He said that if he had my long iron game he'd win over $100,000 a year," John recalls.

"I was terrible with a wedge, though. Now, my long game isn't as sharp, but my short game has improved tremendously. I have more of a balanced game."

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was an erratic year for Gene Littler even though he did manage to win $60,471 and had seven top 10 finishes. He simply wasn't able to develop the season-long consistency that has been a Littler trademark for years.

Gene's best finish was a tie for fourth in the First NBC-New Orleans Open with three rounds in the sixties. His next best was in the Sahara Invitational in Las Vegas, his final event. He posted 67-68 for his last two days and tied for sixth.

He was having some back problems, but, typical of the man, he wasn't using that as an excuse. He did use a good last round for other solid finishes, such as a 66 in the Hawaiian Open for a tie for eighth and a 68 at the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open for a tie for seventh.

Gene entered 25 tournaments and missed the cut in six. He withdrew from another. His stroke average was 71.4 and he had 22 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

By now, even the most casual follower of golf must have heard that Gene Littler had cancer, but the story bears repeating.

In the spring of 1972, Littler underwent surgery for cancer of the lymph glands. He had won 24 Tour events in 18 years on the circuit, including the 1961 U.S. Open, but that glittering career appeared to be at an end.

However, Littler rejoined the Tour in October, 1972, and in July of the following summer—about 16 months after his surgery—he won the St. Louis Children's Hospital Classic.

Littler did not win a Tour event in 1974, but "Gene the Machine" obviously was back in form, because he earned more than $100,000. The next year was even more remarkable.

In early August, 1975, two weeks after his 45th birthday, Littler won his third tournament of the year, defeating Julius Boros on the first hole of a playoff in the Westchester Classic.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1967 Georgia State Open. 1972 Georgia State Amateur

1976 AT A GLANCE

The new "ironman" of the Tour has to be Lyn Lott. He entered 39 tournaments, missing only seven. This is his first experience at being exempt as he won $57,358 to finish 48th. The tournament that supplied the biggest boost was the Canadian Open as he finished third, winning $14,200. He had rounds of 68, 70, 67 and 69 for a six-under 274.

Lyn had three other top 10 finishes. A second-day 67 led to a tie for fifth in the Kaiser International Open. He had his finest U.S. Open with 71-71-70-73—285 to tie with Ben Crenshaw for eighth. A 67-69 start at Tallahassee led to a tie for ninth.

Lyn started slowly, failing to qualify in two of the first four tournaments and missing the cut in another two. He then tied for 52nd in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open and was 13th in the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open, thanks to a 69-69 start on the famed Riviera course. From that point on, he played well.

Lyn entered 39 tournaments, missed the cut in 10 and failed to qualify only those two times early in the year. He compiled a stroke average of 71.7.

PRIOR YEARS

Lyn Lott has fond memories of his start in golf. "My grandfather was semi-retired," he said, "and when I was five years old, he started to take me to the course. We went about every day until I was 12. After that, he started to take me to junior tournaments around Douglas, Ga."

When Lyn was 15 he started to play in scholastic tournaments and state amateur events. As a 17-year-old, he won the Georgia State Open. He went on to the University of Georgia, and during his years there, he had as teammates Allen Miller, Terry Diehl and Bill Kratzert who also are members of the Tour now. His senior year with the Bulldogs, he won the Georgia State Amateur.

His first attempt at qualifying for the Tour was in the fall of 1973 and he made it. His earnings totaled $16,911 in 1974. "I didn't think that was too bad for a start," he said, "because I had no idea how well I'd do."

His goal was to improve each year, and in 1975, he earned $18,522. During this time, he worked hard on his game, "but I putted awful, just awful," he said.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1970 NCAA champion.

1976 AT A GLANCE

John Mahaffey was not happy with his year, even though he did win $77,843 to finish 33rd. It was his first year in the last four that he failed to top the century mark.

For the second straight year, his biggest disappointment came in the U.S. Open, this time at the Atlanta Athletic Club course. He led by one stroke after two rounds with 70-68—138. He increased it to two strokes over Jerry Pate with a 69 in the third round.

He continued to hold his lead through much of the final round, but he finally relinquished it when he three putted the 17th from a most difficult spot. On the final hole, John suffered a bogey when he tried to reach the green from the right rough, and the ball found the water fronting the green. He finished tied for fourth.

He did have a second-place finish at Tallahassee, other fourth places at the Florida Citrus and the First NBC-New Orleans Open and fifth places at the Colonial National Invitation and Westchester Classic.

John entered 26 tournaments, missed the cut only once and was forced to withdraw from two others due to hand and arm problems late in the year. He compiled a stroke average of 71.2 and had 26 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Since winning the Sahara Invitational near the end of the 1973 schedule, John Mahaffey has gained an irritating reputation for finishing second. "I want to win," he has said, understandably enough, and he clearly has the skills to do just that.

His losing a playoff to Lou Graham for the 1975 U.S. Open championship at Medinah was the most notable runnerup finish, but there have been others, too.

In 1974, the pleasant Texan placed second, tied for second, was third alone and tied for fourth—all before the end of April—and he wound up the year with seven top-10 finishes in 24 tournaments, while missing the cut only once.

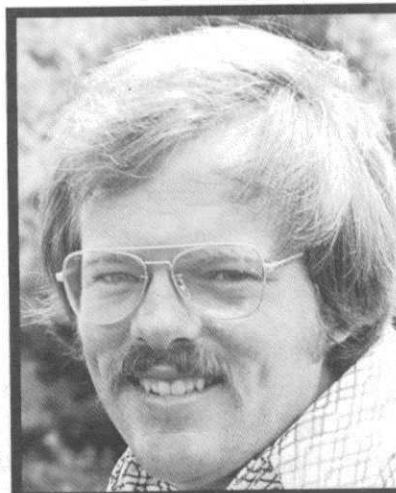

In 1975, Mahaffey earned money in 21 of 28 events, including runnerup finishes at Tucson, Memphis and in the Open, and a tie for second in the Kemper Open, plus a fourth in the Heritage Classic, among exactly 10 finishes in the top 10.

Ben Hogan was among those who recognized that Mahaffey had a future in professional golf. They played a round together in 1971 at the Houston Champions Club, where John was working for Jackie Burke and Jimmy Demaret.

"The next day he asked me to join him again," John recalls. "After that, Mr. Hogan asked me if I'd like a special invitation to play in the Colonial National in Fort Worth the next week."

Mahaffey finished 12th in that Colonial. That fall he earned his Tour players card. In his rookie year, 1972, he placed second at Memphis and earned almost $60,000 in official purses. And for the next three years he easily topped the $100,000 mark.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1972 Northern California Amateur champion. 1973 Northern California Open champion. 1974 California State Open champion.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Roger Maltbie was a proud young man that afternoon in May when he battled his way to victory in the inaugural Memorial Tournament on the demanding Muirfield Village Golf Course near Columbus, O.

He had to turn back a fierce challenge by Hale Irwin to win on the fourth extra hole of their playoff after they had tied at even-par 288. This was on the course that Jack Nicklaus had built, and Roger later commented, "I've won a couple of tournaments and quite a bit of money, but this is the first time I have beat Jack Nicklaus and I beat him on his own course."

With rounds of 71-71-70, Roger was two strokes ahead, but he nearly let it get away with a closing 76, while Irwin was carving out a 69.

Roger admits he was "lucky" on their third extra hole—the 17th on the course. His approach was to the left, hit a gallery rope stake and bounced onto the green. He one putted for par to match Hale. His birdie on the next hole ended it.

Roger finished second in the Phoenix Open after a brilliant 65-65 start. He tied for third in the Tournament Players Championship, with a third-day 65 helping considerably. He also tied for fourth in the Kemper Open and tied for ninth in the Masters.

Although Roger totaled $117,736 for the year, he only won $2,173 after the first of July. He played in 26 tournaments, missed the cut in four and withdrew from three. He compiled a stroke average of 71.9.

PRIOR YEARS

If the PGA Tour was rocked by rookie Roger Maltbie's back-to-back victories in the Quad Cities Open and Pleasant Valley Classic in mid-July, 1975, the victor himself must have been a trifle shaken, too. He left his winner's check for $40,000 in a restaurant the evening following the latter triumph in Sutton, Mass.

Maltbie got a duplicate check from the tournament sponsor and the restaurant reportedly has the original framed and hung on the wall behind the bar, and his first year on the PGA Tour was most certainly a resounding success. He became the first rookie to win consecutive events since Bob Murphy in 1968 and wound up 23rd on the money ladder for 1975.

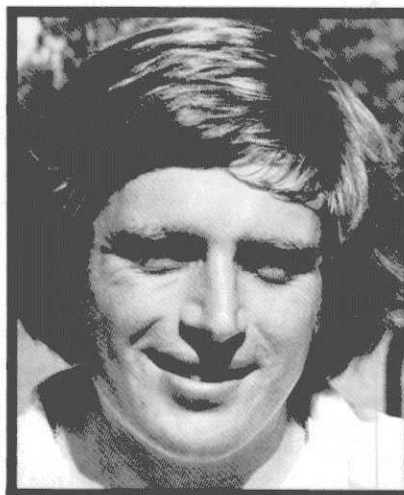

"I'm a pretty good competitor," says this low-key product of Northern California. "I'm probably a better competitor than I am talented. I work at improving my game, and as long as I play as well as I think I can, well, that's all that enters my mind."

This sort of attitude no doubt helped him come from seven shots back the final day to win the Quad Cities and from three strokes in arrears to win again at Sutton, Mass. He finished his rookie season by earning money in 17 of 29 events, missing the cut 10 times, including five of his last six tournaments in 1975.

Thoughts of seeking his fortune in pro golf probably began when Maltbie defeated Forrest Fezler in a playoff for the county high school championship, when Roger was a sophomore and Forrest a senior at James Lick High in San Jose. Maltbie won the Northern California Amateur in 1972, turned pro shortly thereafter, won the 1973 Northern California Open but failed to pass the Tour Qualifying School that Fall.

After sharpening his game in mini-tour events, Roger won the California State Open in 1974 and that Fall succeeded in the Tour School.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Just before the final round of the PGA Championship, Don Massengale gave his younger brother Rik a short lesson with the driver. "Don felt my grip was a little weak," Rik explained. "I like to hook the ball and all year I had been fighting hitting it right."

With the new advice in mind, Rik headed for the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open and proceeded to post the lowest 72-hole score of the year, an 18-under par 266 with 65, 65, 70 and 66. It was worth $42,000 as he won by two strokes.

It was an excellent year for Rik as he won $124,984 to finish 17th. While he had eight top 10 finishes, his next best was a second place in the Bob Hope Desert Classic with final rounds of 68 and 67.

He also tied for fifth in the Westchester Classic with 68-68 for his last two rounds and tied for fifth in the World Open with a closing 67.

Rik played in 31 tournaments and missed the cut in five. He compiled a stroke average of 71.3 with 24 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

The first three years Rik Massengale was on the PGA Tour he experimented with his golf swing and enjoyed only moderate progress. In his fourth year, 1974, all his swing problems descended on him at once and he suffered an alarming setback when he earned barely more than his rookie season and finished even worse on the money ladder, in 127th place.

But, in 1975, good fortune came his way at last. He won the Tallahassee Open. Then he lost the Sahara Invitational only because Dave Hill beat him in a playoff. Massengale also turned in four other solid top-10 finishes for the year and his earnings improved by more than $60,000 over 1974.

Rik Massengale is 10 years younger than brother Don, a former Tour star. "When I was about five I started to play golf just to be around him," Rik says. "He basically helped me to develop the swing, and he still helps me."

"When Don went off to Texas Christian University, I'd wait for him to get home on weekends, so we could play golf together. By the time I was in high school, Don was on the Tour. That's when I had aspirations of being on the Tour someday. Nothing else aroused me."

Rik won the 1964 and 1965 Texas State high school championships. In 1968, while at the University of Texas he won the Southwest Conference and Western Amateur titles. After turning pro he failed to pass his first attempt at the Qualifying School in 1969 but made it the next Fall.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Jerry McGee became one of the more consistent players on the Tour in 1976, playing well and challenging on several occasions.

His finest tournament was the World Open on the famed Pinehurst No. 2 course. He had rounds of 67, 70 and 71 and on the final afternoon, birdied three of his last six holes, including the 18th, for a 66 and a 10-under par 274. Moments later, Ray Floyd rolled in a 15 footer to tie. In the sudden-death playoff, Floyd again made a 15 footer for a birdie and the victory.

Jerry also finished second in the Heritage Classic with a 68 the last day on the tough Harbour Town links. He opened with a 65 in the B.C. Open and tied for third. He was third alone in the Southern Open, and teamed with Allen Miller to finish third in the Walt Disney National Team Play.

It was a splendid year that saw Jerry win $130,986 for 16th place and he now is recognized as one of the really fine players in the game. He had 12 top 10 finishes.

Jerry played in 33 tournaments, missed the cut in four and withdrew from another. He had 29 rounds in the sixties as he compiled a stroke average of 71.1.

PRIOR YEARS

In his first nine years on the Tour, Jerry McGee suffered only one serious setback on his road to continuous progress in official earnings. In 1973, the best finish he managed was a third place in the Southern Open and he slipped back to 67th place on the money list after two straight years in the top 60.

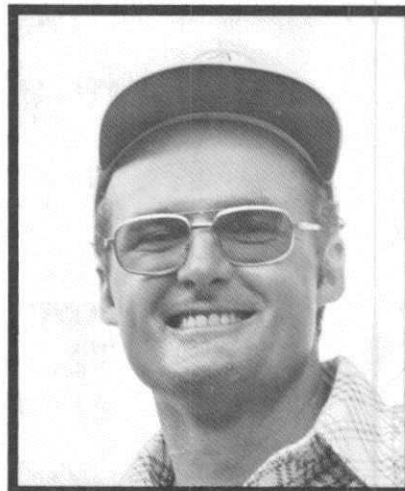

McGee, probably the least known of the Tour's famed Ohio State products, recovered in 1974 to record his best year so far by finishing in the money in 25 of 35 tournaments, including five times in the top 10, but his best was still to come. He won his first tournament in 1975, the Pensacola Open and grabbed five other top-10 finishes to amass more than $90,000. He made the cut in 26 of 31 events this time.

His winning week began with a two-under 69 which left him five shots back of Andy North. A second-day 66 lifted him to two behind Don Iverson and another 66 gave him the lead alone, one ahead of Wally Armstrong. The last round found McGee faltering on the front nine, but he sank three birdie putts on the final nine for a 70-271 which beat Armstrong by two strokes and was worth $25,000.

McGee had one other setback in his earnings progress, although he survived to remain among the top 60 money winners in 1972. The problem began the previous summer, after he had accumulated $54,000 through the Canadian Open, when he pulled ligaments in his thumb and was forced to sit out the rest of the 1971 season. "The longer I was home," he said, "the more I wondered if I'd ever play again."

He started 1972 by missing the first three cuts, before a closing 68 at Hawaii left him tied for 35th spot and with the feeling that perhaps his game had returned. He struggled to 55th place on the money ladder that year, a slight dip from his 1971 finish, and his 1973 performance was worse still.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It is hard to imagine anyone being happier than Benson Rayfield (Mac) McLendon was at the close of the Southern Open in Columbus, Ga. He won the tournament by two strokes over his close friend, Hubert Green.

It was Mac's first victory, and there were times when it appeared as if it might get away. He had a five-stroke lead at one point over Green, but suffered bogeys at the 11th, 15th and 17th holes. His lead was cut to one as he headed for the par five 18th.

He played his tee shot about where he wanted, planted his second shot short of the pond fronting the green and then hit a magnificent nine iron to within four feet of the cup. He made it for a birdie.

He said of his finish, "I've had chances to win before and let them get away. I didn't want it to happen this time." He had chances at the Pleasant Valley Classic and Ohio Kings Island Open, but terrible last rounds ended his dreams.

Mac finished with $72,390 for 35th place and had four other top 10 finishes. He entered 33 tournaments and missed the cut eight times. His stroke average was 71.4 and had 32 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

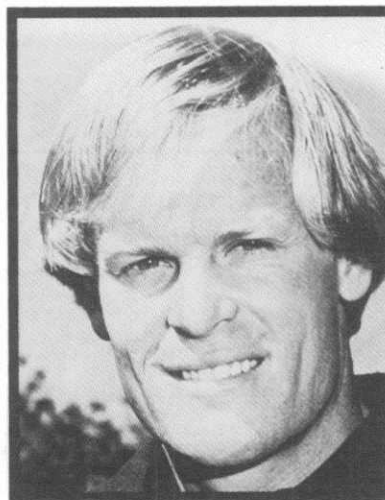

Mac McLendon won the first tournament he entered on the Tour, although it was a second Tour event, the 1968 Magnolia Classic. He also placed in the top 60 money list his first two years out on the big circuit.

Then began a five-year period which found him ready to chuck the Tour life for something more rewarding. But at the end of 1974 he teamed with Hubert Green to win the Walt Disney World National Team Championship and exemption from qualifying for the following 12 months.

Given that opportunity, McLendon played in 1975 as he had never played before. Twice he almost won, finishing tied for second at Jacksonville and second alone in the Pleasant Valley Classic. He also grabbed three other top-10 finishes and more than doubled his 1974 official earnings.

Benson R. McLendon Jr., who prefers the nickname Mac, graduated from Louisiana State in 1967 after winning three straight Southeastern Conference golf championships, and turned pro the following year. He also earned nine graduate hours in business administration while pursuing his pro career.

1976 AT A GLANCE

There was nothing unusual about the way Johnny Miller started the year. He won the NBC-Tucson Open for the third straight year, this time overtaking Tom Weiskopf on the final afternoon.

A final-round 66 gave him a tie for seventh in the Phoenix Open the next week, and, after a tie for 18th in the Bing Crosby, Johnny's next stop was the Bob Hope Desert Classic. With the help of a splendid 63 the last day at Indian Wells, he came from two strokes back to win by three. It was his second straight Hope title.

Johnny did not win again in the United States although a course-record 63 at the Silverado Country Club in Napa, Calif., aided him to a tie for second behind J.C. Snead. Silverado is his home course.

In mid-summer, Johnny did capture the British Open at Royal Birkdale by an easy six strokes.

He was forced out of the PGA Championship when he fell off his motorbike at his home and bruised his hand.

Johnny played in 17 tournaments—five less than the year before—and missed the cut once. He earned $135,887 for 14th place. His stroke average was 71.4 with 17 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

No matter what levels Johnny Miller reaches in golf, he will not forget what he accomplished in 1974.

His first 23 rounds in 1974 were at par or better as he won the Bing Crosby, Phoenix and Tucson and tied for fourth in the Bob Hope, before placing fifth at Los Angeles. He also won the Heritage and Tournament of Champions before the end of April, played seldom the next 15 weeks and finished the year with a rush by winning the Westchester, World Open and Kaiser International.

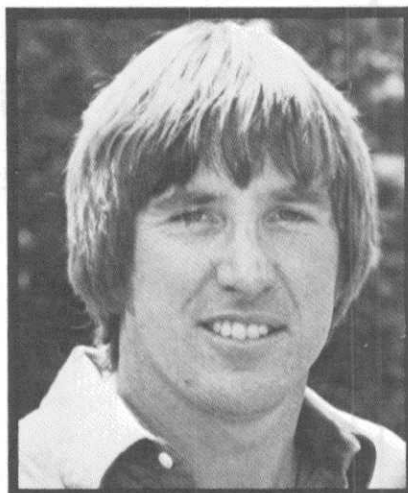

He topped Jack Nicklaus' single-season money winning record by more than $30,000 with his $353,021 and, in addition to the eight victories, he placed in the top six in four other events, among 21 played.

"I'm going to have to sit down and do a lot of thinking about next year," Miller said after that astonishing year. "This has been sort of ridiculous, and I've got to keep everything in perspective."

No one expected him to keep it up in 1975, but it could hardly be called an off year. He came out to win the Phoenix Open by 14 strokes, at 24-under 260, and the next week he won by nine at Tucson at 263, or 25 under. He shot a 61 in each tournament and all eight rounds were in the 60s.

A tie for sixth in the Crosby brought him back to reality, but he won his next start, the Bob Hope Desert Classic, by three shots at 21-under 339 for five rounds.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Gil Morgan has managed to improve a little each year and his climb up the ladder may not be spectacular, but it certainly is steady.

He won $61,372 last year for 42nd place, which is an increase of nearly $20,000 over the year before. His best finish was a tie for second in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic. That was a good spot for the strong showing, too, since he attended the Southern College of Optometry in Memphis. It was a 65 in the third round that triggered the charge.

Gil had five other top 10 finishes, his next best being a tie for fourth in the Sahara Invitational, aided by a closing 67. A pair of 68s at Riviera helped in the sixth-place finish in the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open.

The PGA Championship provided his biggest disappointment. After his 66-68 in the rain-plagued event, he led the field by four strokes. A third-day 75 dropped him two strokes in back of Charles Coody and tied with Jack Nicklaus, but another 75 ended his hopes. He finished tied for eighth.

Gil played in 32 tournaments and missed the cut in eight. He had a stroke average of 71.9 with 20 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

At the end of his rookie year on Tour, 1974, Gil Morgan won about $11,000 in his last four tournaments. That was an encouraging period for this young doctor of optometry out of Oklahoma, but a year later he needed another hot spell for a very vital reason.

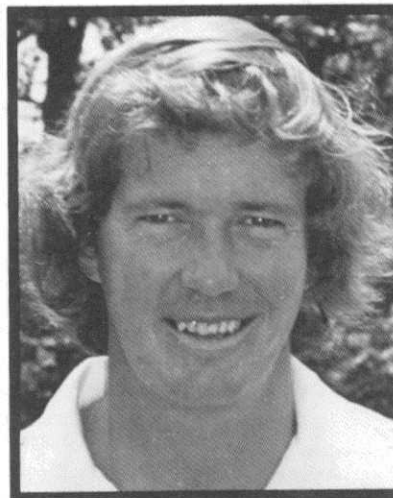

Going into the final individual Tour event of 1975, Morgan stood in 66th place on the money list and he needed almost $7,000 in the San Antonio-Texas Open to crack the top-60 exemption category for all of 1976.

Morgan took the lead at the halfway mark with 66-68—134. A third-round 75 seemed to kill chances for victory but a closing 68 left him in third place, worth $8,875 and in exactly 60th place on the money chart.

Morgan began playing golf at about age 15 and didn't choose it as a career—along with optometry—until his junior year at East Central State College in Oklahoma. He won the Oklahoma collegiate championship before graduation in 1968 and did not turn pro until after earning his doctorate four years later.

He was second in the Western Amateur and Porter Cup before entering the Tour Qualifying School in the fall of 1972, where he failed to gain his player's card. A year later, after subsisting on the mini-tour circuits, Morgan was graduated from the school.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Mike Morley put his new knowledge of his golf swing to excellent use in 1976 and proved to be one of the sensations of the West Coast.

He won $47,680 in his first five starts, which was far more than he had ever won for an entire season. He gave Joe Nichols, a professional in Phoenix, the credit for helping him with his game.

Mike started with a tie for 13th in the NBC Tucson Open, finishing with three 69s. The next week, a third-round 75 cost him a chance for a solid finish as he tied for 21st.

At the Bing Crosby, he was second, two strokes behind Ben Crenshaw, although he was tied for the first-day lead at 67 with Jack Nicklaus. The next week, he started with a 74 at the Hawaiian Open, and then fired 67, 68 and 66 for 275 and finished tied for fourth. After a tie for 15th at the Bob Hope Desert Classic, he came right back with a tie for third in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open, with 67-66 the first two days.

He had another second place finish, this one in the Colonial National Invitation in Fort Worth with 70-68-67-69—274, one stroke in back of Lee Trevino. At year's end, Mike had won $88,348 for 29th place. It's the first time he has finished in the top 60.

Mike entered 24 tournaments, missed the cut in six and withdrew from another. He compiled a stroke average of 71.5 with 26 rounds in the sixties. His low was a 64 in the Greater Greensboro Open.

PRIOR YEARS

Mike Morley's early years on the Tour were not very satisfying or profitable by his own admission, even though he did manage to win three Second Tour events.

"I had virtually no national amateur experience," he says. It was frustrating for him, trying to piece his game together while facing the game's best. His biggest success came in the 1972 Magnolia Classic when he won by three strokes.

Morley's introduction to golf certainly has to be classified as one of the more unusual. "We lived in Morris, Minn.," he explains, "next door to a banker. Everyone in that family was an avid golfer. I was about nine years old and their two sons were about four and six years older than me and they worked at the golf course. One day, they got their mother's clubs and cut them down so they could teach me to play. I remember they really got it when their mother discovered her sawed-off clubs."

Mike was 12 years old when he was given his own set. The family moved to Minot, N.D., and he played high school golf for three years. He moved to LaJolla, Calif., for his senior year, and was a high school teammate of John Schroeder. He went on to Arizona State and among his teammates there was Joe Porter.

He obtained his Player's Card in 1970 and only won $1,449 that year. In 1973 when he won Second Tour events in Shreveport, La., and Pinehurst, N.C., he pocketed $27,063, his best until 1975 when he heavily made the Top 60 list for exemption. He went down to the final week before coming up less than $1,700 short with $41,102 for 64th place.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was a frustrating year for the talented Bob Murphy. A painful hand, especially during the latter half of the year, hindered him immensely. Finally, it took a tie for ninth in the Pensacola Open, worth $3,250, to elevate him into the 60th position on the money list. It gave him $47,627 for the year, his lowest total ever.

"I hurt the hand at the Kemper Open in June," he said. "The grip became undone and it caused me to slam the club into the ground. It hurt for most of the summer, but in the fall I had a doctor diagnose it as a uric acid condition. He gave me medication and the pain went away."

Bob started the year at the Hawaiian Open and was tied for the lead after 36 holes and only one stroke back after three, but a final-round 74 dropped him into a tie for eighth. The next week, he tied for 10th in the Bob Hope Desert Classic with a final-round 66.

His best finish of the year was a tie for sixth in the Heritage Classic, although he held the first-day lead with a 66.

Bob entered 23 tournaments and missed the cut four times. Because of the hand, he missed the cut at the U.S. Open—the week after the Kemper—and did not return to the Tour for seven weeks. He compiled a stroke average of 71.7 with 23 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Bob Murphy entered the University of Florida in the early 1960s as a baseball prospect, but an injury kept him off the diamond his freshman year, so he turned his attention to golf. In 1965 he won the U.S. Amateur and the following spring the NCAA championship.

His success as a touring pro was no less sudden. He was graduated from the 1967 Qualifying School and the following year won the Philadelphia and Thunderbird events back-to-back, and more than $100,000—easily the most money by a rookie to that time.

In his first eight years on Tour, Murphy finished out of the top 35 on the money list only once, in 1974 when a thumb injury sidelined him for four months. He was limited to 19 tournaments that year, but he failed to earn a check in only four of these and he placed 44th on the money list.

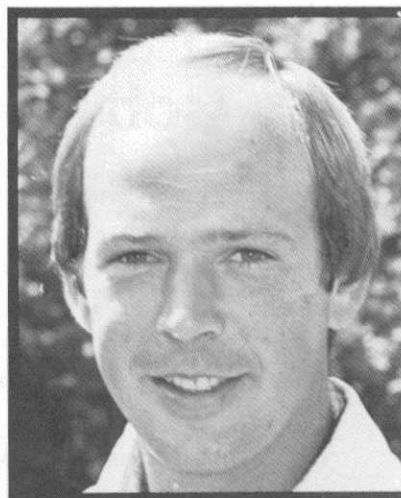

In 1975, after finishing three shots back of Johnny Miller in second place in the Hope Desert Classic, he announced: "Murph's ready. If he doesn't get them next week, he'll get them soon."

He tied for 18th at San Diego the following week, but two weeks later he made good on his warning by winning the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic.

Despite strained ligaments in his right hand, an injury which began at the Kemper Open, in which he tied for fifth, and bothered him the rest of the summer, Murphy enjoyed his greatest year in official earnings in 1975. He missed the cut only twice in 23 events, withdrew from one other and finished in the top 10 on six occasions.

A closing, two-under-par 69 in the U.S. Open placed him in a tie for third at Medinah, only a stroke out of the playoff.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Larry Nelson is a young man of few words, but when he has his game going, he doesn't have to say much. Larry moved into the top 60 class for the first time in 1976, continuing to make steady improvement. He earned $66,482 to finish 41st.

He is classified as one of the better players in the game today who still has not won. The first victory nearly came in the Hawaiian Open, but Ben Crenshaw was a little too strong the last day. Larry's card of 69-69-67-69—274 tied him for second with Hale Irwin. It was worth $21,275.

He came close again in the IVB-Bicentennial Open in Philadelphia, but a bogey-double bogey finish dropped him back to a tie for fourth, two strokes out of the playoff. A par-par finish would have won it.

He had two other top 10 finishes, a tie for sixth in the Byron Nelson Classic, and a seventh in the B.C. Open, thanks to three rounds in the sixties.

Larry played in 35 tournaments, missed the cut in six and withdrew from one. He compiled a stroke average of 72.0. He had 24 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

The Larry Nelson story is one of the more unusual on the Tour. Four years after he started to play the game, and with only one 72-hole tournament to his credit, he qualified for his Approved Tournament Player's card. "I really wasn't ready," he said, but his record since that big day in the fall of 1973 has steadily improved each year.

Larry lettered in varsity basketball and baseball in high school and went to Southern Tech for a year. He was drafted into the military and spent the next two years working for Uncle Sam.

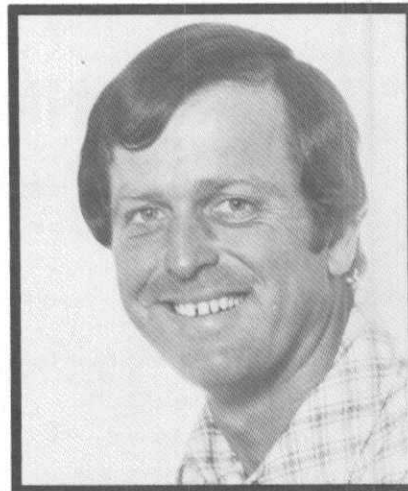

After his discharge in 1968 he spent time going to school and working as an illustrator at the Lockheed plant near his home. "It was in 1969 that I went to the golf range one day to hit balls, just for something to do."

He liked it so much that he decided to go to work as an assistant to Bert Seagraves at the Pine Tree club near his home in Kennesaw. "I was only an amateur for six months," he said.

Then he decided that if he was going to be in golf, he might as well try to play, instead of working in a shop. In 1972, he was off to the mini-tours in Florida. In 1973, he finished bogey-bogey in the Florida State Open to lose the title by a stroke, but that was the only time he played in a 72-hole event prior to the Tour's Qualifying School.

As a rookie, his best finish was a tie for fifth in the Western Open, and in 1975, he tied for fourth twice, in the Byron Nelson Classic and the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

1976 AT A GLANCE

If Bobby Nichols could find a way to do it, he would turn the calendar back a year and start 1976 all over again. It was the poorest of his 17 years on the Tour, yet, he still nearly shared in a victory.

Bobby was teamed with Gay Brewer in the Walt Disney World National Team play event and they held a one-stroke lead on the 72nd tee. Gay hit his tee shot short, but in the fairway. Bobby snap hooked one into the trees. It was so far into the woods that he didn't even bother trying to play it out. They suffered a bogey on the hole, and the rookies Woody Blackburn and Bill Kratzert won it in sudden death on the third extra hole.

Bobby only won $9,820 in official money—plus the $12,944 he collected in the Disney. His best finish was a tie for 16th in the Greater Greensboro Open as he turned loose with his best scoring, 67-68-66 in the final three rounds.

He was at a loss to explain the problem, except to smile and say, "It's something in the swing."

Bobby entered 22 tournaments, missed the cut in 12 and withdrew from another. His stroke average was 73.5.

PRIOR YEARS

A serious auto accident while he was a teen-ager in Kentucky changed Bobby Nichols' career, and he shouldn't have many regrets. He was a standout football and basketball player in high school, but the accident led him to devote his attention to golf and, while at Texas A&M, he won the 1956 Southwest Conference championship, before graduating in 1958 with a degree in business.

Nichols joined the Tour in 1960 and in his first 16 years he never once finished out of the top 60 money-winning list. After his first five years he had no worries about an exemption because he earned a lifetime ticket to Tour events by winning the 1964 PGA Championship.

Nichols won a dozen tournaments and more than $900,000 in those 16 years, and 1974 was certainly among his most enjoyable years. For the third time, he won two tournaments in a single year, the Andy Williams-San Diego and the Canadian Open, and almost $125,000, while holding down the head pro position at Firestone CC in Akron.

In 1975 he almost won at San Diego again, his 14-foot par putt gaining a playoff with J.C. Snead and Ray Floyd, but he dropped out on the first extra hole with a bogey.

Nichols also tied for fourth in the 1975 Masters, after leading the first round with a 67, and tied for eighth in the Kemper Open. But his most unforgettable incident of the year came in the Western Open, when he felt effects of a bolt of lightning, went to the hospital along with Lee Trevino and Jerry Heard and, although discharged soon, skipped the next three tournaments.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was not a typical Jack Nicklaus year, yet when you look at the figures, you see several significant achievements.

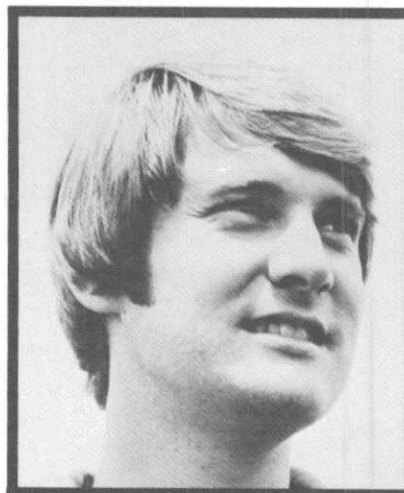

He only won twice but both of his victories were important ones. He captured the Tournament Players Championship for the second time in its three-year history. A final-round 65 made that possible. Then, he won the new $300,000 World Series of Golf on the tough South course at Firestone Country Club.

The two triumphs were worth $160,000 and they propelled him to his eighth money-winning title in his 15 years on Tour. He totaled $266,438.

His NO—CUT streak reached 105 tournaments and then it was snapped in the World Open at Pinehurst as he posted 72-74—146 to miss by one. The last previous time he had missed it was in the 1970 Kaiser International Open.

He has won 60 times on the U.S. Tour, and his chart on the 16 major victories shows 5 Masters, 4 PGAs, 3 U.S. Opens, 2 British Opens and 2 U.S. Amateurs.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was a good year for Andy North, but the taste of victory continued to elude him through 1976. He'll never come closer than he did in the Ohio Kings Island Open, though.

Andy had turned in rounds of 68, 69 and 66 and was playing some of the best golf of his life. He led by one stroke over Mac McLendon. Ben Crenshaw was two strokes back at 205.

Crenshaw was having another of his super days in the final round, and led Andy by one as they walked to the final tee, a par five hole. Both managed birdies and Ben finished at 271 and Andy at 272. He collected $17,100.

It helped him to his finest year, winning $71,267 and 37th place. Andy also had a tie for sixth in the Heritage Classic, three ties for seventh and an eighth. It was a good last round that helped Andy to gain each of those good finishes, which speaks well for the determination of this young man.

Andy entered 34 tournaments, missed the cut five times and withdrew once. He had a stroke average of 71.7, which was nearly a half-stroke better than the year before. He had 31 rounds in the sixties. One of those was a 66 the first day at the Masters, but he followed it with an 81.

PRIOR YEARS

When Andy North was in the seventh grade in Madison, Wis., it was discovered that a bone in his knee had stopped growing and was disintegrating. He was on crutches for 18 months, then was told he must give up basketball and football, but he could play golf—if he rode in a cart.

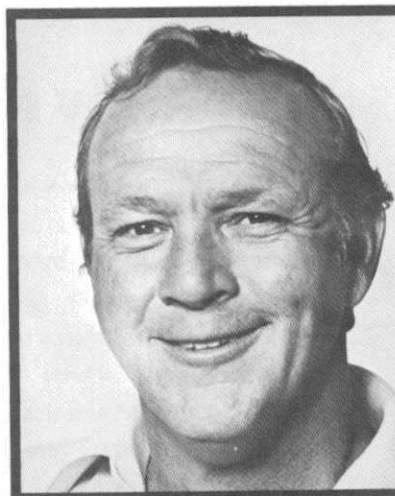

North's father was a low-handicap golfer, and the idea for Andy was welcomed in the family. With the help of his father and Lee Milligan, then head pro at Nakoma CC in Madison, Andy began his career in golf. He also returned to basketball and was selected all-state his senior year in high school, but golf was by then his dominant activity.

North won the Wisconsin high school golf title in 1966 and 1967, the State Amateur in 1969 and placed second in the Wisconsin Open in 1968 and 1969. He then entered the University of Florida and was chosen All-America in golf for three years, won the Houston All-American tournament and the 1971 Western Amateur.

North turned pro in 1972 and joined the Tour the following year and just missed the top 60 money list while winning the Little Crosby Second Tour event. In 1974 he jumped 18 places on the money list, to 46th, while missing the cut only five times in 34 tournaments. His best of three top-10 finishes was a tie for second at Houston, a shot behind Dave Hill.

The year or 1975 was almost as impressive although less lucrative as he placed in the top 10 in four events. The highlight was probably his score of 36-27—63 in the first round of the B.C. Open, his seven-under score on the back nine equalling the all-time Tour record for nine holes.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was not a year to remember for Arnold Palmer. For the first time since he joined the Tour in 1955, he never seriously challenged. He had his good days, such as the 66 in the first round of the Canadian Open and was only one off the pace. He finished tied for 18th.

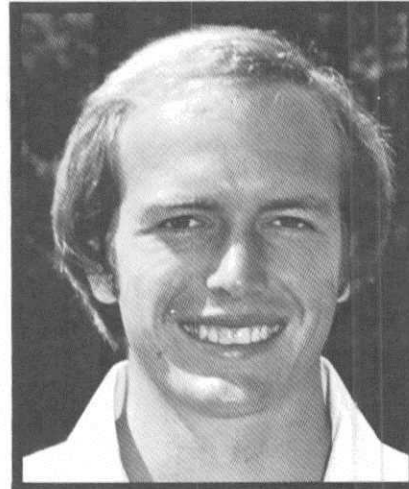

His best finishes were ties for 15th in the PGA Championship, helped by a third-round 68, and at the Tallahassee Open. His 63 in the Tallahassee pro-amateur tied the Killearn course record.

Arnold has won 61 times on the U.S. Tour, starting with the 1955 Canadian Open. He is third on the all-time list, headed only by Sam Snead with 84 and Ben Hogan with 62.

Although he has won overseas in recent years, his last Tour victory was in the 1973 Bob Hope Desert Classic. He had to fire a three-under par 69 the last day at Bermuda Dunes to get the title, and it was raining heavily most of the day. He edged Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller by two strokes and it was his fifth Hope title.

In 1976, Arnold played in 19 tournaments, missed the cut in five and withdrew from one. He earned $17,017 to increase his career earnings to $1,740,131. His stroke average was an even 72.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It took Jerry Pate a few months to become adjusted to life on the Tour, but once he did, he turned in a remarkable performance. As a matter of fact, his performance may have been the finest ever by a first-year player.

Jerry made the United States Open his first Tour victory. He caught John Mahaffey on the closing holes and then rifled one of the great five irons in golf history on the 18th. He struck it from the right rough, over water and the ball stopped two feet from the flag. He made the birdie for a two-stroke victory.

Five weeks later, with Jack Nicklaus close on his heels, Jerry fired a brilliant final-round seven-under par 63 to win the Canadian Open by four strokes over Nicklaus.

At the U.S. Open, Jerry's card read 71-69-69-68—277, three-under par. At the Canadian Open, he had 69-67-68-63—267, 13-under par.

During the first four months of the year, Jerry had only won $15,554. Interestingly enough, in his first tournament as a member of the Tour, he failed to qualify for the NBC-Tucson Open. By the end of the year, he had $153,102 and finished 10th on the money list.

You could see his splendid game reaching its sharpness in May. After missing cuts at New Orleans and Houston, he received some good advice from his "coach," Conrad Rehling. Then he tied for 34th in the Byron Nelson Classic, tied for 14th in the Colonial National Invitation, tied for 12th in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic, tied for fourth in The Memorial Tournament and was third in the IVB-Bicentennial in Philadelphia because he finished bogey-bogey. He skipped the Kemper and then went to the Open.

Jerry entered 30 tournaments, missed the cut in five, failed to qualify in one and withdrew from two. His stroke average was 71.2 and had 24 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

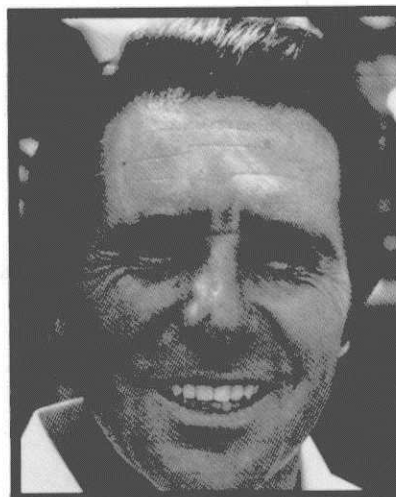

While coaching at the University of Florida, Conrad Rehling developed one pupil named Bob Murphy who won the 1965 Florida Amateur and U.S. Amateur championships. Nine years later he was hugely instrumental in bringing along another young man to the same achievements in amateur golf.

Rehling was coaching at a small college near Pensacola when he met Jerry Pate, who was then still attending Washington High School in Pensacola. Pate soon gave up other sports to concentrate on golf and, after graduating from high school, followed Rehling to the University of Alabama and pursued studies in marketing.

In 1974 Pate, like Murphy nine years before, won the Florida and U.S. Amateur titles. He also helped the United States win the Eisenhower Cup at the World Amateur Team Championship.

The following Spring Pate helped the U.S. team win the Walker Cup matches, then finished sixth in the Pensacola Open and tied for 18th in the U.S. Open at Medinah before turning pro.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Gary Player joined the Tour in time for the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open, the seventh event on the schedule. After a 72-71 start, he made a great charge on the famed Riviera course with 67-67 for 277 and a third-place finish.

The next week, he had a final-round 67 and tied for ninth in the Tournament Players Championship. He followed with a tie for 19th in the Florida Citrus Open and then came back with a tie for ninth in the Doral-Eastern Open and a sixth at the Greater Jacksonville Open. Those were his last top 10 finishes.

At the Citrus, he fired a magnificent 10-under par 30-32-62 in the third round to set the Rio Pinar course record. It also was the lowest 18-hole score he has ever had in the United States.

Gary collected $53,668 for the year and it increased his lifetime earnings to a healthy $1,216,821.99.

He played in 17 tournaments and missed the cut in two. His stroke average was 71.2.

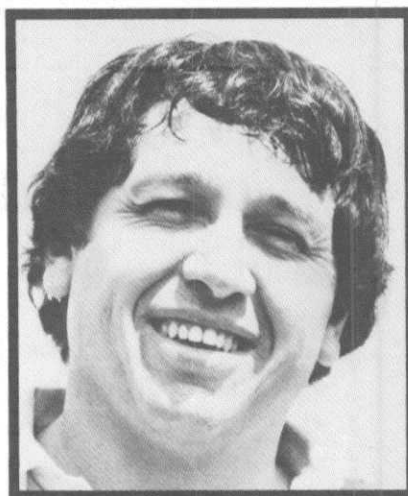

PRIOR YEARS

One of only four men to have won all four of the world's major championships in golf, Gary Player enjoyed one of his most gratifying years in 1974 when he won two of the titles again.

An operation in January, 1973, curtailed his playing schedule for about four months and caused his dropping out of the top 60 money list on the PGA Tour for the first time since 1958. But he rebounded in 1974 by winning the Masters for the second time and the British Open for the third, and earning more than $100,000 after only 15 appearances in the U.S. He also won at Memphis by rallying from five strokes back with 17 holes remaining.

The purposeful South African again played in 15 U.S. events in 1975 but, for the first time since 1968, victory eluded him for an entire year.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Victor Regalado regained his exempt status by moving into the top 60 after an absence of a year, and it was the month of April that made the difference. Victor won $53,686 for 52nd place, but $29,385 of that came out of Greensboro, Tallahassee and New Orleans.

Victor had a final-round 67 to tie for 10th in the Greater Greensboro Open. After skipping a week, he tied for third in the Tallahassee Open and then moved on to the First NBC-New Orleans Open and nearly won it. He was second, just a stroke in back of Larry Ziegler. His card read 68-69-69-69—275 and was worth $19,950.

He only had one other top 10 finish, that being a tie for eighth in the Florida Citrus Open. After his tie for 35th in the U.S. Open, he only collected six more checks in his final 12 tournaments, and they totaled less than $2,000.

Victor played in 34 tournaments, missed the cut six times, withdrew twice and did not qualify for another. He compiled a stroke average of 72.0, although after New Orleans, it was down to 71.1.

PRIOR YEARS

Victor Regalado knows what it is like to be a winner, so it wasn't easy for him to accept the results of 1975.

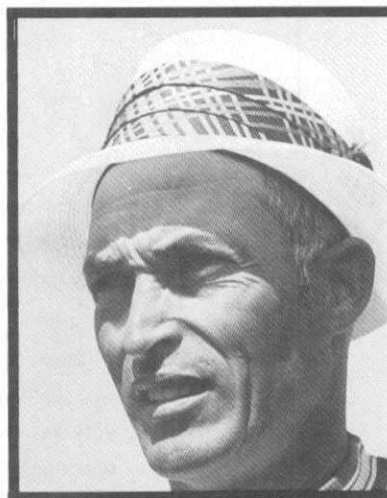

After winning the 1974 Pleasant Valley Classic at Sutton, Mass., it appeared as if the success he had enjoyed in his homeland of Mexico would continue on the PGA Tour. However, early in 1975, he injured his right thumb. "I couldn't practice for six months," he said, "but I kept trying to play."

The thumb improved by the latter half of the year, and a tie for fourth in the Sammy Davis, Jr.-Greater Hartford Open and a tie for second in the Disney team play, where he was partnered with Curtis Sifford, helped to save the year. Yet, he dropped out of the top 60 with $25,833 and 85th place on the money list.

Victor started to play golf at age 11 at the Tijuana Country Club, two blocks from his home. The first tournament he entered was the Pan-American Juniors at Tijuana and he won it at age 14.

Although he won several titles throughout Central America, his most impressive were the Mexican Amateur in 1970, the Mexican PGA in 1972, the Mexican Masters in 1972 and 1973. He represented Mexico on the World Amateur Eisenhower Cup matches in 1968 and 1970, earning low individual honors in Spain in 1970. He also represented Mexico in the 1972 and 1973 World Cup matches.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Juan (Chi Chi) Rodriguez was feeling better towards the end of the year and it was evident in his golf game.

He had four solid rounds in the 60s in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open and tied for fifth. That was in late August. In the final two events of the year, a closing 67 gave him a tie for ninth in the Southern Open and a 68-68 finish gave him a tie for fifth in the Pensacola Open.

He switched to graphite shafts in his woods for the Southern and Pensacola, and also changed his putting slightly, using more of a wrist action rather than his shoulders.

Chi Chi only collected four checks in his first 13 events, and then collected 11 checks in the final 16 tournaments.

He entered 29 tournaments and missed the cut in 13. His stroke average was 72.4. He earned $29,870 for 75th place, which was a definite increase from the year before.

PRIOR YEARS

As he passed his 40th birthday in the fall of 1975 and reflected on the worst of his 16 years on Tour—in placing on the money list—Juan (Chi Chi) Rodriguez could have mentioned that he was sidelined three times during the year by the flu. "But I can't use that as an excuse," he said. "I just didn't play well. For some reason, the cuts just got awfully small."

Chi Chi, a great favorite of the galleries everywhere, never was a factor in any of the 27 tournaments he played in, with his best effort a tie for 12th at Greensboro, worth $4,218.

Chi Chi made his way into golf as a boy in Puerto Rico, after learning to hit tin cans with limbs from a guava tree. Realizing family responsibility, he joined the Army at 19 "to make money... more than I could have by caddying at home."

He arrived on the Tour in 1960 and didn't finish higher than sixth until he won the 1963 Denver Open. He remained among the top 60 each year until 1971, when surgery on his arms late the previous year limited his schedule.

In 1972 he won the Byron Nelson Classic and finished in the top 10 in eight other events. The following year he won at Greensboro and the very next week he challenged in the Masters until a closing 76 left him in a tie for 10th place.

In 1974, Chi Chi's best effort among six top-10 finishes was a tie for fourth in the Canadian Open. At Las Vegas he was within a stroke of leader Al Geiberger until he triple bogied the 72nd hole.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Mason Rudolph had his poorest money year since 1960, and he said part of it was a lack of concentration.

The affable veteran said, "Just to give you an idea, my oldest boy is 16 and starting to drive a car. Sometimes I catch myself thinking about him."

Mason's best finish came at the end of the year when he tied for ninth in the San Antonio-Texas Open. He joined with Dan Sikes to tie for 10th in the Walt Disney World Team Play championship.

His best round of the year came the last day of the Greater Greensboro, a 31-32-63. "I used a new set of irons at the Doral-Eastern," he said, "and won over $1,600. I didn't use them again until today."

Mason earned $15,594. He played in 26 tournaments and missed the cut 11 times. His stroke average was 72.4.

PRIOR YEARS

In his first 17 years as a Tour player, Mason Rudolph won six tournaments, but his greatest year in earnings came in 1973 when, at age 39, he finished second to Jack Nicklaus by a stroke in the Walt Disney World Open (the last time it was conducted as an individual event) and tied for third in the PGA Championship at Cleveland's Canterbury Club.

He topped $60,000 in 1973 and the following two years saw him slip well below the top 60 money winners. But he had his moments, such as in the 1975 Tournament Players Championship. On one of the more testing layouts on the Tour, the Colonial Country Club in Fort Worth, Tex., Mason shot 69-70-72-70—281, or one over par, and tied for fourth to earn $10,333.

Essentially, that was the end of the 1975 season for him, because he missed the cut in each of three remaining events, but he placed in the top 10 twice earlier in the year.

One of the more popular members of the Tour, the easy-going Tennessean was practically an immediate success when he won the Golden Gate Open in 1959 and was declared Rookie-of-the-Year. Rudolph was to win five other titles, the last the 1970 Green Island Open when he hung a closing 64 on the scoreboard.

Mason attracted attention in golf as a teenager when he won the 1950 U.S. Junior championship. In 1957 he represented the U.S. on the Walker Cup, and four years later he again represented his country by playing in the Ryder Cup matches.

He has been involved in helping shape the Tour, too, serving on the Tournament Committee in 1965 and 1966.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Former Tournament Policy Board member. 1957 Public Links. 1969 Ryder Cup team.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It wasn't until the rich Westchester Classic in mid-July that Dan Sikes got his putting stroke smoothed out and started to play much better. He usually has had fine success at Westchester and his seven-under par 277 gave him a tie for fifth with seven other players.

Up until that point, Dan had won only about $4,300, but he finished the year with $26,830. It increased his career earnings to $800,339. After Westchester, he earned checks in seven of his next eight starts.

His low round of the year was a 65 the second day in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, but a poor third round wiped out his title chances.

Dan played in 23 tournaments, missed the cut in six and was forced to withdraw from three. He had a stroke average of 71.8.

PRIOR YEARS

Dan Sikes won the All-Army championship while discharging his military obligation and later, in 1957, he won the U.S. Public Links title. In the same period he earned a law degree but he turned pro in golf in 1960 and joined the Tour the following year, because, he said, "I can't make this much money this fast in law."

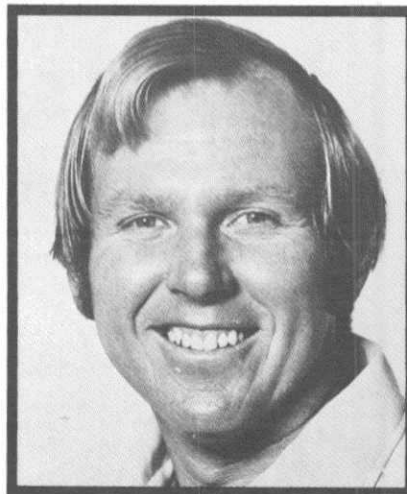

In the next 15 years, Sikes amassed more than three-quarters of a million dollars in official purses alone and won a half-dozen Tour events. But over the years, the tournament which has been kindest of all to Sikes was one he never won—the Westchester Classic.

In the inaugural Westchester in 1967, the game's first $250,000 event, Dan thought he had missed the cut but the second round was washed out three times, and finally he shot a 62 that counted and he eventually finished second to Jack Nicklaus. He tied for second at Westchester in 1968, placed third in 1969 and tied for third again in 1973.

Also in 1973, the drawling man from Florida twice finished second while recording his third best year in earnings, more than $90,000. In 1974 he missed the cut in his first five events and never recovered satisfactorily, missing the top 60 money list for the second time in three years. And 1975 was to be even worse.

Again he played well at Westchester, finishing 69-66 to tie for ninth, but his check for $6,000 was to be his best of all of 1975, although his highest finish was a tie for seventh at Pensacola. Dan wound up making checks in 17 of 24 tournaments and, on Pearl Harbor Day, observing his 45th birthday.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It took Bob E. Smith four months to get his game grooved, but once he did, he went on to have the best year of his career and was a contender on several occasions.

Through the first four months, Bob collected checks only in six of 13 tournaments for $5,634. Starting with the Byron Nelson Classic, he only missed one cut in his last 18 events and recorded eight top 10 finishes. He won $56,047 for the year.

At the Nelson, Bob started with 68-67 and went on to tie for eighth. The next week in the Colonial National Invitational, he finished with 68-69 for another tie for eighth.

His best tournament was a tie for fourth in the Southern Open, with a 67-68 finish. He tied for fifth twice, in the Greater Milwaukee Open and in the World Open, where he was tied for the first-day lead with a strong six-under par 65 on Pinehurst No. 2. Bob gave much of the credit for the improvement in his swing to the assistance he received from an old friend, Bob Saunders of Pinehurst.

Bob entered 31 tournaments and missed the cut in seven. He compiled a stroke average of 71.6 and had 21 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

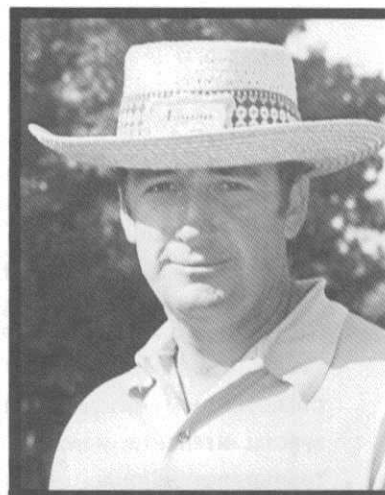

Ask almost any amateur golfer and he will tell you one of the toughest of all tournaments to win is the Western Amateur. Bob E. Smith won it twice, in 1965 and 1967, and in the latter year he also won the California State Amateur title and the NCAA small college crown while playing for Sacramento State. Naturally, Smith joined the Tour the following year with the highest of expectations.

He nudged into the top 60 money list in 1968, experienced two frustrating years while experimenting with his swing, barely made the top 60 twice in succession, then missed the next two years. In 1975, Smith finished 54th in official money, the highest he ever placed in all those eight years.

Smith had only one top-10 finish in 1975 while surviving the cut in 23 of 30 events. But that single high finish he will never forget. He was second to winner Tom Watson in the Byron Nelson Classic, two strokes back with four rounds in the 60s for a 13-under-par 271.

What made it most memorable of all was his last full stroke, a 6-iron which settled the ball four inches from the 72nd hole. The birdie beat out Jack Ewing for the runnerup check of $19,550, biggest of his entire pro career.

1976 AT A GLANCE

J.C. Snead definitely established himself as one of the game's outstanding players in 1976. He won twice, was second twice, added a third-place finish and had a total of nine top 10 finishes. He earned $192,645 for sixth place, and, by all standards, it was his finest year.

His first triumph came in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open with rounds of 65-68-67-72—272 and a one-stroke edge on Don Bies. In the fall, using a driver borrowed from Johnny Miller, he won the Kaiser International on Johnny's home course of Silverado at Napa, Calif. He opened with a 66 and went on to edge Johnny and Gibby Gilbert by two.

He had four excellent rounds in the sixties in the Tournament Players Championship but, for the second time in three years, finished second to Jack Nicklaus. The following week, a last-day 66 led to a third place in the Florida Citrus Open.

J.C. used a second-day 64, his low round of the year, at the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open to tie for second.

His secret to success? "All I try to do is concentrate on the shot in front of me. You can't program a round. And, I don't get too pumped up. Sometimes I wish I could, but I keep my emotions under control."

J.C. entered 30 tournaments and missed the cut in four. He had a stroke average of 71.1 with 31 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Jesse Carlyle Snead probably will have to continue through life constantly being referred to as the nephew of Sam Snead. If he was anyone else's nephew, he doubtless could stand on his own record, because J.C.'s performance record is enviable.

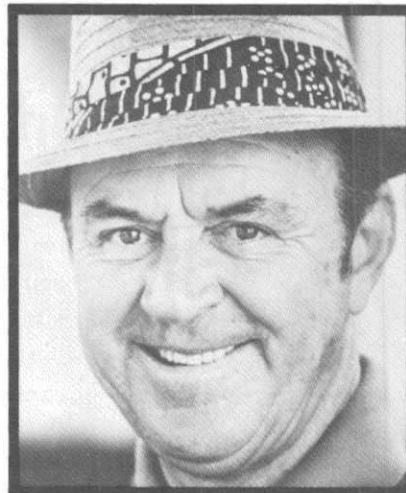

J.C. first sought a career in baseball after growing up in Hot Springs, Va., and he served in the Washington Senators' farm system before turning to golf as a pro in 1964. He worked under head pro Charlie Beverage at Century CC in Westchester County, N.Y., while twice failing to pass the Tour Qualifying School, and it was four years before he earned his card.

Three lean years followed on Tour before J.C., early in 1971, won two tournaments in a three-week period, at Tucson and Doral, immediately before and after the PGA Championship at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla. He won again the following year in Philadelphia but didn't pass the $100,000 barrier until 1973 and 1974 when, oddly enough, he did not win.

His figure of $164,486 in the latter year was a Tour record for a non-winner as he finished in the top 10 in 11 events, among 30 entered, including four runnerup finishes and two thirds.

In 1975, Snead returned to victory lane at San Diego and qualified for his third straight Ryder Cup team berth but failed to reach $100,000 in earnings. He closed with a 68 to catch Ray Floyd and Bobby Nichols at Torrey Pines, and won the playoff in the Andy Williams San Diego Open. In all of 1975, Snead finished in the top 10 in seven events.

1976 AT A GLANCE

By summer's end, Ed Sneed was wondering what he would have to do to win again. He put together one of the finest stretches of the year and somehow came up winless.

His mid-summer string, in order, showed a tie for third in the Greater Milwaukee Open, tie for fifth in the Westchester Classic, a fourth in the Canadian Open and a tie for third in the B.C. Open. Ten of his 16 rounds were in the sixties and only one was over par.

After a mediocre showing in the PGA Championship, he came back with a tie for fourth in the American Golf Classic. He had two other top 10 finishes, a tie for eighth in the Hawaiian Open and a tie for seventh in the Houston Open.

Highly respected for his knowledge of the game, as well as his playing ability, the personable former Ohio Stater was elected a Player Director on the Tour's Policy Board. It is a two-year term.

Ed played in 30 tournaments and missed the cut in seven. He also withdrew twice near the end of the year. He earned $71,675 for his best financial year. His stroke average was 71.6. He had 27 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Ed Sneed's apprenticeship on the Tour lasted an agonizing four years, in which he did not come close to cracking even the top 100. His close friend, Tom Weiskopf, kept insisting that there was no reason he couldn't be among the top 60 and, as it developed, his fellow Ohio State alumnus knew best.

Late in 1973, Ed won the New South Wales Open in Australia, grabbed a plane for San Francisco and—gaining a day via the International dateline—arrived in Napa, Calif., in time for the Monday qualifying round preceding the Kaiser International. The following Sunday he beat John Schlee in a playoff for first prize.

The following July, Sneed led all four rounds at Milwaukee. "It's good to know you can win again," he said. "I've seen it happen before. A guy gets it together one week and then you never hear of him again."

Sneed failed to win in 1975 and slipped almost $20,000 in official earnings, but he made checks in 25 of 30 events and recorded two solid finishes—a third in the Western Open and a fifth in the World Open.

Sneed started golf at age 13 in his native Roanoke, Va. After graduating from Ohio State with a degree in marketing in 1967, he earned his privileges to play the Tour in 1969. He divided his time between the Tour and working for Walker Inman at Scioto CC in Columbus, Ohio, until in 1971 he decided to play the Tour full time.

In 1972, Sneed won a Second Tour event, the Maumelle Open, in Little Rock, Ark.

BEST 1976 FINISHES: T-7—IVB-Bicentennial Classic.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1969 Ryder Cup.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Ken Still only managed one serious challenge in 1976 when he tied for seventh in the IVB-Bicentennial Open in Philadelphia. A third-round 66 moved him into a five-way tie for the lead, but he finished with a 72 and missed the playoff by three strokes.

With $17,332 in winnings, it was his lowest in nearly a decade, due mainly to a lack of consistency. In mid-summer, he had one stretch of finishing in the money four weeks, and that was his longest of the year.

Ken did hold the first-round lead in the Greater Milwaukee Open with an eight-under par 64. "When you go back to a tournament that you've won, it gives you extra incentive," said one of the game's finest good-will ambassadors. He tied for 12th, for his second best finish of the year.

Ken entered 29 tournaments and missed the cut in 13. He withdrew from another. His career earnings of $470,712 place him 50th on the all-time list, so he retains his exempt status. His stroke average was 72.6.

PRIOR YEARS

As Ken Still passed his 40th birthday early in 1975 he was seeking to regain a spot in the top 60 money list, an honor which he had enjoyed for eight years in succession until 1974. Although he finished the year earning money in 20 of 27 events, there were only three top 10 finishes and again he earned barely $30,000.

A tie for sixth at Greensboro was encouraging, but soon afterward, starting at Houston, Ken missed five cuts in succession. A seventh place in Milwaukee and a tie for seventh in the Canadian Open were not enough to rescue the year.

Still turned pro in 1953 at the age of 18 and waited seven years before joining the Tour. It was another nine years before he won a tournament, but he won twice—at Orlando and Milwaukee—and that made 1969 his best year.

Ken won again in 1970, when he beat Lee Trevino and Bert Yancey in a playoff at the Kaiser International, and, although that was to be his last victory in 15 years on Tour, he continued to enjoy success until 1974. A neck injury required traction and permitted him to enter only one tournament from mid-May to mid-July of 1974, and he wound up in 82nd place on the money ladder for the year.

Still remains one of the Tour's most avid fans of all sports, but particularly baseball, and most particularly the Los Angeles Dodgers. He played baseball in high school in his native Tacoma, Wash., and started in golf after investigating a caddie job at the Firecrest Golf Club.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Dave Stockton picked an excellent time to collect his victory for the year. It was in the PGA Championship at Congressional Country Club and he did it the hard way. He rolled in a 13 footer to save par on the 72nd hole and edge Don January and Ray Floyd by one.

He had gone nearly two years without winning, and it was bothering him because he was not having a typical Dave Stockton year going into the PGA. "I probably was heading for my poorest year," he said, "and I can't tell you why. I was in the best physical condition of my life. I guess it was mental."

Dave's line at Congressional read 70-72-69-70—281. He never was in the lead until the final holes. He was four strokes back when the last round started, but had forged to the front entering the last nine holes of the championship.

"When I get a lead, I seldom fold," he said. "I'm a positive person. The problem is, I haven't been getting in the lead often enough."

Dave had four other top 10 finishes, the best being a tie for fourth in the year's opening event, the NBC-Tucson Open. He won $94,973 and increased his career earnings to $909,457.

Dave entered 29 tournaments, missed the cut in seven and withdrew from another. His stroke average was 72.1. He had 18 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

Dave Stockton probably didn't expect to top his 1974 act of winning three times on the Tour. Just one victory would have been satisfaction enough in 1975, but the closest he came was three strokes behind old friend Al Geiberger in the Tournament Players Championship.

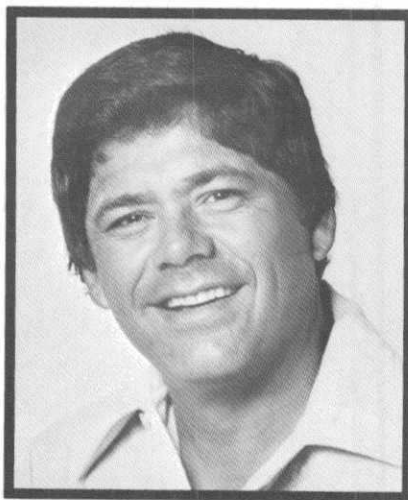

Dave had four other top 10 finishes but wound up with less than half of his 1974 official earnings with $72,885.

Stockton struggled on the Tour for three years after graduating from the University of Southern California, then, in 1967 cashed in for victory twice and has never been in danger of slipping out of the top 60 money winners since.

Highlight of his first dozen years on Tour was victory in the 1970 PGA Championship, in which he fought off a stretch challenge from Arnold Palmer and extreme heat to win at Southern Hills in Tulsa.

His three triumphs in 1974 rivaled his PGA title for overall achievement. Stockton won at Los Angeles by beating back a challenge from Sam Snead and John Mahaffey with a 72nd-hole birdie, after a 235-yard three wood shot 12 feet from the flagstick.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Lee Trevino had gone 15 months without winning before he finally broke through again in the Colonial National Invitation Tournament in Fort Worth. It was especially pleasing since it was his first Tour victory in his native Texas.

It seemed as if Lee was ready to have a big, successful summer, after playing well the next two weeks. However, while at home early in June, he injured his back moving a large pot filled with dirt. He missed the next nine tournaments, including the U.S. and British Opens. He underwent surgery Nov. 23 to correct a herniated disc.

When he did resume playing late in the year, he managed three top 10 finishes, a fourth in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, a tie for sixth in the new World Series of Golf and a tie for ninth in the Kaiser International Open.

Lee finished with $136,963 for 13th place, the ninth straight year he has been over the century mark. His career earnings moved to $1,535,615.

He played in 22 tournaments and had eight top 10 finishes. He missed four cuts. His stroke average was 70.6 with 27 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

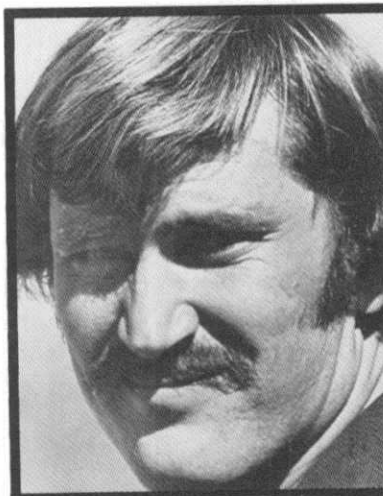

Lee Trevino tied for 54th in the 1966 U.S. Open at Olympic Club in San Francisco. It was the only appearance on Tour that year by the quick-quipping native of Dallas, and it also was his first on the big circuit—and it turned out to be a date worth marking.

A year later, in the Open at Baltusrol, Trevino finished fifth and he was on the Tour to stay. He was named Rookie-of-the-Year for 1967. Another 12 months after Baltusrol, Trevino was playing host at a party on one of the upper floors at Oak Hill CC in Rochester, N.Y., laughing and celebrating his victory in the 1968 U.S. Open.

That was his first victory on Tour but only one of many milestones in a career which can be described as truly fantastic. Among a succession of triumphs, Trevino won the U.S. Open again in 1971, by defeating Jack Nicklaus in a playoff at Merion. In a span of five weeks that summer he added the Canadian and British Open titles to his collection, and he was named Player-of-the-Year practically by acclamation.

He won the British Open again in 1972. In May of 1973 he marked $1 million in Tour earnings—by merely tying for second at Memphis—and no one ever made his first million quicker playing this game. In 1974 Trevino won his first PGA Championship, at Tanglewood near Winston-Salem, N.C.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Howard Twitty started in magnificent fashion. He finished second to Johnny Miller in the NBC-Tucson Open, winning $22,800. He had rounds of 71, 70, 68 and 68 for 11-under par 277.

"I did a lot of praying out there," the big fellow said, "and the Lord answered every prayer." He finished three strokes in back of Miller and was asked if he was ever chasing Johnny. "Never. I was just trying to do the best I could. I've got enough to worry about with my own game."

Howard had two other top 10 finishes. He tied for seventh in the Greater Milwaukee Open, assisted by a 65 the last day; and he tied for eighth in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

By mid-August, he had compiled $53,268, enough to assure him of a place in the top 60, so he only played in one more event, the San Antonio-Texas Open. He earned $1,000 there for a total of $54,268. His wife, Linda, presented him with a son in the fall, and he wanted to be home with her as much as possible.

Howard entered 26 tournaments, missed the cut six times and failed to qualify once. His stroke average was 71.7.

PRIOR YEARS

Howard Twitty has always been a little bigger than most people, and he believes that his size, especially in high school, might have slowed his progress.

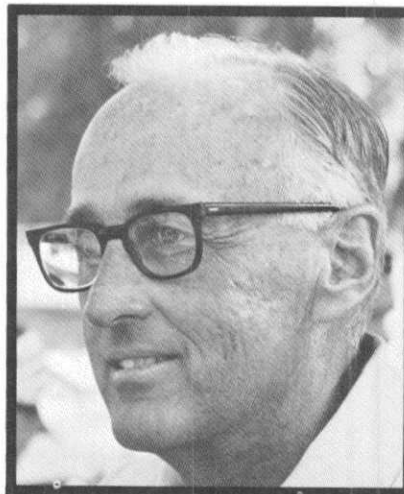

He started to play golf at age 10, but it wasn't until his senior year in high school in Phoenix that his game started to develop. "I was about six-feet-three when I was a sophomore," he says, "and I was terrible. I guess I just needed time to catch up with my body. I didn't have the coordination that I needed."

During his sophomore and junior years at Arizona State, his game truly began to blossom. He won such amateur events as the Sunnehanna and the Porter Cup in 1970, and, as a senior, was the runnerup in the NCAA Championships to the co-champions from Texas, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite.

Howard turned professional in 1973 and twice attempted to earn his card on the Tour before succeeding in June of 1975. Meanwhile, he played where he could, twice going on the Far East circuit and winning the Thailand Open in 1975.

His best finishes after joining the Tour for the last half of 1975 were a tie for fifth in the Quad Cities Open and a tie for 10th in the World Open.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Art Wall enjoyed his return to the Tournament of Champions. His victory in the 1975 Greater Milwaukee Open opened the door for his invitation to join the select field at LaCosta, Calif., and he responded with a seventh-place finish. He won the T of C in 1954.

Although Art was not completely satisfied with his play in 1976, he did remain competitive for most of the year. A bad first round in the Greater Greensboro Open cost him a good finish, as he posted 69-69-68 for his last three days of work.

He opened with a 67 in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open and came back with a 68 the third day, but the second and fourth rounds were not to his liking. He also had a 67 the last day of the B.C. Open.

Art entered 26 tournaments, missed the cut nine times and withdrew from two others. He had a stroke average of 72.3, exactly the same as in 1975. His earnings for the year were $22,884.

PRIOR YEARS

Art Wall's 26th year on the Tour (count 'em, 26!) was progressing much like his last eight—the bespectacled aging gentleman getting an occasional piece of the purse and barely making expenses—when lightning struck at the Tuckaway CC near Milwaukee, in early July, 1975.

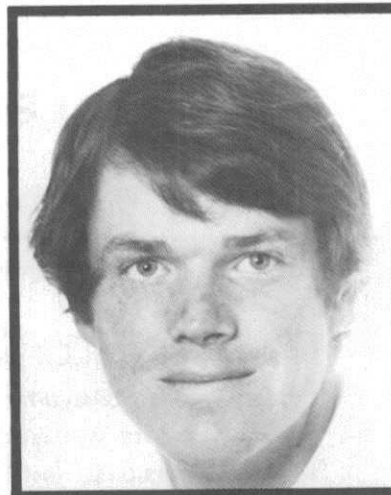

Wall strung together three straight 67s for a three-shot lead entering the final round, in which he was expected to fade in the face of gathering pressure from the many juniors. He did slip to a two-under par 70, but it was good enough to claim a one-stroke victory over Gary McCord and the $26,000 first prize in the Greater Milwaukee Open.

"It's a great, great feeling. I worked hard to get what I got," a relieved Wall said afterward. "Winning is almost like a new experience. It's not my character to say this is going to change everything. But it certainly is a big boost to me to play under pressure again."

Wall, 51 at the time, hadn't won since the 1966 Insurance City Open. He finished 1975 by earning money in 13 of 23 events, including seven of his last nine, and his $43,589 in official purses was his most since 1971.

Four of Wall's 14 Tour victories came in 1959, when he experienced a year that only few ever enjoy. He won four tournaments, including the Masters with a blazing birdie finish; he was leading money winner, Vardon Trophy winner for stroke average and wound up—naturally—as PGA Player of the Year.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Tom Watson finished in the top 10 in 11 tournaments and compiled one of the more consistent records of the year. He won $138,202 for 12th place, but the victory he wanted to capture was not there.

Tom is one of the Tour's toughest competitors and thus is able to stay in contention even during those weeks when his game is not as sharp as he'd like it to be.

Twice he finished second. He held the third-round lead in the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open, but Hale Irwin passed him on the final day. He tied for second in the Westchester Classic, with a 64 the first day and a 66 the last day. A brilliant final-round 64 gave him a third place in the First NBC-New Orleans Open.

He opened with a 65 at the World Open and finished fourth, and middle rounds of 68-68 gave him a tie for fourth in the NBC-Tucson Open.

Tom entered 25 tournaments and missed the cut only twice. He compiled a stroke average of 70.9, the seventh best of the year. He had 26 rounds in the sixties.

PRIOR YEARS

After Tom Watson beat him by two strokes for the $50,000 first prize in the 1975 World Series of Golf, Jack Nicklaus said of his conqueror: "He knows exactly where he's going. Straight ahead. Nothing distracts him. He has great abilities, super confidence and just enough cockiness. He's not a comer. He has arrived."

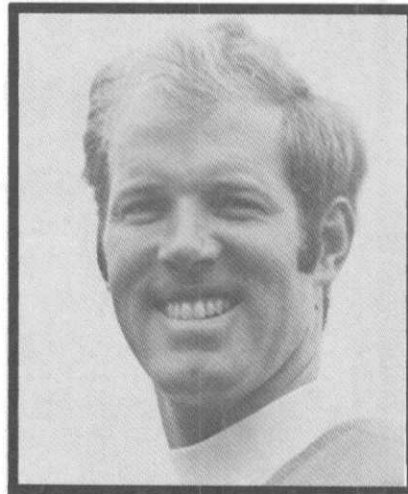

Well, that should have made the opinion unanimous, because less than two months earlier Watson had won the British Open. And he also had won the Byron Nelson Classic two months before that, employing a second-round 63 and a closing 65 to win by two shots. For the year, Watson finished in the top 10 in a dozen events, out of 26 entered, and he topped $150,000 in official earnings.

Watson was only six years old when his father, a scratch golfer, introduced him to the game. He became a four-time winner of the Missouri Amateur championship and played three years at Stanford University before graduating in 1971 with a degree in psychology. He had already decided to try the Tour, which he joined a year later.

He admits to only one good tournament as a rookie, when he closed with 69-66 at Quad Cities to lose by a stroke to Deane Beman. Twice in 1973 he challenged for victory before it eluded him, but he made the top 60 money list easily.

In 1974, Watson created a stir early by finishing fourth, ninth and fourth again at San Diego, Hawaii and Los Angeles—in that order. But he was to be a sensation in June, leading the U.S. Open by a stroke before stumbling to a final 79, then the very next week winning the Western Open with a closing 69 at brutal Butler National. He made up six shots in final round, the best victory rally by anyone in 1975.

1976 AT A GLANCE

When Tom Weiskopf's game was sharp in 1976, it was very sharp indeed. Such was the case in June when he had back-to-back second-place finishes. He couldn't quite catch Joe Inman the last day of the Kemper Open and finished one back. The next week in the U.S. Open, he had closing rounds of 68-68, but still fell two strokes in back of Jerry Pate.

Tom started the year with a third place in the NBC-Tucson Open, but it was disappointing to him because he held the third-round lead. After a tie for ninth in the Bing Crosby, he caught a severe case of the flu and was forced to withdraw from two west coast events.

He carved out 11 top 10 finishes with other third places in the Colonial National Invitation and the Ohio Kings Island Open. He opened with a brilliant 65 in the PGA Championship, but couldn't find that touch again, gaining a tie for eighth.

Tom entered 27 tournaments and missed the cut in three. He withdrew from four and was disqualified once. His stroke average was 71.0 and had 24 rounds in the sixties. His earnings hit $131,331 for 15th place.

PRIOR YEARS

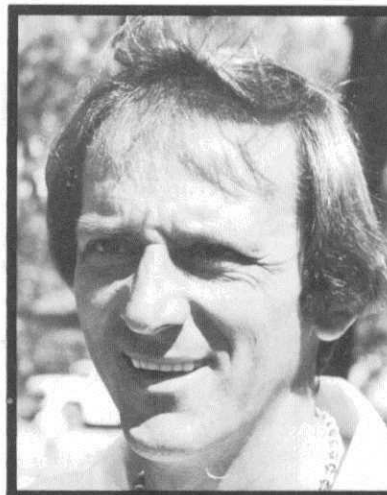

Long regarded as one of the most talented men ever to play golf, Tom Weiskopf proved in one brief period of 1973 what he is capable of. In an eight-week span, he won five tournaments, including the British and Canadian Opens, and carrying over to two other tournaments that summer he shot in the 60s in exactly half of his 40 rounds.

Weiskopf, later in 1973, also won the World Series of Golf and the South African PGA championship. He didn't win in 1974 but he passed the $1 million mark in career earnings and finished in the top 10 in nine of 21 events, and cashed more than $100,000 in checks.

In 1975, Weiskopf was a winner again and easily topped $200,000 for the second time. In 50-mile-per-hour winds and 40-degree temperature at Greensboro, he opened with an incredible seven-under 64 and was never touched. Three and a half months later he defeated good friend Jack Nicklaus, with a birdie on the first hole of a playoff, to win in Canada again.

Also, among a pair of seconds in 1975 was his tie with Johnny Miller at the Masters at the end of a three-cornered stretch drive with eventual winner Nicklaus.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Bob Wynn's California license plates carry the letters "WYNNER," and that's just what he became in 1976. He went the distance in the rain-delayed B.C. Open with a card of 65-71-66-69—271 to edge Bob Gilder by one. The victory was made possible when he parred the final hole while Gilder missed the green and bogeyed.

"I can't believe I've won $40,000 bucks," he said. "I know what my daughter would say. 'Fantastic!'" Bob played well going into the B.C. Open. He led after the third round of the Canadian Open with three rounds in the sixties, but a closing 75 dropped him back to a tie for fifth. He tied for sixth the next week in the Pleasant Valley Classic.

Bob finished with $76,849, easily his best financial year.

He entered 32 tournaments, missed the cut in nine, withdrew from six and was disqualified once. His stroke average was 71.9.

PRIOR YEARS

Bob Wynn realized one of his cherished goals in 1975, that of reaching the top 60 money list and exemption for the following year, but he would like to play at least one hole over again, the 71st in the IVB-Philadelphia Classic. Although he won the Magnolia Classic, a second Tour event opposite the Masters, Wynn was in position to win a major tournament with two holes remaining in Philadelphia.

He had a two-shot lead going to the 17th hole the final day and made a triple-bogey eight and finished third. Bob wound up with 22 money finishes in 31 events and five finishes in the top 10, including Magnolia.

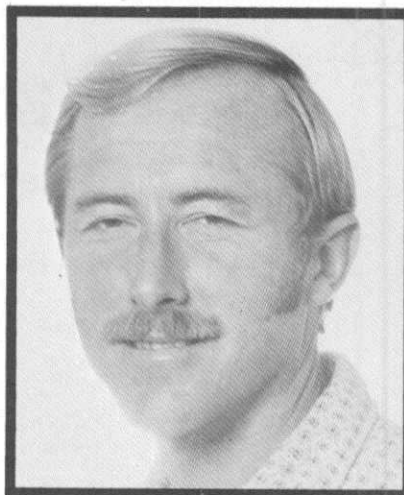

Wynn shares one record with Byron Nelson and Denny Shute, and there aren't many trivia experts who can divine this one: He won three straight Ohio Opens, in Bob's case 1970 through '72.

He grew up in Xenia, Ohio, and was 15 when he was urged to enter the Ohio Jaycees Junior event, although he had never struck a golf ball. "They needed two more entrants to get one more qualifying spot," Wynn recalls. "They called my Mom and said all I had to do was go out and tee it up. That's what I did. The first ball I ever hit was on the first tee, and that's all I did that day, hit it once."

He played three times that year, 1955, but the following year he played frequently and established an 18 handicap. And in 1957, according to Bob, "I'd play 36 holes a day and hit close to 500 balls at the Xenia Golf Club. I got my handicap down to one." And he finished third in the Ohio Jaycees that year, behind Jack Nicklaus.

Wynn turned pro at age 19, worked in all phases of club operation, spent two years in the Army, returned to southern Ohio and became head pro at his old Xenia Club in 1968-69. He tried the Tour briefly in 1970 and came out to stay in 1971.

1976 AT A GLANCE

It was something of a comeback year for Kermit Zarley. He returned to the top 60 list after a two-year absence, winning $52,553 and losing the Florida Citrus Open to Hale Irwin after a tough six-hole playoff.

There was a reason for his mediocre play the two previous years. He was suffering from what the doctor called a "bulging disc" between two vertebra in his neck. The pain was intense whenever he swung a club. He had to spend many hours in traction and swallowed many pain-killing pills.

In the fall of 1975, he submitted to surgery. The two vertebra around the defective disc were fused. The pain disappeared and his game reappeared.

Kermit held the lead after the second and third rounds of the Citrus, but a final-day 69 while Irwin was posting a 66 forced the playoff. On the sixth extra hole, Kermit bogeyed and it was over.

He also finished sixth twice, in the Heritage Classic and in the Ohio Kings Island Open with a closing 67.

Kermit entered 29 tournaments and missed the cut eight times. He had a stroke average of 72.2.

PRIOR YEARS

In 1974, Kermit Zarley played in 28 tournaments, missed the cut six times, never finished higher than sixth place and dropped out of the top 60 money list for the first time in five years. In 1975, Zarley played in one more tournament than the year before, but he missed 11 cuts, tied for 10th in the World Open for his highest finish and slipped to 84th place in the money rankings, matching the position he gained when he was a Tour rookie in 1964.

Two such disappointing years are difficult to fathom for this seasoned performer with a picture golf swing.

Zarley started in golf in his native Seattle, Wash., where his father owned a restaurant near a public course. He won the Washington State and Northwestern Amateur championships before entering the University of Houston. He won the NCAA title in 1962, and was graduated in 1963.

Zarley won the Kaiser International in 1968 and the Canadian Open in 1970 and, partnered with close friend Babe Hiskey, captured the National Team championship in 1972. Kermit and Babe have been active for years in the Tour's bible study classes.

Earlier in 1972, Zarley had a moment worth noting when he trailed Jack Nicklaus by only a stroke after three rounds of the U.S. Open, before high winds helped him to a closing 79 at Pebble Beach.

He enjoyed his second-best earnings year in 1973, although failing to win a tournament. He closed with a 67 at Quad Cities to tie for second, finished 67-64 at Orlando to tie for third and finished with a 65 at St. Louis, tying for 11th. But Zarley could not muster those blazing finishes the next two years.

1976 AT A GLANCE

When Larry Ziegler tied for third in the Masters Tournament, he said he was on such a high that "I thought I was going to explode. You can't believe how excited I was."

Two weeks later, he did explode, winning the First NBC-New Orleans Open by one stroke over Victor Regalado. His card: 69-63-67-70—274, worth $35,000. He chipped in twice in the first round and twice more in the third. He grinned, "That's a probable difference of eight shots."

The victory was a tough one right down to the last putt. His 25 footer for a birdie on the 72nd hole pulled up 3½-feet short. "My heart went into overtime," he said, but he made it for his par.

Larry won a total of $84,165 for his best-ever performance. He had three other top 10 finishes, and all were ties for fifth, in the Florida Citrus Open, the Westchester Classic and in the Walt Disney World National Team Play.

Larry entered 30 tournaments. He missed the cut in six, withdrew from four and was disqualified once. His stroke average was 71.7.

PRIOR YEARS

In the final round of the 1975 Greater Jacksonville Open, nine players had at least a piece of first place. "I thought that somebody would come out of the pack to win it, but I didn't think it would be me," said Larry Ziegler after his two-stroke victory.

Probably no one else did, either, because Ziegler had won only once in his 13 years on Tour. That was in 1969 in the defunct Michigan Classic. But, at Jacksonville, Larry came from three shots back with a seven-under 65 for 276.

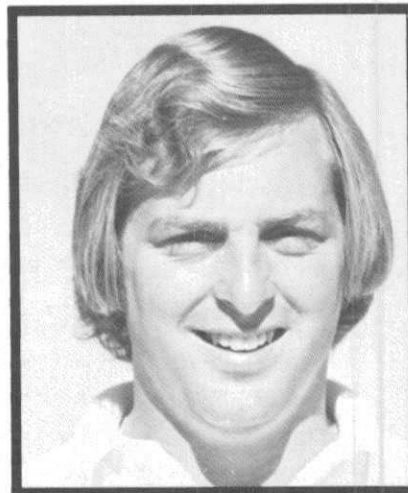

Ziegler had only one other top 10 finish in 1975, a tie for eighth at Orlando two weeks before Jacksonville, and wound up 13 spots lower on the official money ladder than the previous year. Of course, 1974 was his best year. Four times in 1975 he was forced to withdraw because of illness or injury.

In 1974, Larry surpassed his best previous earnings year, 1969, by more than $20,000, by finishing in the money in 30 tournaments and in the top 10 in four of them. He challenged early in both the Westchester Classic and the Canadian Open before tying for fifth and second, respectively.

One of 13 children in a St. Louis family of modest means, Larry and his six brothers found that long hours of caddying could provide needed money, and Larry fell in love with golf. After he was graduated from high school he spent six years in the Army Reserve and, after turning pro in 1959, he worked for St. Louis area clubs for another seven years before rounding up sponsors to finance his venture into Tour competition.

Ziegler is one of the longest hitters in golf and probably the Tour's leading hockey expert, as a member of the board of directors of the St. Louis Blues.

1976 AT A GLANCE

Fuzzy Zoeller walked into the Press Room the first day of the Ed McMahon-Quad Cities Open and said, "I was told to come down for an interview."

"That's fine, Fuzzy. What did you shoot?"

"I birdied the last eight holes for a 63," he said calmly, and then a wide grin creased his face.

His brilliant performance tied the all-time Tour record set by Bob Goalby in the 1961 St. Petersburg Open. He went on to shoot 71-68-68—270 and finished second, two strokes behind John Lister. The next week, he had 66-72-69-68—275 to tie for second in the Westchester Classic, three off the winning pace.

Fuzzy gave an indication of things to come in the Greater Milwaukee Open, the week prior to Quad Cities. He opened with 66-66 and had a one-stroke lead, but he couldn't maintain that pace and finished well back.

He had two other top 10 finishes and totaled $52,557 to earn his position in the top 60.

Fuzzy entered 32 tournaments, missed the cut in eight, failed to qualify in four and withdrew from two. His stroke average was 72.1.

PRIOR YEARS

Fuzzy Zoeller's family lived along one of the fairways at the Valley View Country Club in New Albany, Ind., so it seemed natural enough for Fuzzy to start swinging a club at age three. He was in his first competition at age five.

As a youngster, he enjoyed all sports, but when he was eight years old, his father said to him, "Son, all we're doing is running back and forth between the golf course and the baseball diamond. You had better choose one." Fuzzy chose golf. During his days in high school, he played varsity basketball, mainly, he says, "to keep in shape for golf, and in Indiana in the winter, you can't play golf."

He was the runnerup in the state scholastic tournament in 1970 and went on to Edison Junior College in Florida, and in 1972, he won the State Junior College championship. The next year, he went to the University of Houston.

He missed in his first attempt at qualifying for the PGA Tour in 1973 but earned his card in the 1974 fall Qualifying School at the Canyon Club in Palm Springs. In fact, he was the medalist.

During his first year on Tour, he only won $7,318. "I like to consider that year part of the learning process," he says.

Winter, Spring and Summer Tour Point Races

The PGA Tour schedule has been divided into three seasonal segments to give continuity to the individual tournaments and to honor players who have performed well during the various seasons. The segments are known as the:

- WINTER TOUR, which started with the 1976 World Open and which will conclude with the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open, Feb. 20, 1977.
- SPRING TOUR, which will start with the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic, Feb. 24, and will conclude with the Atlanta Classic, May 29.
- SUMMER TOUR, which will start with the Kemper Open, June 2, and conclude with the Colgate Hall of Fame Classic, Aug. 28.

Points are awarded on the following basis: First place, 100 points; second, 57; third, 36; fourth, 22; fifth, 19; sixth, 17; seventh, 15; eighth, 13; ninth, 11; and, tenth, 10.

A handsome gold-plated money clip, with a genuine ruby, is given to each seasonal champion.

Jack Nicklaus Wins the 1976 TPC and The Championship of the World

The year 1976 marked the beginning of an important sports spectacle, the enlarged World Series of Golf. It was a brilliant start to what is expected to quickly become the premier competition in golf.

Because of its rigid qualifications, the World Series field is an exclusive gathering of the day's champions from around the globe. A player must be a champion just to get into the starting field for the $300,000 joust. Consequently the World Series already has been placed on a level above the traditional "majors" of the game.

It was fitting that the first of the new World Series was won by the golfer who is recognized as the best of our times, Jack Nicklaus. He qualified for the field by winning the Tournament Players Championship earlier in the year. The TPC brings together the most talented field of the year, with more depth of good players than any other championship. It seemed appropriate that the best of the TPC became the best of the world.

An Ohio native, Nicklaus has always felt at home on the South Course of Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio. Again, in the new World Series, Jack proved that his combination of strength and keen putting touch are just what is required at Firestone. His 68-70-69-68—275 separated himself by four strokes from the remainder of the 20-man field.

Hale Irwin finished with a 67 for 279 and second place while Dave Hill took third with 280. Ironically, Hill led the field in hitting the greens in regulation strokes or better, but he was last in the field in putting skill.

History repeated itself in the 1976 Tournament Players Championship, although the event was only in its third year.

The 1976 TPC was a carbon copy of the 1974 TPC, which was held at Atlanta Country Club, Atlanta, Ga., in that the winner and runnerup were the same—Jack Nicklaus and J.C. Snead, in that order.

At the Inverrary Country Club, Lauderhill, Fla., rain marred much of the early rounds in 1976—as it had in 1974. And, like the TPC of two years before, part of the first round's play was suspended and the round had to be completed on the following morning.

But in 1976 the entire third round was washed out early in the day by the unplayable conditions. The next morning, however, the Fort Lauderdale New's headline read: "The TPC At Inver-rainy Goes On."

It did indeed and it proved to be one of Jack Nicklaus' more spectacular efforts. Jack's card read 66-70-68-65—269. He was 19 under par on the rain-soddened course which measured 7,127 yards. His 72-hole total established a new TPC record—one below Al Geiberger's winning score in 1975 at Colonial Country Club, Fort Worth, Texas. Jack's total also was four-under the previous tournament record at Inverrary, which Bob Murphy had set in winning the 1975 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic.

QUALIFYING SCHOOL FOR APPROVED TOURNAMENT PLAYERS

The Qualifying School for Approved Tournament Players was initiated in 1965 as the procedure for accrediting new players for the Tour. Since that time, 318 men have received Approved Tournament Players membership cards through these schools.

In 1975, two Qualifying Schools were held, the first in June at the Bay Tree Plantation club in North Myrtle Beach, S.C. There were 233 applicants and 13 received their cards following 108 holes of competition and three days of classroom work. There were 380 applicants in the second school at Walt Disney World in Lake Buena Vista, Fla., and 25 received their playing privileges.

Classroom instruction covers such subjects as the Rules of Golf, Personal Development, the History of Golf and the PGA Tour, Contracts and Finances, Public and Press Relations and an orientation about life on the Tour. A written examination follows.

SUMMARY OF PREVIOUS QUALIFYING SCHOOLS

FALL 1969—For the first time, a system of district tryouts at 54 holes was instituted. A total of 182 applications were accepted and 48 qualified for the School proper at the tryouts. Twelve were graduated to the Tour with Doug Olson being low, at 286, in the school's 72-hole tournament.

1970—Nine district tryouts, at 54 holes, reduced the field of 250 applicants to 60. A 72-hole tournament at Tucson, Arizona produced 18 approved players. Robert Barbarossa was low qualifier with 279.

1971—A system of three regional tryouts at 72-holes was used. A total of 357 applications were accepted and 75 qualified for the school proper at the tryouts. Twenty-three were graduated to the Tour with Bob Zender being low qualifier with 425 for 108 holes. The school was held at PGA National Golf Club, Palm Beach Gardens, Florida.

1972—A record 468 applications were accepted. Eighty-one survived the three regional tryouts with 25 receiving playing privileges. Larry Stubblefield and John Adams were low qualifiers with 434 for 108 holes.

1973—373 applications were accepted by the Division. 78 players survived the regional tryouts, and 23 players received playing privileges on Tour for one year. Ben Crenshaw was the low qualifier for 144 holes. His 558 was 18 under par, 12 strokes ahead of field.

1974—There were 447 applicants. Three Regional Tryouts reduced the field to 78 candidates and 19 received credentials after completing course at the Silverado Country Club, Napa, Calif., and the Canyon Country Club, Palm Springs, Calif. Fuzzy Zoeller was low qualifier with 572 for his final 144 holes.

1976 Fall Qualifying School

The 1976 Fall Qualifying School was held December 9-17 at Rancho Viejo Country Club, Brownsville, Texas. The printing deadline for this Guide prevented the inclusion of thumbnail sketches of the qualifiers. Sketches will be published in the Guide's Supplement No. 1 early in 1977. Meanwhile, copies of the thumbnails may be obtained on Tour or through the Washington office.

RYDER CUP MATCHES

The Ryder Cup Matches developed from a match played between representatives of the American and British Professional Golfers' Association in England in 1926. That unofficial match, incidentally, was won by the British 13½ to 1½.

Following this highly successful exhibition, Samuel A. Ryder, a wealthy British seed merchant, offered to donate a solid gold trophy bearing his name to be competed for in a series of matches between professionals of two nations.

In placing the Ryder Cup in competition, the donor set forth certain terms which were to be observed by the parties concerned so long as the matches are conducted. Included among these stipulations are the following:

- (1) The matches will be played every other year on a home-and-home basis;
- (2) While both parties must mutually agree on the specific dates for each match, the host team may select the site and will be responsible for such arrangements and details as are normally the function of a sponsoring group;
- (3) The Matches shall consist of two days of play with the first being devoted to foursomes and the second to single matches;
- (4) Each member of the competing teams must be a member of his country's PGA, and furthermore, must be a native born citizen of that country.

The matches were first officially played for the Ryder Cup in 1927 in the United States. They have been held continuously every other year since except for the period from 1937 when the exigencies of World War II forced their suspension.

From 1927 to date, the United States has won every Ryder Cup match played in this country. It also won on British soil in 1937, 1949, 1953, 1965, 1973 and 1975, to run its list of victories to 17 in the 21 matches. The British won at home in 1929, 1933 and 1957. The 1969 match in England resulted in the first tie of the series.

From the start of the series through the 1959 Ryder Cup matches, the competition was comprised of four foursomes matches one day and eight singles matches the other day, each at 36 holes.

In 1961, the format was changed to provide for four 18-hole foursomes the morning of the first day and four more that afternoon, then for eight 18-hole singles the morning of the second day and eight more that afternoon. As in the past, one point was at stake in each match, so the total number of points was doubled.

In 1963, for the first time, a day of four-ball matches augmented the program to add new interest to the overall competition. This brought the total number of points to 32.

THE VARDON TROPHY

The PGA Vardon Trophy, named in honor of the internationally famous British Golfer, Harry Vardon, was placed in competition among American professionals in 1937 as a successor to the Henry E. Radix Trophy, which, prior to that time, had been awarded annually to the professional having the finest tournament record in play in this country.

Today, the Vardon Trophy, a bronze colored plaque measuring 39" x 27" is awarded each year to the member of the PGA of America maintaining the finest playing average in those events cosponsored or so designated by the PGA in each such period. A minimum of 80 rounds in tournaments considered official by PGA is required to win.
