A Message
from
Deane R. Beman
PGA Tour Commissioner

It has not surprised observers that there were 12 first-time winners on the PGA Tour during 1979. The increasingly deep pool of quality talent in our tournaments simply means more players are capable of winning any given event. And yet sustained individual brilliance, like that shown by Tom Watson in recent years, has not been diminished.

The players who have joined the Tour from the college ranks, overseas and elsewhere since 1975 are outstanding players and gentlemen. It has never been more evident than over the last several years that the Tour is attracting some of the country's finest young men and athletes.

Increasing numbers of PGA Tour players have college degrees, and thus bring to golf a diversity of interests and abilities which can only enrich it. And like those who have preceded them, they continue a deep respect for the integrity and traditions of the game.

This influx of talented young men speaks well for the future of the PGA Tour. The competition serves as inspiration for thousands of spectators, golfers and non-golfers alike, advancing the growth of golf around the world.

Through the dedicated and capable sponsors and thousands of volunteer workers who make the PGA Tour possible, thousands of lives across the country are enriched. The 1979 PGA Tour and its weekly events raised more than $4 million which was distributed through many charitable organizations.

We are proud of golf's growth, golf's integrity and golf's contributions through local sponsoring organizations to those less fortunate. We continue to be most proud that the real leading money-winner on the PGA Tour is charity.

A Brief History of the PGA Tour

The precise start of the PGA Tour defies documentation. We know, for example, that professionals competed against each other from the earliest days of the game in this country. We know, too, that the first United States Open, held in 1895 at Newport, R.I., attracted a field of 10 professionals and one amateur. A second professional tournament, the Western Open, was first held in 1899. It has now observed its 75th anniversary and continues to thrive on the PGA Tour with a youthful spirit.

However, it would be stretching history beyond reason to say the PGA Tour started with the Western Open in 1899 because there was not a "tour" at that time. Tournaments continued to spring up across the country during the first decade of this century but they lacked continuity. American-born professionals were rapidly improving and, in 1911, John McDermott became the first home-bred to win the U.S. Open.

In 1913 a commercially-backed "tour" by Englishmen Harry Vardon and Ted Ray helped to popularize the game in this country as the pair attracted "record" crowds everywhere they played. That September a 20-year-old "local boy," Francis Ouimet, defeated both of the visitors in a playoff for the United States Open Championship at Brookline, Mass., and his victory became a golf benchmark. Suddenly, golf became Page One news and a game for everyone.

The forerunner of today's PGA Tour is traced to the early Twenties when, in the Winter, tournaments were held on the West Coast, Texas, and Florida. Golfers played their way into the East and up to Pinehurst in the Spring. Those years have been recalled by Johnny Farrell, one of the most active players of that decade and the next, as well as the 1928 U.S. Open champion: "Those tournaments gave the boys some activity in the off-season because most were busy at their clubs in the Summer. The Summer was when the golf associations would hold regional and national title events."

Resorts, hotels, and Chambers of Commerce realized the publicity value that professional golf brought to their facilities and more tournaments sprang up. Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, and Bobby Jones became folk heroes and the Tour was taking shape.

By the Thirties the Tour was growing, and with the PGA of America providing leadership, it attracted throngs despite the financially depressed years at the beginning of the decade. One statistic from those days stands out now with economic poignancy: Paul Runyan was the leading money-winner of 1934 with $6,767. Late in the decade the name of Sam Snead started to appear in headlines with regularity. Then, as the Forties started, Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson, and a host of others gained fame.

After World War II, the Tour became more structured than ever before and continued to grow in popularity until it exploded as the Fifties were turning into the Sixties. (Elsewhere in this Media Guide, our records such as leading money-winner, growth of our purses, etc., reflect this growth.)

About this time television began playing a dual role. Telecasts of PGA Tour events inspired millions to try the game, and, at the same time, the TV rights fees sent purses rolling upward. The bulk of rights fees, which are distributed by the PGA Tour to all cosponsors, have gone back into purses, accounting for the doubling of purses in the last decade.

It was late in 1968 when the touring professionals picked up the reins of control of the Tour. Joseph C. Dey was the first Commissioner of what was then called the Tournament Players Division. He served from early 1969 through February 28, 1974, and was succeeded by Deane R. Beman, who took office on March 1, 1974.

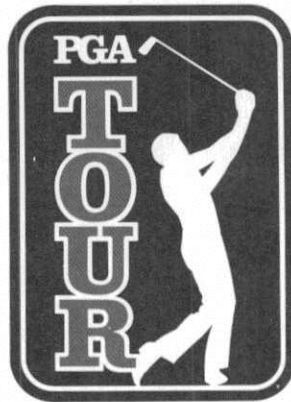

During the Beman administration the value of tournament purses have escalated and are likely to reach $14 million by 1981. The PGA Tour operation has become more business-like and professional. An agronomist has been added to the staff to provide turf management advice and assistance to all events. The Tournament Players Championship, the players' own, has become one of the most significant events on the Tour and the new World Series of Golf has provided a climax to the season.

You can't keep a good man down, even though he has had two major injuries requiring surgery in the last five years. In 1975 he underwent surgery for a torn tendon in his left wrist, an injury which had knocked him from the Top 60 list during 1974, 1975 and curtailed his play in 1976.

He returned to solid form in 1977, spurred by a late 1976 victory in the Del Webb Sahara Invitational. He enjoyed a fine 1977 season, earning $113,944, good for 20th position.

But a back problem kept him from playing effectively again in 1978, when he cashed for just over $6,600. Finally undergoing surgery, in which two discs were fused in early 1979, he returned to Tour competition last year in late July at the Quad Cities Open. He played in 10 events and earned more than $9,500, spurred by solid efforts at the Pleasant Valley Classic (T-13) and the Buick-Goodwrench Open (T-14).

After his strong finish at tough Warwick Hills in the Buick event, Archer said, "I'm not pushing it. I can't follow through strongly yet, but I don't let anything bother me. I'm just happy to be out here and playing decently."

Exceptionally tall men like Archer seldom play the game with excellence, and no other man standing 6-feet-5 has accomplished what George has in golf. A legendary putting stroke has helped overcome whatever shortcomings tall men are supposed to experience.

Archer began playing golf at age 12 around his native San Francisco and he gathered an exceptional amateur record before he turned pro 13 years later. In 1963 alone he won the Trans-Mississippi Amateur, the Northern California Open and the San Francisco City title, reached the semifinals of the U. S. Amateur and was low amateur for the third straight year in the Lucky International in his home town.

As a pro he has won 12 events, including three in 1968, but the year following was his most memorable when he captured the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am and his one major championship when he beat out Billy Casper, George Knudson and Tom Weiskopf to take the Masters.

When a player has an "off" season yet still wins one title and more than $200,000, the tag Superstar may be applied without fear of contradiction. Although his 1979 season was a slight disappointment, coming after a 1978 campaign which produced three titles, Andy Bean added to some already impressive credentials last year.

Just into his fifth PGA Tour season, the big guy from Lafayette, Ga., and the University of Florida lists five career victories, more than $600,000 in career earnings and the increasing respect of his Tour peers.

Just ask those who played the Atlanta Classic last year, where Bean was two shots out of the lead after 36 holes, then uncorked a 61 to almost lap the field. His closing 67 left him a gaping eight-shot margin of victory over runnerup Joe Inman. The margin of victory was the biggest of the year; his 61-67 finish tied for low back-to-back rounds of the year; and his total of 265 (23 under par) was also the year's low.

In all, Bean cashed checks in 21 of the 29 events he started. He showed early leg by gaining a share of fourth place at the Phoenix Open, then nearly won the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, tying with Lon Hinkle and Mark Hayes after 72 holes, only to lose the playoff to Hinkle's birdie on the third extra hole.

He later added ties for third place in consecutive weeks at Los Angeles and the Bay Hill Citrus Classic, and also shared third place at the Kemper Open — the week before his victory at Atlanta. Bean finished the season with 10 top ten finishes, and his stroke average, though above his excellent 1978 mark of 70.94, was a very respectable 71.52.

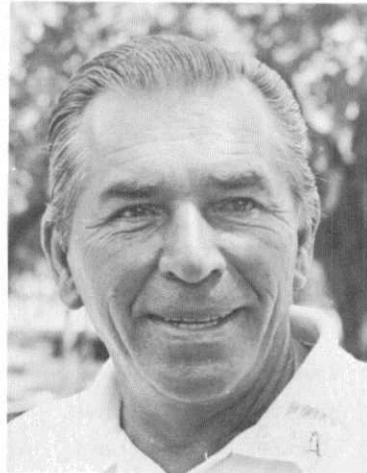

In his first Tour victory at Doral, Andy led all four days on the Blue Monster course, shooting 67-67-71-72—277. The win became a birthday present; he turned 24 on the final day, March 13.

During his rookie year of 1976, Bean's play was disappointing, especially to himself. "It was mainly temperament," he says. "I knew I had the game to play out here, but when I'd make a mistake I'd get hot at myself, and that would make everything worse. I wasn't able to manage my game."

Andy certainly had the background to become a professional golfer. As a youngster, he lived on Jekyll Island, Ga., where his father was associated with a golf course. When he was 15, the family moved to Lakeland, Fla., where his father bought a course.

"I've been lucky," says Bean, "because my parents never made me do much work around the course. They let me go play." And play he did.

It is seldom that a man can play on the PGA Tour for parts of four decades, but that is what Julius Boros will do this year. He was a late arrival, too, being nearly 30 years of age when he started in 1950.

It has been a grand-and-glorious career, with 18 Tour victories that includes two United States Opens and a PGA Championship. His first victory was the 1952 Open at Northwood in Dallas. It was 11 years later that he bested Jacky Cupit and Arnold Palmer in the Open at Brookline, Mass., in a playoff.

He had to beat back the challenge of Palmer again in the PGA of 1968 at Pecan Valley in San Antonio. A few weeks later, at age 48, he won the Westchester Classic, and that was his last Tour triumph.

The last few years, Julius has been forced to cut back on his schedule because of back and hip problems, but as long as he feels able — and there is a good fishing pond nearby — he plans to keep playing 10-to-12 tournaments a year.

Julius was headed toward a career in accounting when he decided the lure of the Tour was too great. Actually, with the success he has enjoyed, his early training in keeping the books must have come in handy.

While playing a limited schedule these days, he still has the skills to compete and is a favorite among the older folks in the gallery wherever he goes.

Although his last victory on the Tour was in the 1968 Westchester Classic, he nearly won that event again in 1975. With a final-round 65, he tied with Gene Littler for the title at 17-under par, but Julius bogeyed the first extra hole when he flew the green with his approach.

Just a week before that, he was kidding Art Wall about Art's victory in the Greater Milwaukee Open. "You are bringing all us old guys back out," Julius said.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner of 1971 USGA Juniors, 1973 and 1976 California Amateur, 1973 Pacific Coast Amateur, 1973 California Open, 1975 Utah Open, 1976 Northern California Amateur. Member 1977 Walker Cup team, 1976 All-America team.

Mike Brannan charted the road he would follow in the summer of 1971 when he won the United States Junior golf championship as a 15-year-old. At the time, he was the youngest ever to win the title.

"Golf was becoming my main sport," Mike says, "but when I won the Juniors, that's when I decided to work harder than ever on my game."

He enjoyed considerable success as an amateur on the West Coast, so it came as no surprise to his followers when he continued to be successful through his first year on the PGA Tour.

He swept three important titles as a 17-year-old, winning the California Amateur and Open championships and the Pacific Coast Amateur, all in the summer of 1973. There was one crown that got away that year, though. He lost in the final of the U.S. Juniors to Jack Renner.

Mike started to play golf as a 10-year-old in Salinas, Calif. "My Dad played, and my brother and I used to follow him around. That's why we started on our own."

His first competition came during the Christmas Holidays and he was second in the two-day event for 11-year-olds and under. The next spring and summer, he worked at a local driving range, picking up balls and he was permitted to "hit as many as I wanted."

After being graduated from high school, he headed for Brigham Young University. In the fall of 1978, in his first try at the Tour's Qualifying School, he made it.

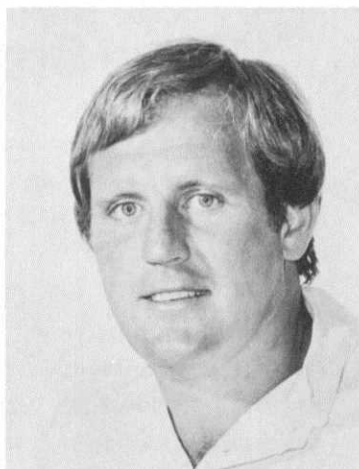

He had little success in the early going of his rookie year, but the first ray of sunshine came in the Doral-Eastern Open. "I played well for four days and finished with a 68," he said. "I tied for 12th, and I felt then that I belonged on the Tour and could compete."

Although he did not distinguish himself in the next four events he entered, his big week came in Houston. He came out of the Monday qualifier as the fifth alternate, and went on to finish second to Wayne Levi at the Woodlands Country Club. He won $32,400.

"That one tournament turned my views around," he continued. "Now, I felt certain I could make the top 60."

The next week, he tied for fifth in the Byron Nelson Classic in Dallas, so, in two weeks, he won nearly $43,000. His next strong effort came in August when he opened with 67-67 in the Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open and finished tied for eighth.

1979 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—33; in money—22; top ten finishes—6; stroke avg.—72.19.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1973 Canadian Amateur and 1974 Porter Cup, North-South Amateur, and New York State Amateur. As professional, won 1975 Scandinavian Open and 1975 Kerrygold (Ireland). 1975 Walker Cup team and 1975 World Amateur Cup team.

Despite a mild late-season slump, during which he missed three successive cuts, George Burns set a new personal high in earnings during 1979. That elusive first PGA Tour victory remained exactly that, however, for the former University of Maryland football candidate and No. 1 golfer.

Although he hasn't kept pace with fellow 1975 Fall Q School classmates Andy Bean, Jerry Pate, Gary Koch and Bob Gilder in the victory column, Burns continued to demonstrate why many observers feel that big things are still ahead for this native of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Burns cashed checks in 22 of 33 tournaments, claiming a half-dozen top 10 finishes. Falling into the category of ones which got away were Greensboro, where he was in second place, a single shot back of winner Ray Floyd; the TPC, where a final-round 83 dropped him from a share of second to all the way to 14th place; and the Buick-Goodwrench, where he was just two shots back at the halfway point but finished with rounds of 72-72 for a tie for eighth.

Burns also squandered a second-round 63 at the Hawaiian Open which had moved him into a share of the lead. A closing 73 there — 10 shots higher — left him in a tie for ninth.

Still, it was a solid season, much like his 1977 effort which produced $102,026 in earnings and checks in 25 of 30 starts.

During his rookie 1976 season, Burns was the final-round leader at Houston, only to have his putter go sour. He also led at Pinehurst in the World Open, but a closing 73 left him one shot out of the playoff between Jerry McGee and Ray Floyd.

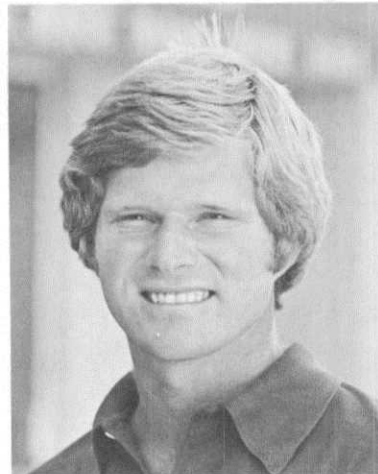

Burns was too busy playing all sports in high school on Long Island to concentrate on golf. He lettered in football and basketball and entered the University of Maryland with the primary purpose of playing football, in addition to earning a degree.

He was a defensive end for the Terps, but recalls, "I realized I wasn't going to go anywhere in football." He concentrated on golf from his freshman year forward.

However, it was a full year after his graduation before he blossomed as a force in amateur golf. While working for two years in the New York City area in sales and promotion, he had a chance to play often, and in 1973 he won the Canadian Amateur. The following year Burns won the Porter Cup, North-South Amateur and the New York State Amateur.

Burns was selected to play on the Walker Cup team in 1975 and also on the U.S. side in the World Amateur team championship. "Playing for my country on those teams always will be among the biggest enjoyments I've had in sports," he says today.

Since he was a boy, Bob Byman had this recurring desire: "It was really a dream . . . that I would win a tournament on the Tour," he said. That dream came true on March 4, 1979 in the Bay Hill Citrus Classic. Victory came earlier than Byman had dreamed and sooner than he had planned.

According to his game plan, Byman was preparing himself to win the Tournament Players Championship. That title, and the 10-year exemption from qualifying which goes with it, was Bob's immediate goal.

"But since I was 10 or 12," he said recently, "I knew I wanted to be on Tour and I was always dreaming about winning." In 1972 he started on the way to fulfilling his dream. He won the U. S. Junior Championship that year. Later he attended Wake Forest and held an Arnold Palmer Scholarship. At Wake Forest, Bob played on the golf team with Curtis Strange and Jay Haas that won the NCAA team championship.

Professional golf tugged harder at Byman's heart than did his studies and Byman turned pro in 1976. He attended the Tour's Qualifying School that December at Brownsville, Texas and failed to earn his card. He also missed, by one stroke, the following June at Pinehurst, N.C.

"I decided to pass up the School in the Fall of 1977," Byman has recalled, "and, although it appeared to be a wrong move at the time, I believe now it was a blessing in disguise."

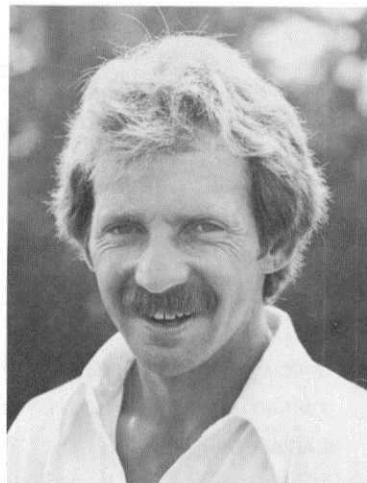

Byman played in several mini-tours — "I won three or four" — and then looked abroad for additional competition and experience. He won the 1977 Dutch Open, and a few weeks later, the Scandinavian Open. Later that year he went "Down Under" and won the New Zealand Open.

"Thanks to those three wins," he said, "I became known in Europe and Australia and that earned me some lucrative connections. But I still wasn't known at home."

Bob and his brother Ed competed in the 1978 Qualifying School at Albuquerque, N.M. and both earned their cards. Bob finished tied for sixth and Ed tied for 12th, and Bob faced a busy schedule. After missing the cut in the U. S. Open, days after the Q School, he went overseas to play in the British Open. He had an exemption because of his previous year's play in Europe. He tied for 16th in the British, thus earning an exemption for 1979. Then he successfully defended his Dutch Open title.

Although his victory at Bay Hill was the key to his 1979 season, he added a tie for eighth at the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic and a solo 11th place effort at the IVB-Philadelphia Classic to push his season's cash total to $94,242 — quite an improvement over his rookie 1978 season which listed just one top-ten finish (T10, B.C. Open) and $14,838 in earnings.

Continued improvement marked the 1979 effort of Rex Caldwell, the happy-go-lucky man from Everett, Washington, who now makes Tallahassee, Fla. his headquarters. Though Rex failed to win, a succession of opportunities to do so presented themselves in 1979, including a heady experience at the PGA Championship which, at its conclusion, became a little gut-wrenching.

Caldwell was one shot back of Watson after the PGA's first round at Oakland Hills, and his 66 in the third round gave him a two-shot margin over Ben Crenshaw. But it wasn't to be. David Graham closed with a superlative 65, Crenshaw with a 67, and Graham won the playoff — while Caldwell's 71 produced a solo third place.

The PGA wasn't Caldwell's only top-ten finish however. The lanky San Fernando Valley State product had earlier claimed fifth place in the Greater Greensboro Open, then fourth two weeks later in the Tallahassee Open in front of his "new" hometown gallery.

The big difference for Caldwell over the last two years — he's been among the top 50 money-winners both years — has been his putting. After three-putting himself out of the Hawaiian Open in 1978, he headed home and spent a solid week, from dawn to dusk, hitting putts. Thus equipped, with new confidence and a solid stroke, he went to the Bob Hope Desert Classic and finished fourth. His top-ten finishes since then number a solid 12 — seven in 1978, five in 1979.

Caldwell didn't start to play golf until his 14th birthday. But it took only a few trips to the club with his father to convince him that he had found his game. He made the Lompoc, Calif., High School team as a sophomore.

After two years of junior college, he earned a golf scholarship to San Fernando Valley — and began to take his game seriously. He had dreams of playing the PGA Tour, but it wasn't until after working one summer at the Arnold Palmer Golf Academy at Stratton, Vt., then spending two years on the mini-tours, that he felt he was ready to give the Tour a try.

He entered the 1974 Fall Qualifying School and made it, sharing the lead going into the final round at the Canyon Club in Palm Springs before finishing seventh.

After struggling to make $24,912 in 1976, Caldwell slipped to just $11,693 in 1977 — setting the stage for his putting rebirth after the 1978 Hawaiian Open.

1979 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—19; in money—7; top ten finishes—1; stroke avg.—73.63.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1966 and 1970 PGA Player of the Year. Winner 1960, 1963, 1965, 1966, and 1968 Vardon Trophy. Winner 1974 Lancome (France) and 1975 Italian Open. 1961 through 1975 Ryder Cup team. Won 1977 Mexican Open. Captain, 1979 Ryder Cup team.

Although most of Billy Casper's 1979 season was less than he hoped for, a hint of his glorious 24-year career was more than evident at the Tallahassee Open where the maestro posted a final-round 67 to gain a share of fifth place — his best finish in two years in PGA Tour competition.

Casper celebrated his 48th birthday at mid-season last year, a season which marked just his third finish out of the Top 60 since his rookie campaign back in 1955. He still feels he has the ability to grab his 52nd career title.

In 1975 Casper topped the $100,000 mark for the eighth time in a ten-year stretch, and was the leading money winner on the PGA Tour in 1966 and 1968, when he won six tournaments and earned more than $200,000. Also in 1975, after skipping three straight events while wife Shirley was presenting him with their 10th child, Billy won the New Orleans Open with a 17-under total of 271.

Often forgotten is the fact that Casper was the second man to earn $1 million in purses, when he won the Los Angeles Open in January, 1970. He topped the golden barrier less than two years after Arnold Palmer did so.

The year 1970 also was notable for his winning the Masters title in an 18-hole playoff with fellow San Diego great Gene Littler.

Five times Casper won the Vardon Trophy, which is awarded annually to the member of the PGA of America with the lowest scoring average for at least 80 official rounds on Tour. Casper also qualified to play on eight straight Ryder Cup teams, from 1961 through 1975.

After two seasons away from the Top 60 list, Jim Colbert enjoyed a resurgence during 1979 which saw him earn more than $90,000 for only the second time in his 14-year career. There was no magic involved, just a lot of hard work over a 30-tournament schedule.

The season continued an upward climb Colbert started after sliding to 106th, with earnings of just $20,102, in 1977 due to knee surgery and a slow return to form.

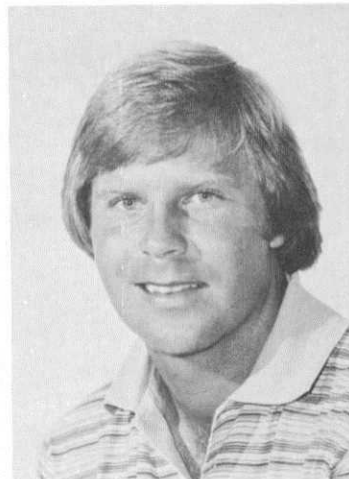

He advanced to 70th on the final money standings with $46,260 in 1978, then looked like the Jim Colbert of old during last year as he totaled five top-ten finishes, 24 paychecks in 30 events and a once-again healthy stroke average of 71.74. His best finishes were spread throughout the year. He was tied for seventh in both the Los Angeles Open and the Memorial; he was fourth alone at the Buick-Goodwrench; and he tied for fourth at the Colonial.

Colbert had enjoyed four consecutive years in the victory column from 1972 through 1975. His best season was 1974, when he came off a fifth-place finish at the U. S. Open to enter the final round of the American Golf Classic at Firestone three shots behind Forrest Fezler. His final-round 70 gained him a playoff berth with Fezler, Ray Floyd and Gay Brewer, and he won the shootout on the second extra hole. In 1975 he teamed with Dean Refram to win the Walt Disney World Team Championship.

Although born in New Jersey, Colbert grew up in Kansas and was an all-state football player and winner of the Kansas State Junior golf title at age 11. He entered Kansas State University on a football scholarship, but golf became his career goal after he finished second in the 1964 NCAA championship.

Jim cracked to Top 60 money list in his second year on Tour, and after falling out of the top 100 in 1968, he won the Monsanto Open in 1969 at Pensacola. He won again at the Greater Milwaukee Open in 1972 and added the Greater Jacksonville Open in 1973.

Although 1979 was not a total loss in the victory column, Ben Crenshaw's year will be remembered for his astonishing five runnerup finishes. Ben started fast by winning the rain-curtailed Phoenix Open in the second week of the season. And then his year was marked by the five near-misses.

The young man from Austin, Texas, he turned 28 on January 11, has plenty of great golf ahead of him as well as an already significant record which lists six titles, career earnings of more than $930,000 and three consecutive seasons of more than $100,000 in earnings.

That's not the record of a man who struggles with either himself or his game. It's difficult, however, not to add up what might have been in 1979 had those second-place finishes been victories . . . in the PGA Championship, the British Open, the Western Open, the Canadian Open and the American Optical Classic at Pleasant Valley. It would have meant a season of six victories, more than $340,000 in earnings and a whale of a contest with Tom Watson for player of the year honors.

The PGA was a particularly tough experience for Ben. David Graham finished with a 65 to tie Crenshaw and the pair became involved in an exciting sudden-victory playoff. Graham birdied the third hole to win the title.

Crenshaw came to the Tour in the Fall of 1973 after compiling an amateur record seldom authored by anyone. It didn't include the U.S. Amateur title, but he did win the NCAA championship three years running, sharing it with U. of Texas teammate Tom Kite in 1972.

In his first appearance after earning his approved Tournament Player's card for the PGA Tour, he won the San Antonio-Texas Open. He followed with a second place in the 1974 World Open, then a 144-hole, $500,000 event, and wound up the short year with more than $76,000 earned in only nine tournaments. He also averaged 69.9 strokes for 42 competitive rounds.

He was winless the next two years while undergoing a thorough examination of his long swing, but he placed in the top 10 in three 1974 events, and in 1975 he finished only a shot back in the U.S. Open at Medinah after his two iron from the 71st tee splashed in the lake and resulted in a double-bogey five.

Although 1979 was Rod Curl's 11th season on the PGA Tour, it was just his fifth among the Top 60 exempt players. The culprit behind his inability to maintain consistency has been a wrist problem which can be traced to an overly lengthy practice session — off hard-pan — during the 1974 B.C. Open.

The painful wrist stemming from that session curtailed a solidly blooming 1974 campaign, in which he won at the Colonial National Invitation and earned a career-high $120,154. And it continued to plague him until surgery, in late 1976, helped to alleviate the problem. His 1977 season marked a comeback to Top 60 status with earnings of $55,495, but he slipped off the select list again in 1978 when his $47,274 in checks came up six positions short.

An early third-place finish, at the Doral-Eastern Open, offered promise as Curl maintained a busy schedule of 30 tournament starts during 1979. He cashed in 21 of them. By late summer, it appeared that Curl would once again finish out of the Top 60. Then he found himself the second-round co-leader after a 65 at the Ed McMahon-Quad Cities Open, although he slipped to a tie for eighth place.

Then in consecutive weeks in September he rang up ties for fourth and fifth at the B.C. Open and the Pleasant Valley Classic, pulling in paychecks for more than $20,000 for the two tournaments which assured his Top 60 finish.

After joining the Tour in 1969, it took Curl five full seasons to make the Top 60 for the first time — a 53rd-place finish in 1973 off a $55,068 cashing effort keyed by five top-ten performances.

Rod is three-fourths Wintu Indian and was named "Yoso" by his mother. "That's the name of a flower in northern California," he explains.

An old football knee injury, which he's lived with for his entire golfing career, bothered Lee Elder enough in 1979 to prevent his return to the Top 60. Elder was close, earning more than $65,000, but the hot late-season surge he enjoyed in 1978 was not to be.

All three of Elder's top 10 finishes last year came early in the season. He tied for fourth at the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic, tied for sixth at the Greater Greensboro Open and added a tie for eighth at the Tournament of Champions. Although Larry Nelson had the Inverrary title in hand over the final 36 holes, Elder pounded out solid rounds of 72-71-68-70 to pass a number of players who were sliding off the leader board over the final two days. His check for $13,200 there was his best of the year.

That hot streak during the summer of 1978 was Elder's finest stretch ever. He won a playoff at Milwaukee over Lee Trevino; tied for sixth at Philadelphia; tied for second at Hartford; then, after so-so finishes in the PGA and the American Optical Classic, he won again at Westchester, cashing a final-hole birdie to edge Mark Hayes by a single shot.

Although that hot streak was missing last year, Elder won money in 18 of 24 starts. A long, active season and pain from the knee, particularly troublesome on hilly layouts, slowed his late-season efforts.

At Pensacola in 1974, Elder came through with his first triumph by sinking an 18-foot birdie putt on the fourth playoff hole of the Monsanto Open. That was drama enough for anyone, but the victory also qualified him to become the first black to earn an invitation to play in the Masters.

Almost exactly two years after the Pensacola triumph, Elder won the 1976 Houston Open while he was sitting in the clubhouse. Because the first round was rained out, a double round was scheduled that Sunday and Elder, although only six shots back of the lead, was in the first threesome to tee off in the morning. He shot a five-under 67 to trail by one and, while the other leaders were teeing off No. 1 in the afternoon Elder was starting on the 10th.

He closed with a 69 for a 10-under 278 total and was persuaded to stay, although he wanted to catch a flight home to Washington, D.C., before the awards ceremonies were scheduled. An hour and a half later the remainder of the field finished and he won by one stroke over Forrest Fezler.

The year between those two victories was disappointing to Lee. Not only did he fail to survive the cut in the 1975 Masters, but he wound up the year in 81st position on the money list with only three top-10 finishes. It was only the second time in his eight years on Tour that he missed the Top 60 money list.

Elder qualified for the PGA Tour in the Fall of 1967 and in his first full year he caused a stir by tying for first in the American Golf Classic and taking Jack Nicklaus to the fifth extra hole before losing.

Keith Fergus has quickly become recognized as one of the fine strikers of the ball on the PGA Tour. And even after he had lipped out a birdie putt at the final hole during the Colgate Hall of Fame Classic which would have tied him for the lead, he was calm and collected.

"I can't complain," he said. "I played my most solid tournament ever from tee to green this week. I was in position to do it, and it didn't happen. But I know what it takes," he added, while Tom Watson was defeating a resurgent Johnny Miller on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff for the Colgate title.

That third-place finish at Pinehurst ignited a hot wrap up for the 1976 Fall Q School medalist. He made two more starts after Pinehurst, finishing in a tie for fifth in both of them — the San Antonio Texas Open and the Pensacola Open. Together, the three late-season finishes carried the runnerup in the 1975 U.S. Amateur to 37th on the final money list with $97,045 — doubling the earnings of his first two Tour seasons.

In all, Fergus had seven top-ten finishes and a total of 24 paychecks in 29 starts. His stroke average was a fine 71.25 for the year.

During his first year of 1977, he said, "It took me three or four months to get used to the Tour, to get to know the other players, and to get used to playing in front of crowds.

"When I started 1978, I had a lot more confidence, not only in my game, but also in everything I was doing. I felt I belonged on the Tour. Now, I knew when to practice, how to practice and when it was time to go home and rest."

Keith started to play golf at age eight. He played all sports through his first couple of years in high school, but then decided it was time to concentrate on golf.

He won the Texas State Junior championship in 1971 and was runner-up in the state high school tournament the following year. He went on to the University of Houston and gained All-American status his final three years. In the summer of 1975, he lost to Fred Ridley in the final of the United States Amateur.

Ed Fiori doesn't mind admitting, "I was lucky," when the topic gets around to his first PGA Tour victory in the 1979 Southern Open at the Green Island Country Club in Columbus, Ga.

"I certainly wasn't expecting to win," he says of his playoff win over Tom Weiskopf. "There were some unusual things that happened that let me win, such as Mike Reid taking those bogeys on the final holes, and Tom missing the four-footer on the first playoff hole."

Ed became the 11th first-time winner of 1979 when he birdied the second extra hole to gain the triumph and the check for $36,000. His best previous finish for the year in a major Tour event was a tie for 14th in the Tournament Players Championship.

The stocky Fiori started in the game at age seven. "We lived next to a course in Downey, Calif., and I used to sneak through the strands of barbed wire to play. About twice a week, they would catch me and my pal and chase us off. A neighbor had given me a few clubs to use."

After high school, Ed started to work at odd jobs around southern California, mainly in construction work. He also found enough time to play considerable golf, "wherever I could find a game."

One of those golf excursions took him to a tournament in Guadalajara, Mexico. He birdied the last four holes to get into a playoff with Craig Stadler and Jack Renner. Stadler won the playoff, but a University of Houston alumnus was there and was impressed. He recommended him to the Cougars.

"I had been out of high school for four years, so I went to Wharton Junior College for a semester, sat out a semester and then transferred to Houston."

His second year, the Cougars won the NCAA team title, and Ed was named to the All-America team. "Until then, I had not thought much about joining the PGA Tour, but that was all the guys on the team talked about . . . getting on the Tour."

Ed dropped out of Houston in the spring of 1977, played a few mini-tour events that summer and went to the Qualifying School in the fall. He was the medalist.

As a rookie in 1978, he tied for fourth in the Doral-Eastern Open and that was his best finish until the Southern.

"Until I won," he said, "I was ready to chalk up the first two years on the Tour as a learning experience."

In something of a comeback season, Ray Floyd added his 11th title and returned to the $100,000 plateau for the sixth time in his 17-year career. He wasn't quite as sharp as during his banner 1976 and 1977 campaigns, but a victory at the Greater Greensboro Open plus five other top-ten finishes made it a satisfying year.

During 1978, Floyd had slipped to less than $80,000 in official checks, his first year out of the top 20 in five years.

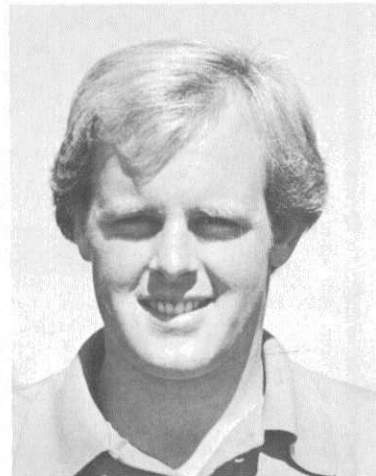

Although not known as a come-from-behind player, Floyd did exactly that at Greensboro. A pair of clutch birdies on the 71st and 72nd holes set up the win, although the outcome was in doubt until Gary Player's five-foot birdie putt to tie on the final hole slid past.

Floyd grew up in Ft. Bragg, N.C., the son of an Army man who is now co-owner of the Cypress Lakes Club in Fayetteville. Although he was exposed to golf at an early age, Ray almost chose to pursue baseball, until he won the National Jaycees Junior Golf Title in 1960. He turned pro the following year, joined the Tour in 1963, won the St. Petersburg Open as a rookie and only twice has failed to finish among the Top 60 money-winners since.

In 1972 and 1973 Raymond was in a slump, but he rebounded smartly with more than $100,000 in earnings in 1974 and then started to win again. Perhaps his most notable victory was in the 1976 Masters. Raymond won it by eight strokes, tying Jack Nicklaus' tournament record of 17-under 271.

In 1977 he was tied with Ben Crenshaw for the lead after three rounds of the Byron Nelson Classic in Dallas and he held a three-shot lead entering the final day of the Pleasant Valley Classic. On both occasions he reported in with two-under 69s in the final round to win, beating out Nicklaus and a designated field in the latter event at Sutton, Mass.

The 1979 season was just about what John Fought had been expecting of himself. But it was more than a year late in arriving, since he was twice unsuccessful in earning his Tour "card". Once he sank his teeth into Tour competition, however, the six-footer out of Brigham Young made the most of it.

Not since Roger Maltbie won back-to-back titles in 1975 had a PGA Tour rookie "arrived" with such sudden success. Fought rang up his consecutive titles at the Buick-Goodwrench Open and the Anheuser-Busch Classic, and his season-ending total of $108,427 was the third highest ever by a rookie.

Through early September, Fought looked like a lot of other rookies — a number of cuts missed, a few good checks cashed. He had, however, tied for 13th at the Western Open, and added a tie for 14th at Hartford. "I began to think that if I did get into position to win one, I could do it," he said later.

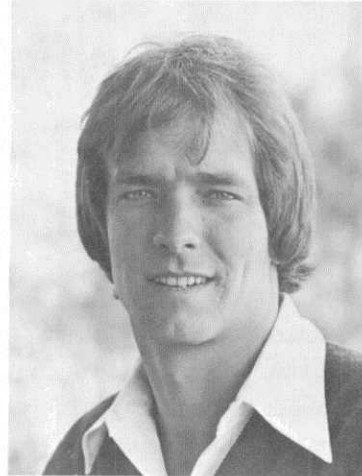

At the Buick, in Flint, Mich., the lights came on. Fought was two shots out of the lead after three rounds and he could say, without a trace of uneasiness, "I think I can do it. Even if I have to play that 18th hole with a one shot lead tomorrow, I think I can win."

After scoring two double bogeys and a bogey over three rounds on "that 18th hole" at Warwick Hills CC, his comments might have seemed brash. But when he did come to that 18th hole he did not have a one-shot lead — he was one behind. So he smashed a 330-yard drive into perfect position, dropped an eight iron 10 feet from the pin and drained the birdie putt to tie Jim Simons. Fought won the tournament with a routine par on the second playoff hole when Simons sailed his tee shot on the par three into the trees.

A week later, Fought didn't know what to expect as he went to the first tee in Napa, Calif. "I hit the first tee shot more than 300 yards down the middle and thought, 'I've still got it. Maybe I can win here, too.' " And he did, making another 72nd hole birdie to break out of a five-way deadlock for the lead.

A solid collegiate career, during which he won the 1975 Pacific Coast Amateur and the 1976 Pacific Northwest Open, set the stage for Fought's drive to victory in the 1977 U.S. Amateur at Aronimink, near Philadelphia.

The Buddy Gardner story is one that could serve as an inspiration to all aspiring touring professionals.

After a fine amateur career, Buddy entered the PGA Tour's Qualifying School in the fall of 1977 and earned his player's card. His first year, though, was disappointing. He won only $5,637, finished 170th on the 1978 money list and lost his playing privileges. Undaunted, he went back to the Q School in the Fall and passed with flying colors again.

In the first four tournaments he entered in 1979 he failed to qualify, and the doubts were beginning to creep into his mind again. Then came the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, and he surprised everyone but himself, finishing in a tie for second. He won $18,666.66.

"That check eliminated all my worries," he said. "I got right in there with all of them, and when it was over, I knew I could compete on the Tour. Until then, I thought I could, but wasn't certain. The first year, I was more in awe of it all. I couldn't keep my mind on what I was doing."

Buddy went on to play well on several other occasions, too, such as losing in a playoff to Bobby Walzel in the Magnolia Classic, and finally finishing in a tie for second in the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic in early September. That one was worth $22,400 and assured him of a position among the top 60 money winners.

At the Anheuser-Busch, he faced a 10-foot putt for birdie on the final hole that would have moved him into a playoff with John Fought, but he missed.

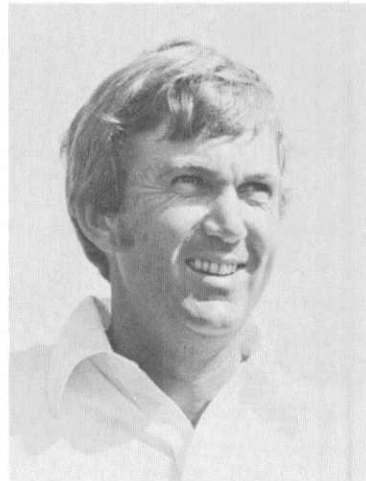

"I was really excited playing the last hole," he said. "All I could think about was winning and going to the Masters."

Buddy suffered through a bad stretch in the summer when he completed only one tournament in nine starts. "By late Spring, I had played myself out," he said, "and I strained my back. I didn't feel right again until late summer."

Buddy started in the game at age five. "We lived about 100 yards from the first tee of the Bonnie Crest Country Club in Montgomery. Everyone in the family played golf, so it was natural for me to play too."

He won the Alabama high school golf championship as a senior, and went on to Auburn on a scholarship. His most important title came when he edged Ron Streck for the 1976 Dixie Amateur championship.

One has to wonder what Al Geiberger's record might be if he were not slowed by various ailments and surgeries over his solid 20-year career. Most recently there was intestinal surgery in early 1978, and his 1979 campaign was shortened by late-September knee surgery. At least his most recent hospital visit was scheduled to permit a return to the 1980 PGA Tour wars in tip-top shape.

Although it was a shortened season, 1979 was fairly typical Geiberger. He won his 12th career title on a big, mean golf course, cashed 14 checks in 20 starts and although he was not among the Top 60 money-winners in mid-season, he closed with more than $70,000, pushing his career total to $1,169,074.

At the Colonial National Invitation, Geiberger out-dueled buddies Gene Littler and Don January to claim the $54,000 first-place check. Geiberger had entered the final round with a four-shot lead, but January made big inroads with a closing 65 while Littler closed from six off the pace to within a shot with a closing 67. Geiberger nearly aced the par-three 16th to lock up the outcome, but when the five-iron shot stopped an inch short, it left room for Littler to challenge. Littler removed himself from contention with an errant tee shot at 18, while January, who had closed to within one, missed an eight-footer at the 72nd hole which would have tied the lanky Californian.

It has been places like Colonial National where Geiberger has been at his best. He won twice at long, rugged Firestone South — the 1965 American Golf Classic and then the 1966 PGA Championship; he won the Tournament Players Championship in 1975 at Colonial, with a then record 10-under 270, and he won the 1976 Western Open at Butler National.

His effort in 1977, at the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic, however, will remain a towering pinnacle of achievement. His record-smashing 59 — 13 under par — remains the lowest round ever in PGA Tour competition. Coming in the second round (on June 10), the 59 was a masterpiece of 11 birdies, one eagle and six pars. Geiberger used only 23 putts in the 30-29 effort, culminating in a eight-footer on the final hole for birdie.

Almost lost in the excitement was the fact that Geiberger went on to win the tournament, although it took a gritty final-round 70 to hold off Gary Player and Jerry McGee.

C. L. Gilbert, Jr. — better known as Gibby — had a few sleepless nights near the end of the 1979 season, but he closed with a flourish to earn his position among the top 60 money winners again.

"I'd wake up in the middle of the night, two or three times," he said, "just thinking about the top 60. That's how bad I wanted to be there."

He finally finished 49th with $76,807, but it wasn't until he won nearly $4,000 in the San Antonio-Texas Open for a tie for 17th and $6,450 for his tie for seventh in the Southern Open that his position was secure.

Over the years, he has been a consistent player, finishing among the top 60 money winners in six of the last seven years. He missed in 1977 because he suffered a severely pulled muscle in his rib cage and was off the Tour for 11 weeks. However, he retained his exemption when he joined with Grier Jones and they won the Walt Disney World National Team Play Championship.

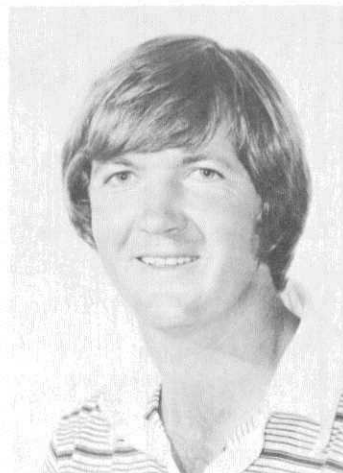

Despite the lack of a given name, Gibby began to make a name for himself in golf early in his native Chattanooga, after taking up the game at age 13. In 1962 he quit the University of Chattanooga, married and two years later became an assistant pro in Hollywood, Fla.

Gilbert finished second to Bobby Cole in the 1967 Qualifying School but struggled for 2½ years before winning the Houston Champions tournament. Recalling that victory years later, he said "I didn't consider myself a good player, but I believe I have become one in the last couple of years."

In 1971 he recorded six straight birdies in the Westchester Classic and finished the year again over the $60,000 level. But he slipped badly in 1972, and by the following Spring he was considering giving up the Tour, when his play improved suddenly.

A highlight of 1973 was a course-record 62 at Pinehurst No. 2 during the World Open. It shattered the record on the famed course by three strokes, although Tom Watson matched it a week later during the 144-hole event.

Few players start their careers on the Tour with the success Bob Gilder enjoyed. In the second event of his rookie season of 1976, he won the Phoenix Open, and went on to become only the fourth first-year player to top $100,000 in earnings.

It was especially pleasing because he was graduated from nearby Arizona State, and he had many close friends in the gallery.

This past year, he became more of a complete player, winning $134,428 for 22nd place on the money list. Although he did not win, he did tie for third in the Houston Open and was third alone in The Memorial Tournament. In the latter at Muirfield Village, he barely made the cut after a second-round 80, but came back brilliantly with 68-69 and won his biggest check of the year, $20,400.

He did turn in one of the lowest rounds of the year, a 10-under 62 in the First NBC New Orleans Open.

Bob starred for the Arizona State golf team and was a team-mate of Tour regulars Tom Purtzer, Howard Twitty and Morris Hatafsky. After he was graduated in 1973, he tried for his Tour card three times without success. Meanwhile, in 1974 he went "down under" and won the New Zealand Open in a playoff over Bob Charles and Jack Newton.

Finally, in the Fall of 1975, Bob earned his card.

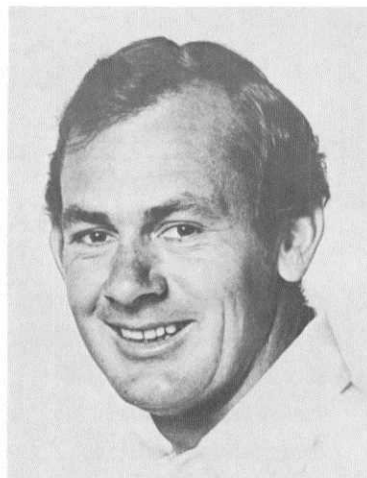

After his excellent start, no one was more disappointed with his sophomore year than Bob, as he fell to $36,844 and 72nd place on the money list, thus losing his exemption.

"I knew that first year wasn't a fluke," he explained, "but I didn't have a national amateur record when I came on Tour, and I wanted to prove to others that I could play. I put pressure on myself.

"I'm normally a good putter, but I putted terrible my second year. Then, I lost all confidence. I couldn't remember what I did when I putted well," he added.

He also believes a swing change may have hurt his game. "The first year, I never hit a hook. The left side was not a part of my game. So, I tried to release more down the line, turning through the shot. I had been sliding my knees through the shot and dipping my head. I wanted to get away from the head dip."

Foreign victories include 1970 French Open, 1970 Thailand Open, 1971 Caracas Open, 1971 Japan Open, 1975 Wills Masters, 1976 Chunichi Crowns Invitational (Japan), 1976 Picadilly World Match Play, 1977 Australian Open and 1977 South African PGA, 1978 Mexico Cup.

Not since 1976, when he won the Westchester Classic and the American Golf Classic, did David Graham enjoy as fine a season as he did in 1979. He won just once, but it was a big one — the PGA Championship at rugged Oakland Hills CC in Birmingham, Mich.

Not that his PGA victory was easy. It was anything but. Headed for an apparent easy victory and a possible final-round 63, Graham nearly gave it all away with a double-bogey six at the 72nd hole. His final 65 left him in a tie with Ben Crenshaw, and Crenshaw seemed ready to put away the title over each of the first two playoff holes. But on both, Graham survived, holing a 25-footer for par at the first, then a six-footer for birdie at the second.

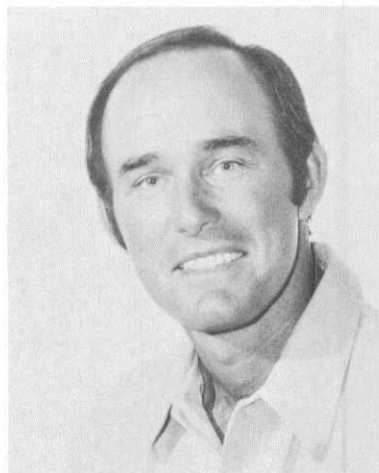

At the third hole, Crenshaw blocked his tee shot at the par three to the right, into a bunker, while Graham zipped his to within four feet. Crenshaw failed to get it up and down, which was anticlimactic, because Graham canned the four-footer for birdie and his biggest victory of a nine-year career on the PGA Tour.

Graham also threatened at Westchester, finishing in a tie for second just one shot back of winner Jack Renner. He was the leader by one to start the final day, but slipped to a 71 while Renner motored past to victory with a 67. A third-place finish at Atlanta was another of a total of nine top-10 finishes logged by the slender Aussie, en route to $177,683 in earnings, his best ever.

Graham was only 16 when he turned pro, but his tournament career did not begin until the late 1960s in his native Australia and on the Far East circuit. A tournament-record 62 helped him tie for first in the 1969 Singapore Open but he lost the playoff. He came to America the following year and failed to earn his playing card at the 1970 Qualifying School, but the very next week he and Bruce Devlin won the World Cup for Australia.

In 1971, in addition to winning the Caracas Open and the Japan Air Lines Open, Graham succeeded in the Tour School. In his rookie year of 1972, a full decade after turning pro, he won the Cleveland Open by beating Devlin on the second playoff hole.

Just when he was being acclaimed as the best player who had not won a title in three years, Lou Graham turned into a three-time victor and winner of more than $190,000 in 1979. He doubled his career victory total in less than three months, bringing the number to six, and also raced into the million dollar career earnings circle in one glorious season.

Like the famous sippin' whiskies produced in his native Nashville, Graham improves with age. But more directly involved were some major changes. An entirely new set of irons for openers, along with a new putter — surrendering one which had given him 12 years of solid service. The irons had provided 17 years' use — since 1962, when Graham first turned professional.

Graham had begun the 1979 season in a slump, the deepest of his career. He was beyond telescope range of the Top 60 when, after eight months of agony, the touch returned at the IVB-Philadelphia Classic. Starting the final round six shots back, Graham scorched Whitemarsh Valley with eight birdies and one bogey for a 64 which pulled him into a tie with Bobby Wadkins after 72 holes. He promptly knocked in a 2½-foot birdie on the first playoff hole to settle the issue.

Five weeks later, his 71-69 in the 36-hole final day of the Pleasant Valley Classic edged Ben Crenshaw by a single shot. And then at the San Antonio-Texas Open, he returned cards of 69-64-69-66 for a 12-under 268 which provided another one-shot margin of victory over pursuing Doug Tewell, Bill Rogers and Eddie Pearce.

Surprisingly, the last year Graham earned less than $100,000 was 1975 — the year he won the U.S. Open at Chicago's Medinah CC. His initial Tour title came in 1967 at the Minnesota Classic, and he also won the 1972 Liggett & Myers.

Graham turned pro after discharge from the Army in 1962 and worked at two clubs near Baltimore before striking out on the Tour in 1964. He won his first Tour event, the Minnesota Classic, three years later and only once since then, when he needed surgery to repair tendinitis in his left hand in 1969, has he failed to finish among the Top 60 money winners.

Hubert Green has been averaging two victories per season since 1974, and he maintained that pace through 1979 with a repeat victory at the Hawaiian Open and another in the NBC New Orleans Open. He didn't match his 1978 earnings performance, a personal high of $247,406, but the $183,111 in checks he did cash was still well within the year's top 20.

At the Waialae Country Club, Green's name will likely be permanently carved into the leader board. He's been at the top of it two years running, and now he has the course and tournament record as well. Posting rounds of 68-67-63-69, Green was never seriously threatened during the final round, his 21-under total of 267 standing as the second-lowest winning score of the season.

The New Orleans title came a little tougher, Green having to fend off Steve Melnyk, Lee Trevino, Bruce Lietzke and Frank Conner with a make-or-break six-foot putt for par at the final hole. He made it, avoiding a massive five-man sudden-death playoff and putting his 16th career title into the books.

Putting together big seasons has been a Green trademark. He won twice in 1973 and was 11th on the money list. He won four titles and more than $211,000 and was third on the money list in 1974. He slipped to just one win in 1975, but came back in 1976 with three victories in succession on the way to $228,031 and fourth place on the money list.

In 1977 he won just once, but it was the U.S. Open at Southern Hills. He defeated Lou Graham there by a stroke after playing the final four holes knowing a threat had been made on his life.

But it was 1978 which was his best, with victories at Hawaii and the Sea Pines Heritage Classic as well as two big "near misses" of significance. The first disappointment came in the Masters where he began the final round with three shots in hand, only to fall victim to Gary Player's electric 64. In the World Series of Golf, Green birdied the final hole for a tie at 278, but then three-putted the first playoff hole to hand the title to Gil Morgan.

It was a foregone conclusion that Jay Haas would become a professional golfer. His uncle, Bob Goalby, started him in the game at an early age and helped him through every stage of his career.

"I was about five years old when I started to swing a golf club," Jay recalls. With a wide grin, he went on, "Bob had a club that was broken in half, so it actually was about my size. He put a grip on it, and that was the start. It wasn't long after that he put several more clubs together."

Jay was seven when he played on his first tournament — and won his first trophy. It was the National Pee Wee championship in Orlando, Fla. "We played five holes each day and I scored 26-26—52 to finish third," he said.

Under the tutelage of Goalby, Jay went on to win the Illinois state high school championship in 1972 and then headed for Wake Forest. His junior year was the big one. "I had one stretch when I played some of the best golf of my life," he said. It started with him winning three of his Walker Cup matches, then advancing to the fifth round of the British Amateur; the third week he was low amateur in the U.S. Open at Medinah; and finally, he won the NCAA championship at Ohio State University.

He earned his PGA Tour card in the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1976. He said of his rookie year: "It probably was not as good as I had hoped for, but as I look back at it, I realize it wasn't too bad at all."

His progress up the ladder has been steady, if not spectacular. His only victory thus far came in the 1978 Andy Williams-San Diego Open where he used a second-day 64 as the springboard to the title. He led all the way after that.

He enjoyed a steady 1979, moving into the century club for the first time with $102,515, mainly on the strength of seven top 10 finishes. His best was a second alone in the rain-shortened Phoenix Open. He continued to play the difficult courses well, with a tie for ninth in the Tournament Players Championship and a tie for seventh in the PGA.

Mark Hayes certainly is one of the bright young stars in the game, and his star never shone brighter than in 1977 when he mastered the elements at Sawgrass to win the Tournament Players Championship.

It established him as one of the fine shotmakers on the Tour and, although he has not won since then, his record of consistently strong finishes supports his position.

This past year, he had seven top 10 finishes in 28 starts, and sent $130,878 to his banker. He had a brilliant start to the year, winning nearly $60,000 before he left the West Coast.

In the Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur, he trailed Lon Hinkle by five at the start of the final round, and he caught him. However, Lon won the playoff on the third extra hole. Andy Bean also was involved in the playoff.

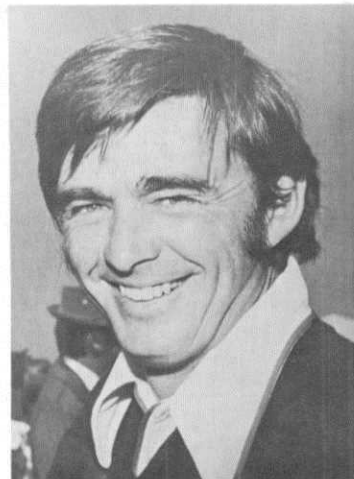

He also had a pair of thirds, in the Phoenix Open and the IVB-Philadelphia Classic.

Late in the year, he became a member of the Ryder Cup team that defeated the Great Britain-Europe team at the Greenbrier.

Hayes arrived on the PGA Tour in the Fall of 1973 and he arrived as a genuine star in his third full year on the circuit, 1976, when he led the Byron Nelson Classic from the opening bell, playing the first 43 holes without a bogey. He also won the Pensacola Open that year.

Mark started playing golf at age 6 under the eye of his father, a high school physical education teacher and golf coach. Not many years passed before he picked out his career. "One of the reasons I was so dedicated," Hayes said not long ago, "was that I was small for my age and couldn't do anything else. I practiced every day. I never thought of doing anything else for a living but play golf.

Continuing to play a reduced schedule, Dave Hill improved on his 1978 performance yet was still below $6,000 in official earnings. He entered 18 events but cashed only five checks.

His best effort came in his first start of the season, at the Bob Hope Desert Classic, where his 353 total was good for a share of 23rd place.

Hill's last good year was 1976, when he won the Greater Milwaukee Open and earned over $100,000 for the fourth time in his long career. Six weeks after the victory in Milwaukee, he tied for 22nd in the PGA Championship — worth $2,064 — and became the 11th player to earn more than $1 million in PGA Tour purses.

In 1977, however, Dave cut his schedule by one third, and his earnings dropped nearly $100,000. He teamed with brother Mike to tie for third in the Disney World National Team Championship in the Fall. His best individual performance that year was a tie for 10th in the Phoenix Open, the first event of the season.

One year after Dave joined the PGA Tour in 1959, he climbed into the Top 60 money list and was to remain there for 17 straight years. Ten years after coming on the Tour he won three tournaments, finished second to Frank Beard in the money rankings and won the Vardon Trophy for 1969 with a stroke average of 70.344 for 90 rounds.

He won $100,000 again in 1970, then began to reduce his playing schedule. He limited his appearances still further in 1972 but he played more efficiently, winning the Monsanto Open and placing in the top 10 in seven other events.

In 1973, Hill won at Memphis for the fourth time and recorded nine top 10 finishes, missed the cut only once and qualified for his second Ryder Cup team. Dave underwent surgery in late 1973 for removal of cartilage in a knee which had troubled him for some time, and that decision probably contributed to his second most profitable year in 1974, when he won at Houston.

After five seasons at considerably more than arm's length from the Top 60 exempt list, Lon Hinkle has now registered three solid seasons, each geometrically superior to the previous. He made the Top 60, in 60th position, in 1977 with $51,494 in earnings; advanced to 16th with a victory at New Orleans and $138,388 in 1978; and last season soared all the way to third place with $247,693 on the strength of victories at the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am and the World Series of Golf.

Hinkle's second and third career titles did not come easily however. At the Crosby, he had sailed through wind and some tough golf real estate into a five-shot lead after three rounds. But he quickly turned it into a three-man race by suffering through a rash of bogeys while Mark Hayes and Andy Bean rallied from behind. When Hinkle bogeyed the 14th, Hayes was two shots ahead. But then Hayes four-putted the 15th hole for a double-bogey, and when the 72nd hole was over, all three players were deaclocked at 284 and directed to the tee for overtime play. Hinkle's 12-foot birdie at the third playoff hole decided it.

At the World Series, the weather was better and the results pleased Hinkle even more. Larry Nelson seemed to have the $100,000 first-place check wrapped up while Hinkle was finishing off his third 67, with a one-over 71 thrown in for variety. Nelson, however, buried his approach shot at the par four 17th and, made double-bogey. Hinkle's eight-under 272 stood up.

Nelson, Lee Trevino and Tom Watson all had chances to catch Hinkle, but they needed to birdie Firestone's rugged 18th to do it. Watson bogeyed, Nelson registered a par and Trevino saw a solidly struck 15-footer for birdie slide by.

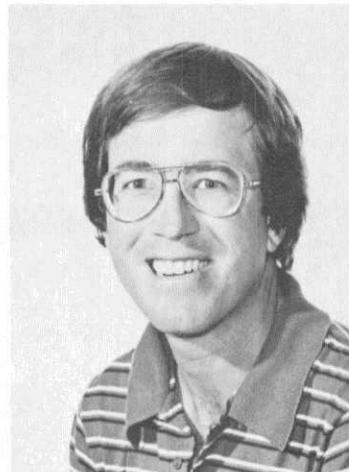

In addition to his impressive victories, Hinkle rang up a solid second at Los Angeles, finishing a single shot back of winner Lanny Wadkins. He also registered top-ten efforts at Phoenix (4th), the Buick-Goodwrench Open (5th) and the Anheuser-Busch Classic (6th).

Hinkle's first title at New Orleans in 1978 was keyed by a third round of 64 which pulled him from eight shots back into the lead. He then birdied the final hole on Sunday for a one-shot margin over Gibby Gilbert and Fuzzy Zoeller.

Lon started in the game at age 13, shortly after his family moved from Granville, Ohio to the San Diego area. "I was a good baseball player," he says, "but I started to have trouble with my eyes, so I switched to golf. I'd play all day, whenever I could. I loved it."

The oldest of seven children, his entire family played in those days, and, in junior tournaments around Southern California, it wasn't unusual to find half a dozen Hinkles in the field.

There are few players as enthusiastic as Joe Inman, and it doesn't seem to make any difference what the subject might be. He knows how to be happy, and he doesn't mind trying to spread his feelings among his colleagues.

This past year, he was a little disappointed that he did not win, but he did have his best money year since joining the Tour with $75,035.

He might have won the Atlanta Classic if Andy Bean had not been in town. Joe finished second, three strokes ahead of David Graham and Grier Jones with a 15-under 273. However, Bean was at his brilliant best, with a 23-under 265.

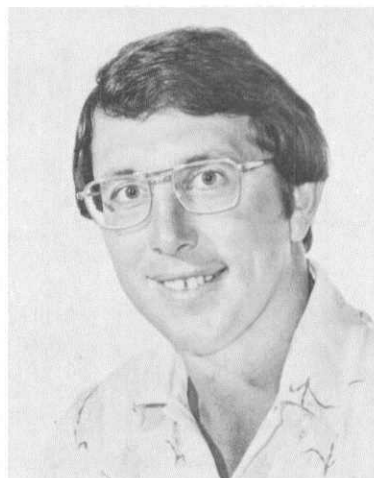

Joe had to laugh when asked if he had ever been 15 under before and lost. "I've never been 15 under before, period," he said. "'Andy was just like a robot."

While attending Wake Forest, Inman won the 1968 Carolinas Open and the 1969 North-South Amateur, earning a spot on the '69 Walker Cup team. He also won the 1970 North Carolina Amateur. After graduating from Wake in 1970, he spent two more years as an amateur and graduated from the PGA Tour Qualifying School in the Fall of 1973.

At the end of his rookie year in 1974, Inman tied for 13th in the San Antonio-Texas Open to finish 55th on the Exemption Point list. Twice in 1975 he closed with 67s to wind up in third place at Houston and Las Vegas. In late Spring of 1976, he finally won a PGA Tour event.

"I can't believe this," Joe said after his victorious Kemper. "I was off to a bad start, mainly due to my putting, but I could feel it getting better. I didn't seem to be motivated at the start of the year. I couldn't get my mind on it."

Although he slipped out of the top 10 on the money list for the first time in seven years, 1979 was a satisfying season for Hale Irwin simply because he won the U.S. Open for the second time. One U.S. Open title is great. But two, that's a real statement about a player's abilities.

Like his first Open victory at Winged Foot, the second came at a much-revered and respected course, Inverness in Toledo, Ohio. And again Irwin withstood the pressures of the tournament and a respected group of challengers.

After rounds of 74 and 68, he set up the victory with a third-round 67, an effort which gave him a three shot lead to start the last round. He advanced the margin to six shots at the turn then suffered a near-fatal collapse over the final nine holes, surviving when his closing 75 proved enough to turn away Gary Player and Jerry Pate by two shots.

The year didn't start too well for the 11-time winner from Missouri. He missed the cut in his first start, the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, ending his string of 86 consecutive events in which he had made the cut. But he rebounded with a tie for ninth at the Hawaiian Open, tied for 11th at Los Angeles and then posted consecutive third-place efforts at the Bay Hill Citrus Classic and the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic.

During 1978, Irwin earned $191,666 — most ever by a player without benefit of a victory at that time. He had an amazing 13 top-ten finishes in 22 tournaments.

Perhaps 1977 was Hale's most satisfying of 10 years on the Tour. He won three tournaments — a personal high — and his most notable performance came in the Colgate Hall of Fame Classic. In that event, Irwin devastated Pinehurst's revered No. 2 course in a record smashing 264 — 20 under par — to win by five strokes. He also passed the $200,000 mark for the third consecutive time, a feat equaled in the same years by just one other player, Jack Nicklaus.

Irwin left the University of Colorado in 1968 with a degree in marketing, an NCAA golf title and the honor of having been selected twice as an All-Big Eight Conference defensive back. He joined the PGA Tour that fall and climbed steadily on the money list each year through 1976.

Although he twice won the Heritage Classic on the demanding Harbour Town Links on Hilton Head Island, S.C., Hale was among the less familiar U.S. Open champions when he captured that major championship in 1974 at Winged Foot.

In 1975 he won his first Atlanta Classic and also the Western Open at Butler National. In 1976 he won two weeks apart, at Los Angeles and Orlando. His second place in the 1976 World Series lifted him over $1 million in career earnings.

Don January once was described as a man who would have been a good Texas Ranger, lean and tough when he has to be. For nearly a quarter century, he has let his golf clubs do his speaking for him, and many times they have been just as smoking as a Ranger's six shooter.

They were that way the final day of the Colonial National Invitation as he blistered the difficult Colonial course with a five-under 65, only to fall one short of Al Geiberger's winning total.

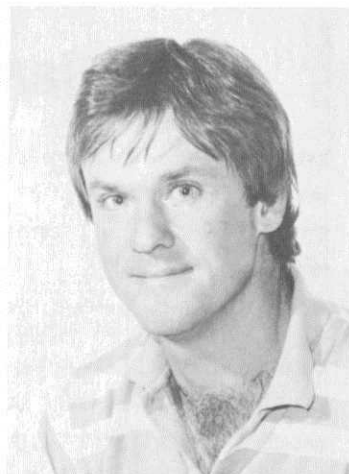

Since he came out of North Texas State and later joined the Tour in 1956, few players have been as consistent over so long a period of time. Once he hit the $60,000 for the year, he usually would head for home to watch the Dallas Cowboys.

But in his banner year of 1976, Don failed to abide by his rule. His winnings of $163,622 were nearly $100,000 more than in his next most lucrative campaign. In addition to winning the Tournament of Champions that year, January tied for second in two events and tied for third in three others. One of his runnerup finishes came in the PGA Championship at Congressional; a closing 72 — after rounds of 70-69-71 — put him in a tie with Ray Floyd at 282, just one shot behind Dave Stockton.

January's earnings returned to "normal" in 1977, when his best showing was a tie for second in the Hawaiian Open. After three rounds, he was tied for the lead with Bruce Lietzke, but finished with a 72 to Bruce's 69.

In 1972, Don left the Tour to devote his time to golf course construction in the Dallas area. When financing became difficult during the recession, he joined the Tour in 1975, soon after his 45th birthday. His remarkable comeback season was highlighted in his home state, when he defeated Larry Hinson in a playoff to win the San Antonio-Texas Open.

In many ways, Grier Jones enjoyed his finest year in 1979. He cut back on his schedule to 20 events, and still won $111,501. Even more impressive, his stroke average of 70.75 for 73 rounds was the second best on Tour to Tom Watson.

"I wanted to take a little more time off to be with the family," Grier said, "and we did have a great summer. It was one of the best I've ever had."

For the second straight year, he was the runner-up in the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic and tied for third in the Atlanta Classic. He also finished among the top 60 for the fourth straight year. His turnaround from a dismal 1975 began at the end of that year with a visit to noted teacher Bob Toski.

"He taught me a lot about the game," Grier recalled. "I had developed some bad habits, and Bob worked to get me back to my old swing, the one that had worked for me before."

In 1976, Jones improved by more than $50,000 in official earnings and climbed back to 40th on the money list, thanks largely to five top ten finishes.

The next year his improvement continued, as Grier finished in the top ten in seven tournaments and jumped to 35th in winnings. The climax came in the Walt Disney World National Team Championship, where he joined with Gibby Gilbert for his third PGA Tour victory.

Jones arrived on the Tour in 1968 with impressive credentials. While at Oklahoma State, he won the 1966 NCAA championship, the Big Eight Conference title, the Oklahoma Intercollegiate and the Oklahoma Invitational. He led the Fall 1968 Qualifying School and in 1969 was named Rookie of the Year with more than $37,000 in earnings.

Two of Grier's Tour wins came in 1972 after playoffs: he defeated Bob Murphy in the Hawaiian Open and Dave Marad in the Robinson Classic. After topping $140,000 that year, he began suffering physical problems with his back and right hand. In one stretch in the Summer of 1974 he was forced to withdraw from six of seven tournaments. In 1975, he missed 10 weeks after catching pneumonia the week following the PGA Championship.

Consistency has been Tom Kite's forte ever since he joined the PGA Tour. He has two victories and he has increased his earnings each year to a high of $166,878 in 1979.

Even though he constantly is in the money, he still strives for that little extra that will let him go all the way more often. He had 11 top 10 finishes last year, which means he challenged frequently.

Three times he finished third — in the Phoenix Open, thanks to a last-round 63; in the Sea Pines Heritage Classic, and in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic. He finished the year on the upswing, making the cut in his final 11 tournaments.

One of the highlights of his year was competing on the Ryder Cup team, but it also was rewarding for him to be elected by his peers as a Player Director on the Tour's Policy Board.

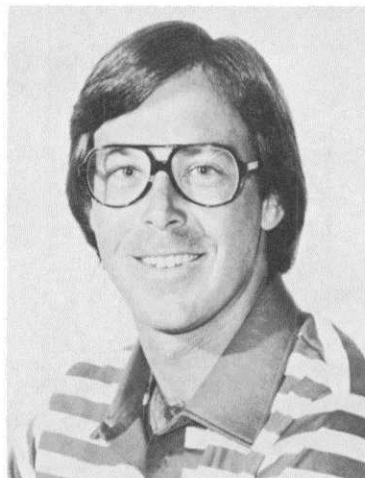

Tom's first victory came the hard way. He was tied with Terry Diehl in the 1976 IVB-Philadelphia Classic and it went to the fifth extra hole before it was decided.

Kite's life in golf began at age 6, when his father put a club in his hand for the first time and urged him to take a swipe. At 11 he won his first tournament, an age-group event at the Country Club of Austin, Tex. He began to take the game seriously three years later.

Before his 21st birthday in 1970, Tom was medalist in the Western Amateur, runnerup to Lanny Wadkins in the U.S. Amateur, second in the Southern Amateur and was named to the four-man U.S. team in the World Amateur Team Championship.

The following year he was chosen on the U.S. Walker Cup team and, in 1972, he shared the NCAA title with his U. of Texas schoolmate, Ben Crenshaw, before turning pro and joining the Tour. In 1973, Tom won the Hope of Tomorrow Second Tour event and was named rookie of the year after missing the cut in only three of 35 events.

Bill Kratzert finished his year almost the same way he started it, but in between, he was not too excited about his play.

He was second to Curtis Strange in the Pensacola Open, the final individual event of 1979, and he tied for second in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open, his second start of the year.

"While we still were on the West Coast," he explains, "I developed tendinitis in both wrists. I don't have any idea why. The pain started to leave late in September, and I don't know why that happened either."

His finish at Pensacola was worth $21,600. "After I birdied the 17th the last day, I said to myself, 'Look, if you can finish well you can have another $100,000 year, and that would be three in a row.'"

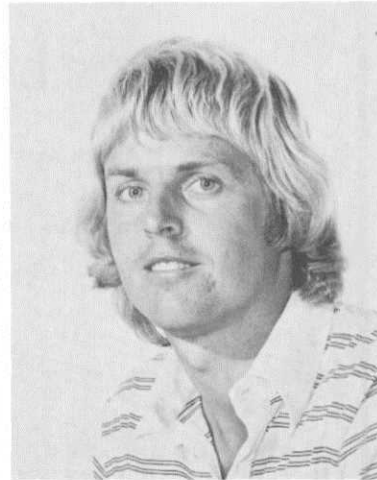

He went on to birdie the 18th and it boosted his season winnings to $101,628.

Kratzert was practically born into the game, the son of the head pro at Fort Wayne, Ind., CC for the last 20 years. "I didn't start to play until I was about 13," Bill says. "My dad never pushed me into it. It was just always there. It wasn't until I was 14 or 15 years old that I decided that golf was my game."

He won the Indiana State Amateur at age 16 and the Indiana Open a year later. Allen Miller, who befriended Bill when he became ill during the Sunnehanna Amateur, influenced him to go to the University of Georgia, where he was chosen All-Southeastern Conference all four years and All-American his last two.

After he failed in his first try in the Tour Qualifying School, Kratzert quit the game in frustration, went home to Fort Wayne and worked six months as a fork-lift operator. But in the Spring of 1975 he accepted an assistant pro's job at a club and returned to the game to stay.

1979 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—29; in money—24; top ten finishes—6; stroke avg.—71.97.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Small College All-American 1971 and 1972.

It was an exciting season for Wayne Levi, who in his third full season: 1) won his first individual title; 2) increased his earnings six-fold; 3) increased his top-ten finishes three-fold; 4) raised his in-money finishes by 50 per cent; and 5) cut his stroke average to less than 72.00 per round.

Not bad for a young man out of Oswego State in New York. Not bad, either, was his effort at the Houston Open. There he uncorked a third-round 63 to start the 36-hole Sunday finish. His 197 total after 54 holes was the lowest on Tour during 1979, and he coasted in with a 71 for a final two-stroke edge over Mike Brannan.

Levi, who had teamed with Bob Mann to win the National Team Championship in 1978, had prepped for the victory at Houston by cashing checks in 11 of 12 previous events, including a tie for fifth in the Tournament Players Championship. At Houston, he said: "I knew I could make pars all day, but I had to be aggressive, go for those birdies." He did. That third round 63 demolished the course record and was, as he freely admitted, "the best round of my life."

Levi had provided hints of greatness in 1978. The best example was a third-round and course-record 64 at Pensacola, which paved the way to a third-place finish. He finished that season with $25,039 in earnings and aspirations for better things — which he fulfilled in 1979.

Wayne started to play the game at age 13, mainly because his close friends were playing golf and he wanted to be with them. He admits it wasn't long until he was hooked completely.

During his days at Herkimer High School in upper New York State, he never lost a match, and in two years at nearby Oswego State College, he only lost once.

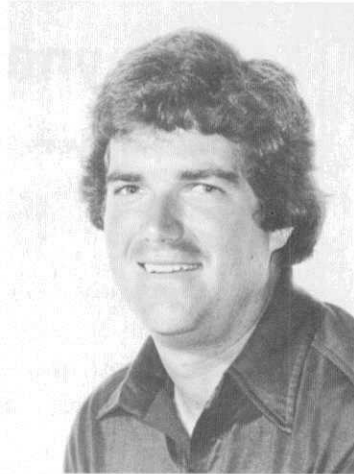

In the Summer of 1972, he headed for Florida so he could devote 12 months of the year to his game. After two years on the mini-tours, he tried for his PGA Tour card, but, in his first two attempts, he did not make it. Finally, in June of 1977, at Pinehurst, he qualified.

"I had a couple of good tournaments right away when I came out," he said, such as a tie for 22nd in Milwaukee and then a tie for 12th the next week in the Quad Cities Open. He had a first-round 65 at Quad Cities for his low round of the year.

"I couldn't keep it going, though," he added, "and did not finish well at all toward the end of the year. It carried over into the start of 1978 and it affected my attitude. I was getting down on myself."

It wasn't until mid-year that his confidence started to come back, and he gave considerable credit to the pretty young girl who became his wife in the Fall. "Judy kept after me," he said, smiling, "and that's what made the difference."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1971 Texas Amateur champion.

Tucson is becoming one of Bruce Lietzke's favorite stops on the Tour. He won there for the second time in three years, although he had many anxious moments during the last round of the 1979 event.

Bruce took the lead the first day and carried it through the finish. However, during the closing moments of the third round, he suffered a recurrence of an old stomach-muscle injury, and he wasn't certain if he could finish the tournament.

"I tried to hit a few practice balls after the round, and there wasn't any way I could do that," he said. "I seriously thought I might have to withdraw from the last round."

Instead, he "bumped" the ball around Randolph Municipal, just keeping it in play, and shot a two-under 68 for his final two-stroke victory. He had problems with the muscle pull in 1978, too.

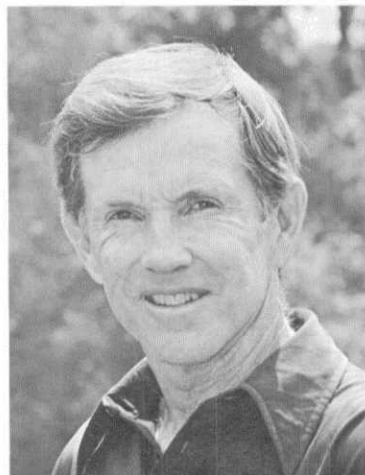

Bruce recovered to have a brilliant stretch from the Masters, where he finished sixth, through the Western Open. In a 10-tournament span, he had seven top 10 finishes, including back-to-back seconds in the Tournament of Champions and New Orleans.

Lietzke started playing the game at age 5 when brother Duane, then an assistant pro in Wichita, Kan., gave him a cut-down set of clubs. While at Forest Park High School in Beaumont, Tex., he won the Texas State scholastic title as a sophomore and helped the team to one championship and three seconds in his four years. At the University of Houston he captured the 1971 Texas State Amateur.

Late in the Spring of 1973, Bruce closed the closet door on his golf clubs and declared he was finished with the game. "I had played so much through high school and in college I was tired of it. I suppose in the back of my mind I knew I would come back, but at that point I was tired mentally of the competition and needed the time to think about some other things."

His retirement lasted six months and he turned pro in 1974. He missed by a stroke in his first try in the Tour School but made it in the Spring of 1975.

Although it was by the narrowest of margins, Gene Littler enjoyed his 25th (out of 26) season among the Tour's Top 60 money leaders during 1979. In many respects, the season resembled 1978, when he likewise had a tie for second place as his best finish and barely made the Top 60 category.

In 1979, it was the Colonial National Invitation which he nearly won. There he lost out to Al Geiberger's tap-in birdie at the par-three 16th while Littler double-bogeyed the 17th in the hectic final round. Littler concluded the tournament sharing second place with fellow veteran Don January, who had a final-round 65 only to fall, like Littler, one stroke short.

The week prior to the Colonial Littler had tied for ninth at the Byron Nelson Classic, and he would conclude the season with nine money-winning efforts in his final 11 starts.

During 1978, Littler peeled off three consecutive high finishes — a tie for second at San Diego, a share of sixth in Hawaii and a tie for 11th in the Bob Hope Desert Classic. But a followup to his victory in 1977 at Houston was not forthcoming for the smooth swinger who celebrates his 50th birthday at mid-season this year.

Littler's battle with cancer is a story that bears repeating. He underwent surgery for cancer of the lymph glands in the Spring of 1972, and the then winner of 24 Tour events in 18 years appeared at the end of his career. However, he rejoined the Tour that October and in July of 1973, about 16 months after his surgery, he won the St. Louis Children's Hospital Classic.

He did not win again in 1974 but he did top $100,000 in official purses for the second time in his long career, and 1975 was truly remarkable. He won three times in 1975, including the Westchester Classic in a playoff with Julius Boros, two weeks after his 45th birthday.

Littler was uncharacteristically erratic in 1976, dipping to barely $60,000 in earnings and missing the cut in six of 25 tournaments. His best finish was a tie for fourth at New Orleans. He was experiencing back ailments but, typical of the man, he made no excuses.

Suddenly, the world was filled with sunshine and rainbows for John Mahaffey. In August of 1978, he won the PGA Championship and the American Optical Classic in back-to-back weeks.

Late in the fall, he was medalist in the World Cup competition in Hawaii, and joined with Andy North to give the United States the team title.

As the new year dawned, John won the first event of 1979, the Bob Hope Desert Classic by a stroke over Lee Trevino. He was playing golf as never before, and people now were beginning to talk of John as one of the game's superstars.

Within a month, he was struck down again. Trying to blast out of a bunker in the Bing Crosby, his club tore into the heavy sod on the lip and came to a sudden halt. The result was that all the tendons on the back of his left hand and wrist gave way.

He tried to play the next week in Hawaii, but had to withdraw after one round. It was three months before he returned. "It still hurts whenever I hit a shot," he said, "but the doctor said I could go ahead and play as long as I could stand the pain."

As the year progressed, his game gradually became better and he finished with a tie for 12th in the World Series of Golf, a tie for 11th in the San Antonio-Texas Open and then a tie for third in the Pensacola Open.

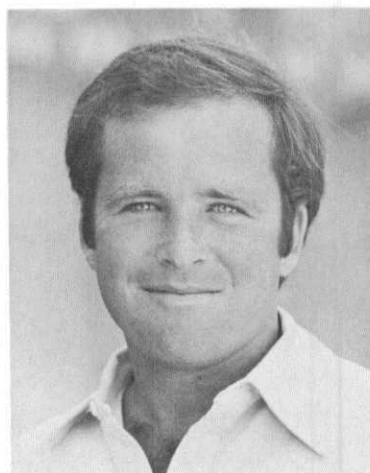

During his first four full years on Tour, his earnings increased to a high of $141,471 and eighth place on the list in 1975. Then his troubles — personal and physical — began.

During the 1976 PGA Championship, he suffered what later was diagnosed as a hyperextended tendon in the left elbow. It was almost impossible for him to compete in the first half of 1977, and, when he was ready to return, he fell off a ladder in his garage and broke a finger. He wasn't able to re-join the Tour until July, and made a check in only five of 15 starts.

Although recovery was slow, there were definite signs of progress early in 1978, climaxed by his brilliant come-from-behind effort in the PGA and subsequent playoff victory over Tom Watson and Jerry Pate.

When John joined the Tour in the fall of 1971, he brought with him an excellent amateur record. One of his titles was the 1970 NCAA crown, won while at the University of Houston.

1979 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—33; in money—15; top ten finishes—1; stroke avg.—73.11.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1967 National Pee Wee.

What a difference a week made for Mark McCumber. On Monday, March 12, 1979, he was shooting a two-under 70 to qualify for the Doral-Eastern Open. Six days later, McCumber was an exempt player on the PGA Tour and Doral champion.

McCumber came into the Doral-Eastern Open with 1979 earnings of $6,550, most of that the result of a tie for 14th in the Bob Hope Desert Classic. His best finish since joining the Tour had been a tie for seventh in the 1978 Pensacola Open. In his previous six tournaments, Mark had missed the cut four times and failed to qualify twice.

McCumber was not one of the favorites to win the $250,000 Doral-Eastern, but during that week he showed the same scrappiness and determination that had driven him to return to the PGA Tour Qualifying School five times before finally earning his playing privileges in the Spring of 1978.

Mark opened at Doral-Eastern with a 67 that put him a stroke behind leader Alan Tapie. He trailed Bill Kratzert by a pair after a second-round 71. A 69 put him a shot behind Tapie once again entering the final round.

McCumber took the lead for the first time at the 63rd hole, turning in 35 while Tapie shot 37. Tapie continued to falter, and when Mark reached the dangerous 18th, he led by a pair over Bill Rogers. "I felt I had a good chance to win," he said, "if I bogeyed and got in the house at nine under."

Which is what he did — but not without a struggle. After a poor chip and a long putt from the fringe, McCumber had to sink an eight-footer for his five. Rogers would have needed a birdie on the 437-yard finishing hole to tie him.

McCumber had come a long way since winning the 1967 National Pee Wee, his only amateur title to speak of. After graduation from high school, Mark studied for the ministry for two years at Brooklyn Bethel College. He turned professional in 1974, and after a brief stint on the mini-tour circuit, he returned to Jacksonville to work with his brothers in the golf landscaping business.

A year later, McCumber began his quest for Tour membership, but it was three more years of fair success on the mini-tours before he secured his playing privileges, finishing second to Wren Lum at the Albuquerque Qualifying School.

Jerry McGee wishes he could explain why he had a superb year in 1979. Winning two tournaments is understandable, because he has been one of the game's finer players for several years. It was the manner in which the triumphs came that is hard to understand.

Jerry was having problems with his former sponsor, and the week after the Kemper Open, he was scheduled for a court appearance. With that on his mind, Jerry played one of the great rounds of the year, an 11-under 61, to start the tournament. He went on to win by a stroke over Jerry Pate and that was worth $63,000.

Two months later at the rain-delayed Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, he again was scheduled to appear in court a couple of days after the event. So, he shot 68-67-67-65—267 and won by a stroke over Jack Renner. He earned another $54,000.

He only had two other top 10 finishes all year in 26 starts, but he was able to go to the bank with $166,735, easily his best since starting on Tour in 1967.

McGee, for years better known for his quick wit than being one of Ohio State's gang of standout golf products, suffered pulled ligaments in his thumb in the Summer of 1971, an injury which seriously disrupted his steady progress since joining the PGA Tour in 1967.

He sat out the last several months of 1971, and the injury apparently continued to bother him for about two more years. "The longer I was home," he said, "the more I wondered if I'd ever play again." However, he pulled out of his long slump in 1974 by earning checks in 25 of 35 tournaments and regaining a spot in the Top 60 list. And the following year he won his first PGA Tour event.

His winning week at Pensacola in 1975 found him taking the lead with rounds of 69-66-66 and, after faltering on the front nine the last day, birdying three holes on the back for 70-271 to win by two.

1979 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—20; in money—11; top ten finishes—2; stroke avg.—72.06.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1974 PGA Player of the Year, 1973 individual and team (with Jack Nicklaus) World Cup champion, Winner 1974 Dunlop Phoenix Open (Japan), 1975 World Cup and Ryder Cup teams, 1976 British Open champion, 1979 Lancome Trophy winner.

Johnny Miller had just produced a vintage Miller round — a 63 over the rugged Pinehurst No. 2 course during the second round of the Colgate Hall of Fame Classic. "It was one of those old ball-striking rounds like I used to have. I almost got a tingling feeling," he said.

That Miller bogied the final hole of the fourth round to drop into a tie with Tom Watson, then lost the playoff on the second extra hole, failed to dim the growing evidence that Miller is slowly working his way out of his slump. The slump first appeared in 1977 and deepened to a dismal $17,440 in earnings and 111th position on the money list during 1978.

Miller pulled his earnings up to $49,265 last season, posting solid finishes at the Canadian Open (T9), the Greater Milwaukee Open (T12) and the Byron Nelson Classic (T19). And his runnerup showing at Pinehurst was his best on the PGA Tour since he won the Bob Hope Desert Classic back in early 1976. He also won the 1976 British Open in mid-season of that campaign.

Although he finished out of the Top 60 in 1979 for the second season in succession, Miller retains another four years of exempt status earned with his 1973 U.S. Open victory at Oakmont.

Perhaps the surest indicator of Miller's return toward form was the fact that in 1979 he reduced his stroke average to 72.06 — more than a full stroke lower than the 73.22 he averaged in 1978.

Miller's arrival as a star has always been tied to his '73 Oakmont triumph. But he enjoyed his finest season the following year, winning eight tournaments and $353,021, a record sum until 1978, when Tom Watson earned $362,429. Johnny opened that amazing campaign with 23 consecutive rounds of par or better, winning the first three events of the year, the Bing Crosby Pro-Am, the Phoenix Open and the Tucson Open.

In 1975 Johnny devastated the desert once again. In the season opener at Phoenix C.C. he had rounds of 67, 61, 68 and 64 en route to a 24-under 260 and finished 14 strokes ahead of runnerup Jerry Heard. The next week at Tucson Miller was 25 under par, recording scores of 66, 69, 67 and 61 for a nine-shot victory over John Mahaffey.

Johnny's last PGA Tour win came at the 1976 Bob Hope Desert Classic, and with that victory he became the ninth player to pass $1 million in career earnings on the Tour.

1979 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—30; in money—18; top ten finishes—2; stroke avg.—72.38.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1958 All-Army championship; 1962 All-Service championship; 1969 World Cup Team title (with Lee Trevino); 1969 World Series of Golf; 1971 Hong Kong Open; 1971 Morocco Grand Prix; and 1977 International Caribbean Open.

Orville Moody has enjoyed a resurgence, of sorts, the last two years, but at the beginning of 1978, it looked as if his woes of other years would continue. He missed the cut in his first seven starts.

Then he started to make a little money. The first time he went the distance in 1978 was in the Sea Pines Heritage Classic, and he tied for third, earning $13,275. That was his biggest check since the 1973 San Antonio-Texas Open.

He played reasonably well the rest of the year and won $44,204. This past year, he upped his earnings slightly to $48,483 and it was another tie for third that provided the biggest check. That was in the Houston Open and it was worth $14,400. He closed the year on a sweet note, too, with a tie for fifth in Pensacola.

There have been numerous highlights to his long career in golf including his victory in the 1969 U.S. Open Championship, joining with Lee Trevino to give Uncle Sam the 1969 World Cup team title, as well as triumphs in the 1958 All-Army Championship and the 1962 All-Service Championship.

"They all mean a great deal to me," Orville said recently.

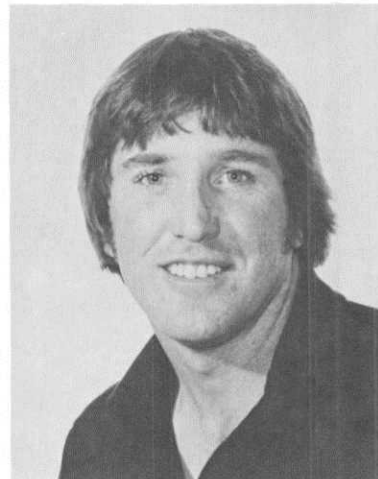

It was a good year in 1969 when he won the Open and $79,176. He had another in 1973, when he managed three second-place finishes and collected $74,286. In the Bing Crosby that year Orville held a four-stroke lead with 18 to play. He fell into a three-way tie with Jack Nicklaus and Ray Floyd when he three-putted the final green. Nicklaus won the playoff.

Times have not been easy for him the last few years. He left the PGA Tour for most of 1975 and 1976 to devote his energies to his golf course business in the Denver area, but rejoined the Tour as a fulltimer in 1977 and plans to stay with it for awhile.

Orville's father was greens superintendent in Chickasha, Okla. "I grew up on the golf course and have played the game since I was about three," he said. "I never played on anything but sand greens until I was 13 or 14."

Orville, who is part Cherokee Indian, joined the Army in 1953 and stayed for 14½ years. He saw duty in both the European and Pacific zones and was a Staff Sergeant (E-6), when he was discharged.

After six consecutive seasons of steady improvement, Gil Morgan slipped slightly in 1979. But he had risen to such heights that even though he fell 27 spots in the final 1979 money standings, he still ranked 29th and was able to add another victory — the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic — to his career total.

Morgan's season total of $115,857 was his third in succession above the $100,000 standard. Not a match for the brilliant $267,459 which he banked in 1978, but still solid. More disturbing to Gil was the presence of just two top-ten finishes, and a stroke average which rose from 70.89 in 1978 to 72.50. Morgan had notched 11 top-ten finishes during 1978 while claiming victories in the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open and the $100,000 bonanza offered by the World Series of Golf.

Still, when Morgan had a chance to win in Memphis last year, he made it count. Coming from off the pace with closing rounds of 69 and 66, Morgan gained the lead with a birdie at the 15th hole on Sunday but Larry Nelson drained a six-footer at 18 to gain a tie. After routine pars on the first extra hole, Morgan appeared to give it away at the second with an approach which sailed far to the right. Nelson, meanwhile, put his approach into the front bunker. Morgan misjudged his pitch and got to the front fringe. But he drained the monster putt for a par, and Nelson hit a poor bunker shot to make bogie.

Morgan was in a position to make waves at Westchester, opening with rounds of 71 and 68. But a third-round 76 nullified his closing 67 and he finished five shots back of winner Jack Renner.

Morgan's first title came in late 1977, when he claimed the B.C. Open at Endicott, N.Y. That victory, coupled with his win at Los Angeles in early 1978, provided his eligibility to the World Series, which he won in a sudden-death playoff with Hubert Green.

Gil began playing golf at about age 15 and decided he would pursue it as a career along with optometry when he was a junior at East Central State College in Oklahoma. He won the Oklahoma collegiate championship before graduation in 1968 but he did not turn pro until after earning his doctorate four years later.

He was second in the Western Amateur and Porter Cup before entering the Fall 1972 Tour Qualifying School. He failed to win his player's card, but a year later, after subsisting on the mini-tour circuit, Morgan passed.

For the first time in his fine 12-year career, Bob Murphy slipped from the ranks of the top 60 money winners, and one more putt somewhere along the way probably was all he needed to keep his streak alive.

He finished 62nd with $66,916 and that was only $770 behind the 60th man, Mark McCumber. If anything, it was his inconsistency that hurt him. He was in 32 tournaments and missed the cut in 13. Only once did he go as long as four straight events without missing it.

There were good signs toward the end of the year, though. In his last seven starts, he finished 15th or better five times with a tie for seventh in the Manufacturers Hanover-Westchester Classic his best.

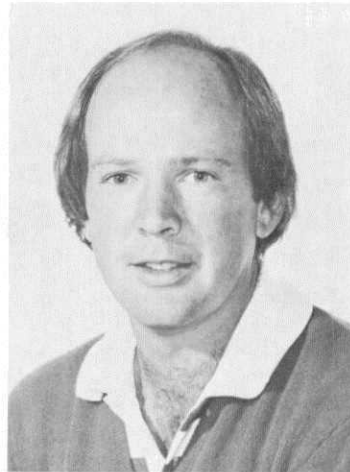

Even though he had off years in 1976 and 1977 because of a uric acid condition that caused him hand problems, he still managed to make the top 60.

Murphy's introduction to competitive golf was little short of miraculous. He entered the University of Florida in the early 1960s as a baseball prospect but he turned to golf when an injury kept him off the diamond his freshman year. Suddenly he won the 1965 U.S. Amateur championship, then the following Spring the NCAA title as a senior.

He almost exploded as a pro, too, after gaining his player's card in 1968. As a rookie, he won the Philadelphia and Thunderbird tournaments on consecutive weeks and more than $100,000 for the year, easily the most money banked by a rookie to that time.

In his first six years on the Tour, Murphy wound up no lower than 32nd on the money list. He dropped to 44th position at the end of 1974, the result of a thumb injury which sidelined him for four months and limited him to 19 events.

Larry Nelson wrote one of the outstanding sports stories of the year in 1979. It was even more successful that he might have imagined, even in his fondest dreams.

Larry Nelson became a genuine superstar, winning two tournaments, finishing second twice and third twice. He also was the outstanding player in the Ryder Cup matches, going undefeated in five outings.

He finished with $281,022 for the year and the No. 2 position behind Tom Watson. Although it will be hard to duplicate the year he has just had, this quiet, mild-mannered gentleman from Georgia figures to be a solid performer for many years.

His first career Tour victory came in the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic in March, and he won again at the Western Open in July, defeating Ben Crenshaw in sudden death.

The week prior to his Western appearance, he lost in sudden death to his close friend, Gil Morgan, in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic. He also was a runner-up to Lon Hinkle in the World Series of Golf, but he had the lead until he double bogeyed the 17th at Firestone South on the final afternoon.

In the Ryder Cup at the Greenbrier, he joined with Lanny Wadkins and they won all four of their matches, and the last day, he easily defeated Severiano Ballesteros of Spain in Singles, 3 and 2.

There are not many stories on the PGA Tour more unusual than Nelson's. Only four years after he started to play golf, and after playing only one 72-hole tournament, he had his Approved Tournament Players card. "I really wasn't ready," he said later, but he got ready in a hurry, as witness his steady climb up the money rankings since then.

Larry lettered in baseball and basketball in high school and attended Southern Tech for a year before he was drafted and spent two years in the military. After his discharge in 1968, he tried school again and also worked as an illustrator at the Lockheed plant near his home.

He went to a driving range one day in 1969, liked hitting balls so much that he went to work in pro Bert Seagraves' shop at the Pine Tree Club in Kennesaw, Ga., turned pro six months after that. He tried the mini-tours briefly and, in 1973, finished bogey-bogey in the Florida State Open to lose by a shot. That was his lone 72-hole event before earning his Tour card that fall.

A tie for 18th in the Greater Greensboro was his best finish in 1979 en route to $11,017 in earnings. In the last four years, he has yet to do better than 143rd on the money list.

He has had many outstanding moments in his long career, but the brightest had to be in mid-July of 1964 at the Columbus (Ohio) Country Club. He won the PGA Championship, playing marvelous golf, by three strokes over Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer.

A month later, he won $35,000 as he captured the Carling World Tournament at Oakland Hills by one stroke over Palmer, with Gary Player and Ben Hogan next in line.

Bobby endured a serious auto accident while in high school in Kentucky, where he was a standout football and basketball player, and was forced to switch his interest to golf. Before he was graduated from Texas A&M with a business degree in 1958, he won the Southwest Conference golf title.

Nichols turned pro a year later and joined the PGA Tour in 1960, and in his first 16 years he never once finished out of the Top 60 list. His best year in earnings was 1974, when he won twice for the third time and collected almost $125,000 in checks. He almost repeated at San Diego in 1975 but lost the playoff. Two months later he tied for fourth in the Masters, after leading the first round with 67.

His most vivid memory of 1975 is a terrifying one. At the Western Open in late June he felt the effects of a bolt of lightning and was taken to the hospital along with Lee Trevino and Jerry Heard. He was discharged after a couple days observation.

Member World Golf Hall of Fame.

For the first time since he turned professional and joined the Tour for the start of 1962, Jack Nicklaus did not win a golf tournament.

He only made 12 starts, made the cut in all 12 and his best finish was a tie for third in the IVB-Philadelphia Classic, thanks to a last-day 65. He had two other top 10 finishes, a fourth alone in the Masters, just one stroke out of the Zoeller-Sneed-Watson playoff, and a tie for ninth in the U.S. Open.

In all his years, he had never finished worse than fourth on the money list, and he was that low only twice in 17 years. In 1979 he plunged to 71st place with $59,434.

In his only other tournament for the year, he tied for second in the British Open at Royal Lytham.

It wasn't until the latter part of the year that Andy North started to play the game the way he knows he can play. After a tie for 17th in the Westchester Classic, he was fifth alone in the Colgate Hall of Fame Classic and tied for sixth in the Anheuser-Busch Classic.

Those three finishes netted him approximately $25,000 and boosted him into the Top 60 for the sixth straight year.

As the winner of the 1978 United States Open, he did not need the Top 60 for an exemption in 1980, but it was a matter of pride. Andy could not get his big swing in the groove for most of the year, and found it difficult to understand why.

His only other top 10 finish all year was a seventh in the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic.

Andy's victory in the Open at Cherry Hills showed how much inner-strength this big fellow has. He led by two after 36 holes and by one after 54. He increased his lead to four strokes with five to play, but he saw that evaporate quickly and faced the last hole needing a bogey to win. That's just what he scored, too, after being bunkered in three, blasting to four feet and holing the putt for the victory.

An unusual ailment helped lead North to golf when he was in the seventh grade in Madison, Wis. A bone in his knee had stopped growing and was disintegrating. While on crutches for 18 months he was told to give up his pursuit of basketball and football but that he could play golf — if he rode in a cart.

Since Andy's father was a low-handicap golfer, the game was no stranger to the family and he progressed quickly. He also returned to basketball and was chosen all-state as a high school senior, but by then golf was his dominant sport.

North won the Wisconsin high school championship in 1966 and 1967, the State Amateur in 1969 and placed second in the Wisconsin Open in 1968 and 1969. After entering the University of Florida he was chosen All-American for three years and won the 1971 Western Amateur.

During 1979, Palmer suffered through his toughest season, winning money in nine of 16 events for earnings of less than $10,000.

Until the Southern Open, his last PGA Tour event for the year, Palmer's best finish had been a tie for 38th at the Heritage Classic. At the Southern, however, he showed signs of a return to form, following a first-round 74 with scores of 69, 68 and 71 for a share of 26th place and a check for $1,633, his largest of the year.

At the Southern, Arnie said, "My game is a little better. I'm making some birdies, and when I can do that, I know the rest will come. My putting has improved quite a bit, and I'm very nappy about that."

Galleries still respond to the Palmer presence, and vice versa. "The galleries get the adrenalin going, and that's important. But when the adrenalin gets going, the nerves begin to move, too. Everyone gets nervous when there is an opportunity to win, and handling it is part of the combination it takes to win. The mystery still remains — whether I can win or not. I haven't stopped thinking that I CAN win."

In some ways, Jerry Pate's year was a great success, but the young man from Pensacola, Fla., also was very disappointed that he did not gain a victory.

His $193,707 represented a high mark in his four-year Tour career, and he had 11 top 10 finishes in 27 starts, his best ever in that regard. It is interesting to note that he never went more than three tournaments without a top 10 finish.

He was second three times, to Tom Watson in the tournament of Champions, to Jerry McGee in the Kemper Open and to Hale Irwin in the United States Open.

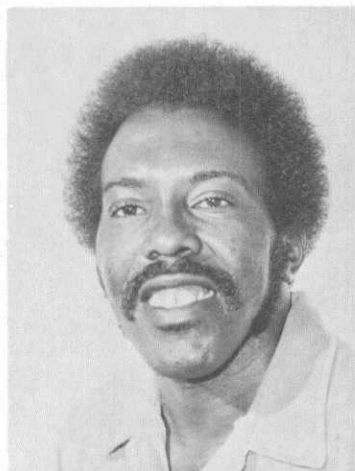

He made a strong bid for his third straight Southern Open. He was only one stroke off the pace after three rounds, but the bogeyman on the back nine the last day grabbed him.

Pate literally burst into world-wide attention as a PGA Tour rookie in 1976. His last swing in the U.S. Open, a five-iron from the rough at Atlanta Athletic Club, left him a two-foot birdie putt for a two-shot victory, and his closing 63 in the Canadian Open was good for a four-stroke victory over Jack Nicklaus. His total of $153,102 in official earnings was the most ever won by a rookie.

Conrad Rehling, who developed Bob Murphy while coaching at the University of Florida in the early 1960s, found another champion-to-be about a decade later while coaching at a small college near Pensacola. Pate was still in high school when he came under Rehling's wing. When Rehling moved to the University of Alabama, Pate followed. In 1974, like Murphy nine years earlier, Pate won the U.S. and Florida Amateur titles.

Jerry also helped the U.S. win the 1974 World Amateur Team championship and the 1975 Walker Cup matches. As an amateur he finished sixth in the Pensacola Open and tied for 18th in the U.S. Open, both in 1975.

1979 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—26; in money—16; top ten finishes—7; stroke avg.—71.58.

When Calvin Peete says he's come a long way, you've got to believe him.

Peete scored his first Tour victory in July in the Greater Milwaukee Open, completing one of the unique odysseys in golf. His performance at Tuckaway Country Club was one of the most decisive victories by a first-time winner on the Tour.

One shot behind leaders Ed Dougherty and Vic Regalado entering the final round, Peete quickly seized the lead and rolled up a five-shot margin with an impressive seven-under 65 finish. His 19-under-par total of 269 was a new course and tournament record.

Coupled with a second in the Quad Cities, ties for fifth in the Byron Nelson Classic, sixth in the First NBC New Orleans Open and seventh in the Houston Open, Peete's victory at Milwaukee pushed his earnings for 1979 to $122,481.

Calvin was 23 years old when he first picked up a golf club back in 1966. The game was of no interest to him because he had to struggle to make a living for himself and his family.

Born in Detroit, Mich., Calvin spent most of his life on a Florida farm with his 18 brothers and sisters — through two marriages by his father. He was forced to drop out of school at an early age.

"Like so many black families," Peete said, "most of us kids had to get jobs as soon as we were old enough to work so we could help out with the expenses."

While still a teen-ager, Peete got into the business of selling goods to migrant farm workers. The field hands had little chance of getting into the city stores, so Peete would pack clothes, rings, watches, jewelry and anything else he could squeeze into his station wagon and take off. Wherever the migrant workers went, Peete was not far behind. From Florida it was a series of selling stops along dusty roads as far north as Rochester, N.Y.

Peete had friends in Rochester, and would end his Summer's trek with them. Each year his New York buddies would invite him to play golf.

"I always turned them down," Peete said. "I thought the game was silly. Who wants to chase a little ball around under the hot sun? How could that be fun?"

Finally, in 1966, Calvin tried the game with his friends and he was hooked. He recalls: "Just about that same time I saw a tournament on television and learned that Jack Nicklaus was making around $200,000 a year chasing that ball. I figured I could be happy with one-third that amount, so I decided to give it a try." Without the help of a teaching pro, Calvin began practicing and playing virtually all the time.

Always a natural athlete, Peete improved rapidly and he began to play in amateur tournaments wherever he could. Eventually he entered the PGA Tour's Qualifying School. Like so many others, Peete failed on his first try. And the second. But he made it the third time, in the Spring of 1975.

Other victories include: 1957 Australian PGA, 1972 and 1974 Brazilian Open, and 1976 South African Dunlop Masters. Member World Golf Hall of Fame.

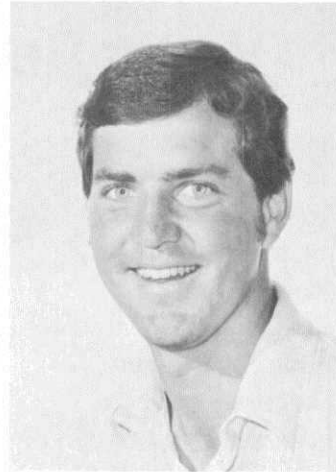

After his brilliant performances in 1978, when he won three straight tournaments, it would have been difficult for Gary Player to match that effort in 1979.

However, he did expect to do better than he did. He cut back his United States appearances to 12 tournaments and he did manage to tie for second twice — in the Greater Greensboro Open and in the United States Open.

His putting stroke was off ever so slightly, and that made the difference as he eventually missed the cut in five events. He failed to go the distance in his first two starts, the Tournament Players Championship and the Heritage Classic.

Without question, one of the great players of all time, Player became the 11th man in Tour history to win three in a row when he came from seven back with a last-day 64 to win the Masters. He was seven back starting the last day at the Tournament of Champions, and won. The next week in Houston, he trailed by three and still managed to grab the brass ring.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Arizona State Amateur and Southwest Open champions, both 1972. Medalist, 1979 U.S.-Japan Team Matches.

Each year, Tom Purtzer seems to become a more complete golfer. He continues to play the more difficult courses well, and, even though victory eluded his grasp for a second straight year, he upped his earnings significantly, to $113,270.

His best chance came in the B.C. Open. He was tied with Howard Twitty and Doug Tewell with one to play, but he bogeyed the final hole to finish second alone, to Twitty.

One of his other top 10 finishes came in the U.S. Open. He was tied for the lead after 36 holes, and eventually finished eighth. He has a history of doing well in the Open.

Tom Purtzer got an early start in golf because his father, Horace, enjoyed the game.

"Dad was a good golfer," Purtzer said, in recalling his own background in the game. "I guess he was a two or a three handicapper when I was very young. He wanted both of his sons to play the game and Paul and I were given cut-down clubs. We started hitting the ball, I guess, when we were eight or nine.

"Meanwhile, I liked baseball and football and played both. When I got to high school I gave up baseball, I played high school football and then concentrated on golf."

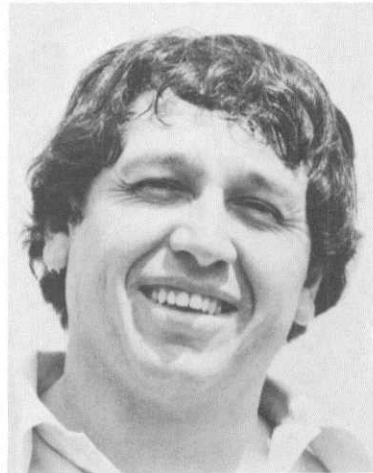

Purtzer continued to play golf for Arizona State and became one of the better collegiate players. He also won both the Arizona State amateur title and the Southwest Open in 1972.

The next year, 1973, Tom won the Broadmoor Men's Invitational and also was named to the All-America Collegiate golf team. He turned pro not long after graduating with a business degree.

Tom failed to earn his playing privileges at the PGA Tour's Qualifying School twice. He recalls: "The first time was only by two shots but the second was by a bunch."

Tom continued to season his game by competing on mini-tours in Arizona and Southern California and also went abroad in 1975. It was during a Far Eastern Swing that year that Purtzer won the Thailand Open.

Although Victor Regalado went through the year without a victory, he did have his best money year since starting on Tour in January of 1973, winning $82,964.

His best chance came in the Greater Milwaukee Open. He was tied with Ed Dougherty after three rounds, but Calvin Peete's brilliant finish left Victor tied for second with Lee Trevino and Jim Simons. He managed five other top 10 finishes.

Victor says part of the reason for his more consistent play is the help he received from his close friend, Phil Rodgers. Phil only makes a few appearances on the Tour now, but he always has been regarded as an excellent teacher.

Victor grew up in Tijuana, Mexico, two blocks from the Tijuana CC and started in golf at age 11. The first tournament he entered was the Pan-American Juniors at his course and he won it at age 14.

The most impressive of his early titles throughout Central America were the Mexican Amateur in 1970, the Mexican PGA in 1972 and the Mexican Masters in 1972 and 1973. He represented Mexico in the World Amateur Team Championships of 1968 and 1970, the latter year winning the individual title in Spain. He also represented his country in the 1972 and 1973 World Cup tournaments.

As a PGA Tour rookie in 1973, Regalado played with negligible results, but in 1974 he won the Pleasant Valley Classic and it appeared he would join the handful of foreign superstars playing here. However, early in 1975, he injured his right thumb. "I couldn't practice for six months, but I kept trying to play," Victor recalled.

There are few players in the game as intense as Jack Renner, and although he has a quick and ready smile, when it comes to playing this game, he is all business.

It shows in his results, too. There seldom has been a player who has done so well so young. He still was a couple of weeks shy of his 22nd birthday when he earned his player's card in June of 1977.

He won nearly $74,000 in his first full year, yet he was disappointed because he didn't win. This past year, he more than doubled that figure with $182,808, and, he did win.

The victory came in the Manufacturers Hanover-Westchester Classic — worth $72,000 — and it was not expected. He was fresh from finishing second in the rain-delayed Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, missing a putt on the final green that would have tied him with the eventual winner, Jerry McGee.

At Westchester, he said he was tired and it was difficult for him to concentrate, but the steady play that has been his forte carried him through the week. He was three back starting the last day, and his four-under 67 put him one ahead of Howard Twitty and David Graham.

One of his other outstanding efforts in 1979 came in the Tournament Players Championship. He finished third, with a last-day 75 costing him any chance at victory.

During his first full year, Renner believes his short game carried him most of the way. He developed the touch in his early days while playing par-three courses near home. He was the kingpin of junior golf around the San Diego area.

He won two important junior titles, the 1972 World Junior and the 1973 United States Junior. During his school days, he chose not to play varsity golf, because he felt he could improve faster by working on his own.

The Renners are an avid golfing family. Sister Jane has been part of the LPGA Tour for four years, and younger brother Jim turned professional last year.

You just can't keep a good man down.

In 1979, Juan "Chi Chi" Rodriguez started the season as a non-exempt player for only the second time in 16 years. Actually, he could have used his final top 50 career exemption, but he chose not to. And in 1972 he was coming off a year that saw him undergo surgery on his arms, greatly limiting his play.

Apparently, Chi Chi prefers exempt status. In 1972, he enjoyed his best year financially, cashing checks for $113,503 and winning the Byron Nelson Classic at the end of April to regain his exemption.

In 1979, it took Chi Chi one week less to get back on the exempt list, though it had taken him six years to climb back onto the victory stand on the PGA Tour.

And his victory in the Tallahassee Open was convincing. His rounds of 66, 69, 67 and 67 for a total of 19-under 269 broke the old tournament record — held jointly by Lee Trevino, Bob Shaw and Barry Jaeckel — by four strokes. In 72 holes, he scored an eagle, 20 birdies and just three bogies.

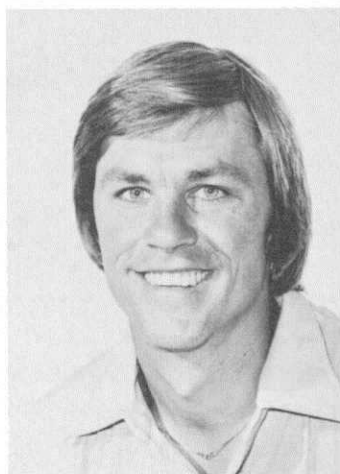

Entering the final round on the Killearn Golf and Country Club tied for the lead with Bobby Wadkins, the 43-year-old veteran took command of the tournament with a string of four consecutive birdies beginning on the seventh hole. Chi Chi played safely the rest of the way, parring in for a three-stroke victory over Lindy Miller.

After his opening 66, Chi Chi told the press that "I'm here because I want to win . . . and I don't have to play against those guys in La Costa (at the Tournament of Champions)." In 1980, like it or not, he will be competing against "those guys" in the T of C — for the first time since 1973.

Chi Chi, still a favorite with galleries everywhere, arrived on the PGA Tour in 1960 and didn't finish higher than sixth until he won the 1963 Denver Open.

Rodriguez gravitated to golf as a boy in Puerto Rico by hitting tin cans with limbs from a guava tree. A caddie much of the time, Chi Chi joined the Army at the age of 19, because he could make more money to help his large family than by working at home.

Bill Rogers moves into the PGA Tour's all-time record book for having won the most money in a single season without the benefit of a victory. After back-to-back ties for second in the World Series of Golf and the Texas Open, he reached $230,500. Last year, Hale Irwin set the mark at $191,666.

Certainly Bill would have liked to have won, but he'll also accept the record. "The only way you can learn is through success," he said.

"The more times you get close to the top, the easier you can handle it. You are more confident of yourself. The mental aspect of the game and your swing work better together under pressure situations. It becomes a natural thing."

He finished the year with 12 top 10 performances and his stroke average of 70.76 was second only to Tom Watson in the race for the Vardon Trophy (minimum of 80 rounds required).

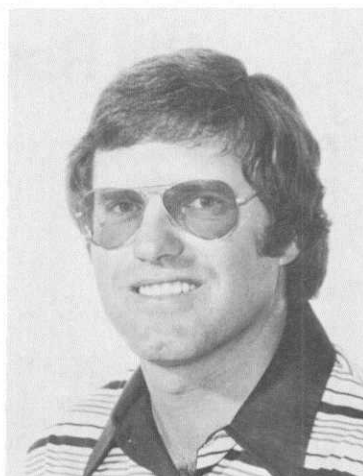

While attending the University of Houston, he was a roommate of Bruce Lietzke, and the latter nicknamed him "the Panther." Bill recalls, "I was the jumpy type. I never wanted to miss anything, and I still don't, but I have slowed down some."

He also was second on two other occasions in 1979, losing the Byron Nelson Classic in a playoff to Tom Watson, and finishing one stroke behind Mark McCumber in the Doral-Eastern Open.

Bill started to play the game at age nine in Montgomery, Ala., and was playing competitively by the time he was 13 and the family was living in Texarkana, Tex. Although his father and brother started him, it was Jerry Robinson, professional at the North Ridge Country Club in Texarkana, who taught him the fine points of the game.

Bill's father was a Lieutenant Colonel in the Air Force, and from age three to six, he lived in Germany; from ages six through eight, he lived in Morocco, North Africa. "Dad is retired from the Air Force now, and he still is a good player. He played in a lot of the major Air Force tournaments when he was in the service."

John Schroeder has challenged several times during the last few years but seldom has he been as close to his second PGA Tour victory as he was in the inaugural Bay Hill Classic.

A par at the final hole, for example, would have clinched it for him, but John and Bob Byman both bogeyed it, and then went into a sudden-death playoff. Bob finally won with a par on the second extra hole.

John stayed close to the lead all week, and moved into a tie with a birdie at the 223-yard 17th.

On the second extra hole, Schroeder misplayed an eight iron to the green and then missed a six footer for his par that would have kept the playoff alive. "I just got what I deserved," he said.

Nevertheless, John went on to have his best money year with $78,510. It could have been even better except for a late season let down. After the PGA Championship in early August, he entered five more events, missed the cut in four and withdrew from the other.

He credits much of his improved play the last three years to teaching professional Jimmy Ballard, who has worked with a number of PGA Tour players.

Since joining the Tour in 1969, he has one victory, in the 1973 U.S. Professional Match Play championship. Along the way, in order, he defeated Grier Jones, Bud Allin, Lee Trevino (one up) and, in the 18-hole final, DeWitt Weaver, two up.

John is the son of Ted Schroeder, one of the greats in tennis history. Ted won the 1949 Wimbledon championship and was a standout performer on 10 U.S. Davis Cup teams.

Tendonitis in the left hand hindered John's progress periodically from 1974 through 1976, but he believes that is a thing of the past.

After victories in 1977 and 1978, Jim Simons was anxious to keep his streak alive, and he almost made it.

In the Buick-Goodwrench Open, he shot a final-round 67 to catch John Fought, but in the playoff, Jim bowed out on the second extra hole when he pulled his tee shot on the par three 17th and then skulled his next shot off the hardpan into the bunker across the green. Fought made his par to win it.

He also finished second in the Greater Milwaukee Open, but that was because of his final-round 67. Calvin Peete, the winner, was five in front at the finish.

His initial Tour victory came in the 1977 First NBC New Orleans Open, and the next year he displayed his talents in winning The Memorial Tournament. Five times in the last seven holes at The Memorial, he saved par, and at the final hole, he made a 21 footer for a par to win by one.

Jim Simons will be the first to say that his early years on the PGA Tour were not up to expectations. He probably won't mention, however, that he was hampered with physical ailments. He had tendonitis in his left wrist, but more painful was his left shoulder which was diagnosed as a "looseness in the joint—a minor dislocation." It was the result of some "horsing-around" in his fraternity house at Wake Forest.

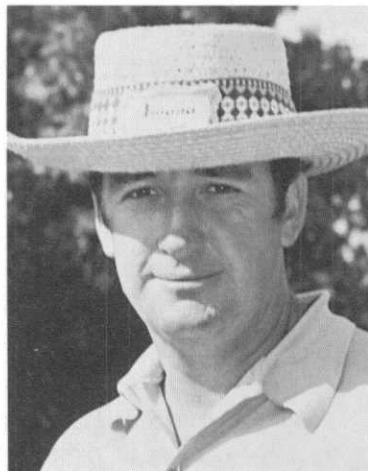

Simons was graduated from the Fall 1972 PGA Tour Qualifying School and did not have an opportunity to compete in many events. During his first year on the Tour he was in considerable pain, mainly, it developed, because his injury had not yet been diagnosed properly. He recalls: "I was doing stretching exercises because I felt a tightness, but that was just the opposite of what I needed."

Jim's father started him in golf at Butler, Pa., Country Club at the age of nine. He lived on a farm and says now, "I'd ride over to the club on my bike in the morning and either play or hit balls most of the day and ride back in the evening."

He started competition at the age of 13 and his progress was rapid. He first enrolled at the University of Houston but, after a year, transferred to Wake Forest. He was on the 1971 Walker Cup team and remained overseas for the 1971 British Amateur, reaching the final round where he lost to Steve Melnyk.

In the 1971 U.S. Open at Merion, he gained national attention by leading the tournament after the third round. He finished in a tie for fifth and was low amateur. He also was low amateur in the 1972 Open at Pebble Beach. He turned pro that Fall.

It was a profitable year for J. C. Snead as he once again climbed over $100,000 in earnings, marking the fourth time in his career he has reached that milestone. He also joined the ranks of the $1 million winners.

While victory eluded his grasp for the third straight year, he did challenge on several occasions, and showed far more consistency than he had in the two previous years.

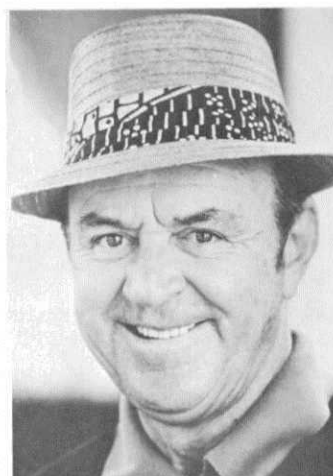

He tied for third in the Kemper Open and the IVB-Philadelphia Classic. After the latter event, he missed the cut in the PGA Championship, and then tied for fifth in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open and tied for seventh in the Westchester Classic.

J. C. has been in the Top 60 the last nine years. Although his earnings dipped to $63,561 in 1978, his lowest total since 1970, it was due mainly to a broken bone in his wrist, suffered in an accident at home shortly after he finished second in the U.S. Open. He was off the Tour for seven weeks.

Jesse Carlyle Snead, although still constantly mentioned as the nephew of legendary Sam Snead, can stand on his own performance record. After growing up in Hot Springs, Va., he sought a career in baseball and served in the Washington Senators' farm system before turning to golf as a pro in 1964.

He worked for head pro Charlie Beverage at the Century CC, Westchester County, N.Y., while twice failing to pass the PGA Tour Qualifying School, and it was four years before he earned his card. Following three so-so years on the Tour, J. C. burst into golf's consciousness by winning twice in a three-week period, at Tucson and Doral, immediately before and after the PGA Championship in Florida.

The golfing world had a chance to see Ed Sneed at his brilliant best through most of the 1979 Masters Tournament, and, unfortunately, it also saw him suffering through a finish that was to cost him the precious title.

Although Ed had a successful year, winning $123,606 for his best ever performance, the memory of the Masters will linger on and on. He led by three with three to play, and bogeyed in. Eventually, he lost in the sudden death playoff as Fuzzy Zoeller birdied the second extra hole. Tom Watson also was in the playoff.

Characteristic of his mettle, he came back to play well for most of the rest of the year. He did have one other runner-up finish. That was to Watson in the Heritage Classic, two weeks prior to the Masters.

Back in 1976, Sneed was doubtless wondering what it took to win again, after a sizzling streak in the Summer which showed a tied for third at Milwaukee, tie for fifth at Westchester, a fourth in the Canadian Open, and a tie for third in the B.C. Open. Then, after a disappointing showing in the PGA Championship, Ed tied for fourth in the American Golf Classic in Akron. It added up, at the end of 1976, to his most lucrative of seven full years on the Tour.

While serving a so-called four-year apprenticeship on the PGA Tour, during which Sneed never came close to cracking the Top 100 money list, Sneed was told more than once by his fellow Ohio State alumnus, Tom Weiskopf, that there was no reason he shouldn't be among the Top 60. Long Tom proved right, it turned out.

Sneed won the New South Wales Open in Australia late in 1973, grabbed a plane for San Francisco and — gaining a day via the international dateline—arrived in Napa, Calif., in time for Monday qualifying for the Kaiser International. The following Sunday he beat John Schlee in a playoff for his first Tour triumph. The following July, in 1974, Ed led all four rounds at Milwaukee.

Sneed started golf at age 13 in his native Roanoke, Va. He earned his privileges to play the Tour in the fall of 1968 but it was another two years before he decided to play full time.

Craig Stadler knows his game is getting a little better each year and that supports his belief that you never can accumulate enough experience.

He even considers his performance in the 1979 Masters Tournament a learning experience. He was tied with Ed Sneed for the halfway lead, but saw his hopes evaporate in the last two rounds. He finally tied for seventh.

For the third straight year, he did increase his earnings as he became a little more consistent with his finishes.

Although he has yet to win on the main Tour, he did capture the 1978 Magnolia Classic, and that was an important one for him. "I had won my share of tournaments in junior golf and in college, but until the Magnolia, I had gone quite a while without winning."

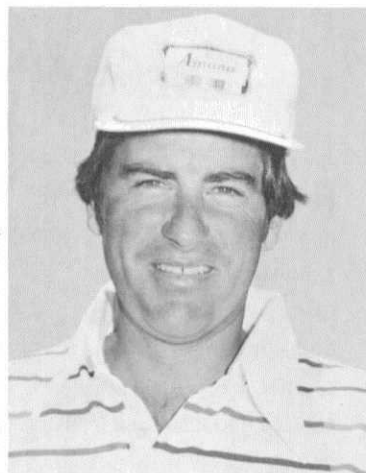

Before turning professional in 1975, Craig compiled an excellent amateur record, highlighted by his victory in the 1973 U.S. Amateur Championship at the Inverness Club in Toledo. "I just made everything that week," he said.

He had given some thought to leaving the University of Southern California after that triumph, but changed his mind. He went on to be an All-America choice for the Trojans in 1974 and 1975 and was named to the 1975 Walker Cup team.

His first attempt at qualifying for the PGA Tour came in the fall of 1975 and he didn't make it. He did succeed in June of 1976. He said of his first six months on Tour, "I was just awful."

Craig first played the game at age five with the assistance of his father and really became interested in the game at age "eight or nine." Along the way, he won such titles as the World Junior championship, the San Diego City Amateur and the Southern California Interscholastic.

It hardly was a classic year for Dave Stockton, but it is interesting to compare his record in 1978 with that of 1979. Each year, he played in 26 tournaments and survived the cut in 17. Yet, he made $30,000 less last year.

He merely did not play quite as well. While he had five top 10 finishes in 1978, he only had one last year and that was a tie for ninth in the Houston Open.

Nevertheless, Dave continues to be one of the most popular players in the game. He gives numerous exhibitions and clinics throughout the year.

Although he dropped out of the Top 60 for the first time in 13 years, he will continue to be exempt as a result of his 1976 PGA Championship. That is good for 10 years from the date of his victory.

Stockton graduated from the University of Southern California in 1964, turned professional immediately and struggled for three years on the PGA Tour before winning the prestigious Colonial National Invitation in 1967.

He won his first PGA Championship in 1970, when he fought off extreme heat and a stretch challenge from Arnold Palmer at Southern Hills in Tulsa. Three victories in 1974 resulted in his most productive year. Dave's first win that year was at Los Angeles, where his 235-yard, three wood shot on the 72nd hole set up a 12-foot birdie putt which beat Sam Snead and John Mahaffey.

He didn't win after 1974, however, until the 1976 PGA at Congressional. "I probably was heading for my poorest year," Stockton said, "and I can't tell you why. I was in the best physical condition of my life. I guess it was mental."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner of 1973 Southeastern Amateur, 1974 NCAA, 1974 Western Amateur, 1975 Eastern Amateur, 1975 and 1976 North and South Amateur. 1975 and 1976 Virginia State Amateur. Member 1974 World Amateur Cup team. 1975 Walker Cup team.

When Curtis Strange joined the PGA Tour in June of 1977, he appeared to have all the ingredients necessary for a long and successful career. His record as an amateur was outstanding.

He won $28,144 in the last half of his first year, and that total was buoyed by a second-place finish in the last event, the Pensacola Open. In his second year, he only won $29,346 and that was a disappointment to his boosters, but more important, to Curtis himself.

His fine game started to come together again in 1979. He made a steady climb up the money list and by late summer had cracked the $100,000 barrier. And, in the year's final individual event, the Pensacola Open, Curtis came through with his first Tour victory. He finished the year 21st on the money-winning list at $138,368.

"Physically, I always had the talent," he said, "but I had to learn how to use it. Patience and maturity are the two big keys in this game, and once I learned how to control myself and my game, I was able to improve."

Curtis started to play golf at age seven, "and by the time I was eight, I was playing every day." His father was a golf professional and owned the White Sands Country Club in Virginia Beach, Va.

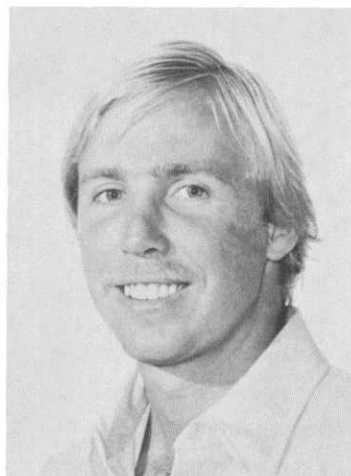

Unfortunately, he passed away when Curtis was 14, and then, as Curtis explained, "Chandler Harper, the Hall of Famer, became my teacher."

His first taste of success came when he won the Virginia State Junior at age 15 and he won his first important title in 1973, the Southeastern Amateur. However, he said his biggest thrill came when he won the 1975 Eastern Amateur. "My father won the very first Eastern in 1957, so that had special meaning to me."

Curtis carried such titles as the Western Amateur and the National Collegiate with him when he first attempted to earn his PGA Tour card in the fall of 1976, but he missed. He came back in the spring of 1977 and made it.

"You have to learn how to pace yourself on the Tour," he said. "You never play this much golf unless you are on the Tour. It takes a couple of years for some players to learn how to play this game at this pace. I believe my game just started to come around this past year to where it once was."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner, 1970 Pac-8 Conference. Winner 1972 Los Angeles City Amateur.

Alan Tapie was ready to do a little celebrating after he tied for second in the Anheuser-Busch Classic in Napa, Calif.

"This will be the first time in my career that I have won a five-figure check," he said, beaming after his final-round 66 pulled him to within a stroke of the winner, John Fought. As it turned out, Alan collected $22,400.

He came close to reaching five figures in the Doral-Eastern Open. He was the leader after three rounds and finished tied for fourth, worth $9,844. He had two other top 10 finishes and went on to his most productive year with $88,113.

Alan started to play golf in high school, simply for something to do, but he preferred football and especially baseball.

"I wanted to continue in baseball," he said, "but I threw my arm out in high school and it required an operation on the right elbow. That ended my career as a pitcher."

"I thought about other sports, but I decided then that golf was the best way for me to get to college," he added. After two years at Los Cerritos Junior College, he obtained a scholarship to Southern California and won the Pac-Eight championship his first year.

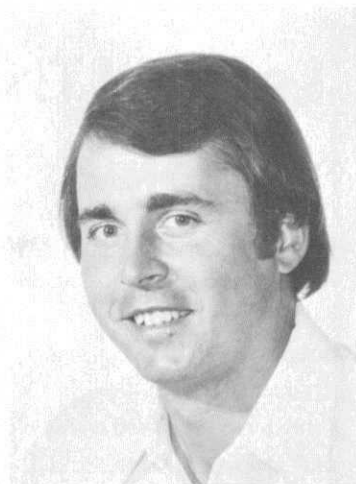

He went on to win the Los Angeles City Amateur crown and then turned professional. After winning occasionally on the mini-tours, he qualified for his PGA Tour card in the Fall of 1974.

After three so-so years, he knew he had to make a change if he was ever to move up the money ladder. "When we were playing at Doral in 1978, I had a talk with myself. I wasn't sure what my problem was, but I did have negative thoughts about my game. I wouldn't let myself play well."

Suddenly, with a better mental outlook, things began to improve. He finished 69-67 at Doral that year to tie for eighth. Within the next month, he had successive ties for fifth at the Heritage Classic and the Greater Greensboro Open.

With the new approach, he moved in with the Top 60 money winners for his exempt status, and the improvement carried on through 1979.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner, Oklahoma State Junior and Scholastic titles, 1966.

Doug Tewell can assure you that hard work does pay off.

"After the Bay Hill Classic in early March," he said, recalling the events of last year, "I absolutely wanted to quit the Tour. I felt I was going nowhere, and it was time for me to do something else."

In his first five 1979 starts, he missed three cuts and failed to qualify for the other two tournaments, the last being Bay Hill.

"Then something happened," he said, "and I'm not sure what it was. About that time a friend of mine said I should work as hard as I can the rest of the year, and then see what happens. He told me I have the talent to play out here. So, I started to do just that."

Suddenly, there was improvement. Within a month he was a contender and finished in a tie for sixth in the Greater Greensboro Open. He went on to make eight straight cuts.

Before the year ran its course, Doug was in position to win twice, as he finished tied for second in the Texas Open and was third by himself in the B. C. Open. In the latter, he was tied for the lead with Howard Twitty as they stood on the 72nd tee, but he double bogeyed.

The biggest improvement in his game, he believes, came in his putting this past year. "I changed my putting stroke about the time of the New Orleans Open (where he tied for 10th) and I changed putters, from a blade to a mallet type at the B. C. I started to make everything."

Doug started to play golf at about age 12 and his first teacher was Labron Harris, Sr. at the Lakeside club in Stillwater, Okla. The Tewell family had a membership there.

Doug and Mark Hayes were classmates and golf teammates through Stillwater High and Oklahoma State. "I was a steady player all through school, but I didn't think I was good enough to play on the Tour, so I chose to be a club professional," he said. Incidentally, he was the runner-up three times in the Oklahoma State Amateur, losing once to Mark.

He worked as an assistant professional for two years and then moved on as head pro at the Pinetop Country Club in Pinetop, Ariz. During the off seasons, he worked at Camelback in Phoenix. In June, 1975, with his Class A PGA membership in hand, he joined the Tour, but it was not easy. Winning $33,162 in 1977 helped to encourage him.

In 1978, he was hurting for most of the year, first with a sore shoulder and then a bad heel. He won only $16,629 and was totally discouraged. Fortunately, he weathered the year and the first two months of 1979.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1975 Carolinas Open.

Leonard Thompson wishes he could give you a good reason for his improved play in 1979. "All I can say is I felt well for most of the year, and I played a little more consistent."

It helped getting off to a fast start. He tied for seventh in the opening event, the Bob Hope Desert Classic, and three weeks later, tied for fourth in the Bing Crosby. He was only two strokes out of the three-way playoff.

By the time the Tour left the West Coast and headed for Florida, he already had better than $31,000 in the bank.

He had three more top 10 finishes the rest of the year, one being a tie for seventh in the Masters Tournament, and the other a tie for sixth in the Colonial National Invitation.

Leonard's biggest year was 1974, highlighted by a victory in the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic. Late in the fall, with his weight over 230 pounds, he decided to go on a crash diet. He lost 50 pounds in three-and-a-half months. With the pounds went his golf game.

"Suddenly," he says, "I couldn't stop losing. I went to a low of 183 pounds and didn't have any strength."

His earnings dropped dramatically. He went to Arnold Palmer for help with his golf swing and looked for ways to get his weight back up to around 200. Both programs were successful, but not easy. By the end of 1976, there were signs of improvement. Early in 1977, the improvement continued. He climaxed his comeback with a victory in the Pensacola Open, holing a 50 footer for birdie on the final hole for a two-stroke margin over Curtis Strange.

One of the highlights of his career came in the Colgate-Hall of Fame Classic on the Pinehurst No. 2 course that same year. He was second to Hale Irwin, but on the final afternoon, he set a course record with a seven-under 29 on the back nine. As a native of North Carolina, Pinehurst always has had a special meaning to him, so the record was especially delightful.

Winner 1977 Morocco Grand Prix, 1978 Benson & Hedges and 1978 Lancome Trophy. 1979 Canadian PGA.

Lee Trevino's record is very impressive as it is, but if he could find a way to change a few of his runner-up finishes into victories, it truly would be spectacular.

For example, he won once in 1978 and was second five times. Last year, he again had one victory, and was the runner-up on four occasions. Of course, that shows how well he has played, and last year he did earn a personal high of $238,732 and became only the second player to earn at least $2 million on the Tour.

The victory came in the Canadian Open (he also won the Canadian PGA, a non-tour event last year), while he tied for second in New Orleans, Milwaukee and in the World Series of Golf. He was second alone in the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

All of this is even more remarkable when you know he underwent back surgery in November of 1976 to repair a herniated disc.

Trevino tied for 54th in the 1966 U.S. Open at Olympic Club in San Francisco, and he didn't try the Tour again until a year later at Baltusrol. He placed sixth in that U.S. Open, and was on the Tour to stay. He was chosen "rookie-of-the-year" for 1967. Twelve months after Baltusrol, the quick-quipping Merry Mex from Dallas was entertaining everyone at the margarita party in the clubhouse at Oak Hill CC, Rochester, where he had just won the 1968 U.S. Open.

Lee won the U.S. Open again in 1971, defeating Jack Nicklaus in a playoff at Merion, and in a span of five weeks that Summer he added the Canadian and British Open titles to his fastgrowing collection. He was named player of the year practically by acclamation.

Everyone knew it merely was a matter of time before big Howard Twitty won a tournament. Certainly, he was wondering about it more than anyone.

The big day arrived on Sept. 2, 1979, when he outdueled two close friends, Tom Purtzer and Doug Tewell, on the final hole of the B.C. Open. They all were tied with one to play, and Howard was the only one to manage a par. Tom bogeyed and Doug double bogeyed.

It was a big year in other ways, too, as he tied for second in the Westchester Classic and had six other top 10 finishes en route to a healthy $179,619 year. Each year that he has been on the Tour, he has improved his position on the money list, finishing 15th last year.

One of the biggest men on the Tour at six-feet-five, 220 pounds, he once was asked why he didn't concentrate on football. With a grin, he replied, "I like to keep my blood in my body."

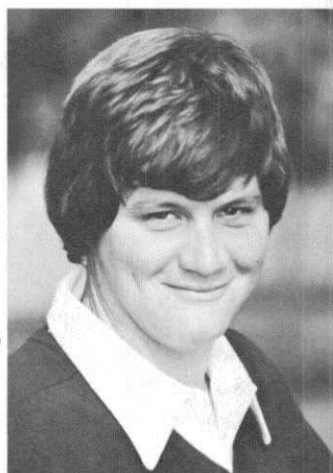

Twitty believes now that his ample physical proportions probably slowed his progress in golf at the start. He started to play at age 10 but it wasn't until he was a senior in high school in Phoenix that his game started to develop.

"I was about E-3 when I was a sophomore," he recalls, "and I was terrible. I guess I just needed time to catch up with my body. I didn't have the coordination that I needed."

As a sophomore and junior at Arizona State, Twitty really showed progress, however. He won the important Sunnehanna and Porter Cup amateur events and, when a senior, he finished right behind the Texas co-champions, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite, in the NCAA championship.

Twitty turned pro in 1973 and twice failed in the PGA Tour Qualifying School before meeting success in June 1975. That was the same year he also won the Thailand Open during a second trip to the Far East circuit.

Bobby Wadkins has come of age as a PGA Tour player, and now all that remains is for him to capture his first title. His last two years have been excellent ones.

It appeared as if he would get his initial triumph in the IVB-Philadelphia Classic this past summer. He was on his way late in the final round, but Lou Graham came from six strokes back with a seven-under 64 and caught him. In the playoff, Lou birdied the first extra hole and won.

He had a chance in the Anheuser-Busch Classic in September, too, but couldn't get a putt to drop on the back nine the last afternoon and tied for second, one behind John Fought.

Bobby's game improved dramatically in 1978, mainly because he went into the year better prepared. He also worked harder on his putting and his over-all practice habits.

Bobby is approximately 20 months younger than his brother, Lanny, and while Lanny was more spectacular on the national amateur level and during his first couple of years on the Tour, they both were standouts in junior golf around their home territory of Richmond, Va.

They kept the city junior title in the family for six straight years, with Lanny winning four.

Today Bobby and Lanny usually practice together, and when one needs help, he almost always goes to his brother.

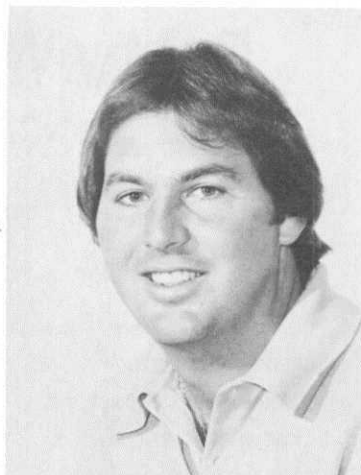

After high school — where he also was a standout basketball player — Bobby headed for the University of Houston and his two closest friends there — and now — were Bill Rogers and Bruce Lietzke.

After one year, though, he transferred to East Tennessee State and earned All-American status in 1972 and 1973.

He earned his Tour card in the Fall of 1974, and was "satisfied" with his first-year earnings of $23,330. He stayed at approximately the same level the next two years and that was disappointing.

A highlight in 1977 came the first day of the Memorial Tournament. After going out in 39 on the very-difficult course, he came back in seven-under 29, to tie for the lead. He also was in the lead after three rounds, but a bad last day dropped him to a tie for 11th.

His peers still shake their heads when the conversation gets around to the 1979 Tournament Players Championship at Sawgrass. They still find it hard to believe what Lanny Wadkins did that week.

With the winds howling off the sea, gusting up to 45 miles per hour the last afternoon, Lanny finished with a five-under par 283 and won by five strokes over Tom Watson. More than half of the final field didn't even break 300.

Lanny assumed the lead after the second round and never was headed.

A month earlier, Lanny enjoyed another of his great moments, winning the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open on one of his favorite courses, Riviera.

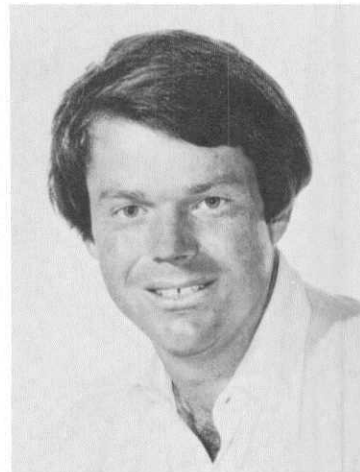

He went through his first 18 starts before missing the cut in the Canadian Open, the only time he failed to survive the axe all year.

Lanny enjoyed a brilliant amateur career, highlighted by a victory in the 1970 U.S. Amateur. It wasn't any surprise when he became an immediate success on the PGA Tour. After earning his player's card in the Fall of 1971, he went on to with the 1972 Sahara Invitational.

His superb play continued through 1973, winning $200,455, with victories in the Byron Nelson Classic in Dallas and the USI Classic in Sutton, Mass. His game started to sag in 1974. As the year progressed, he found it difficult to maintain his energy. In the Fall his ailment was diagnosed as a diseased gall bladder and in early December, he underwent an operation for its removal.

Going against doctor's orders, he returned to the PGA Tour in less than three months. Still weak, he developed bad habits and he admits it wasn't until mid-1976 that he was able to get his game back in its original groove.

Tom Watson's abilities as a player become more amazing each year. Since the start of 1977, he has been the single most dominate figure in the game.

For the third straight year, he swept the top honors of leading money winner, Vardon Trophy for low stroke average and PGA Player of the Year. No one in the game had ever won them all two years in a row.

His five victories and four second-place finishes in 1979 led to $462,636 in earnings, and that topped his own record for the most money won in a single season by more than $100,000. In 21 starts, he had 15 top 10 finishes.

He totally dominated the field in his first two victories, winning the Heritage Classic by five strokes and the Tournament of Champions by six.

Next was the Byron Nelson Classic, and he won that in a playoff over Bill Rogers. He won The Memorial by three, but his second-day 69 still is regarded as one of the game's finest rounds of recent years. Rain and a cold wind lowered the chill factor to 13 degrees that day.

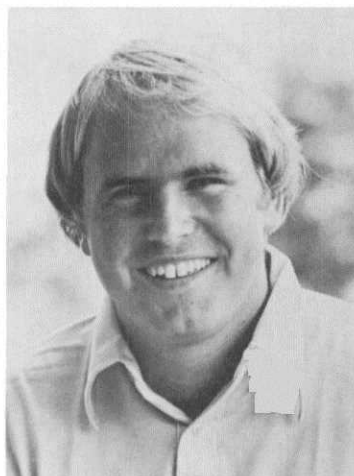

Finally, he won the Colgate-Hall of Fame Classic in a playoff with Johnny Miller.

In the last three years, he has won a total of 14 tournaments on the PGA Tour. He was scheduled to play on the U.S. Ryder Cup team, but Margaret Elizabeth was born to Linda the day before the matches were scheduled to start, so he quickly flew home.

Tom first gained national attention in the 1974 U.S. Open at Winged Foot. He led after three rounds, but a bad final day dropped him into a share of fifth. Shortly thereafter, he scored his first Tour victory, coming from six shots back to win the Western Open.

Watson was only six years old when his father, a scratch golfer, exposed him to the game. He became a four-time winner of the Missouri State Amateur and played three years at Stanford University before being graduated in 1971 with a degree in Psychology.

D. A. Weibring had several good reasons for wanting to win the $200,000 Ed McMahon Quad Cities Open. When the week started at the Oakwood Country Club, he set that as his goal, and he made it.

His father had suffered a mild heart attack on the Sunday of the Western Open, approximately 10 days earlier. "That gave us quite a scare," D. A. said.

"I wasn't going to play in Milwaukee that next week, but Dad wanted me to, so I did. I felt the thing that would make him the happiest was to play well, and I felt I did."

"The Quad Cities is close to my home," he said, pointing out that Quincy, Ill., is about 200 miles from the tournament site. "If I had to pick one place I would want to win my first tournament, the Quad Cities would be it."

While the victory was extremely satisfying to the graduate of Illinois State University, what pleased him most was the fact that his father had recovered enough to be at Oakwood with his mother to see him do it.

On the final afternoon, as he walked on the tee at the par five 15th hole, he was tied with Calvin Peete for the lead at 11-under par. D. A. went on to eagle the hole, reaching the green with a long iron and sinking a 25-foot putt. He sealed the victory with a birdie at the 16th for his 14-under 266, while Peete finished at 268.

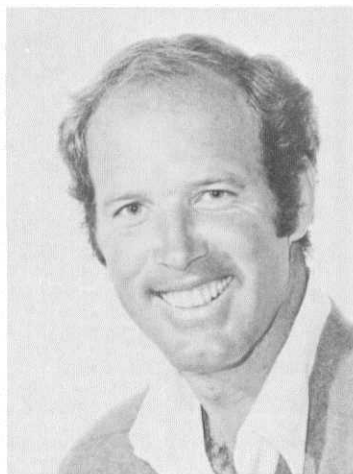

D. A. — that stands for Donald Albert — joined the Tour in June of 1977, earning his card on his third attempt at the qualifying school. In his first full year of 1978, he won $41,052, finishing 75th on the money list, and a tie for third in Quad Cities was his best finish. He had five top 10 finishes for the year.

He explained how the use of his initials came about.

"My father's name also is Donald Albert, and when I was a youngster, Mom decided she didn't want me to be called 'Little Don,' or 'Junior,' so she started to call me D. A. It has been with me ever since."

And, now it seems the golf world will have D. A. around for a long time. He truly is considered as one of the brightest young players on the Tour.

It was not a vintage year for Tom Weiskopf in 1979, but before the schedule had run its course, he did prove something to himself and his followers.

It was his poorest money year since 1967 and for the first time in nine years, he did not pass the $100,000 in earnings mark.

Early in the year, he was having his problems. A beautiful mountain home in Arizona burned to the ground, and at another time he was hospitalized with a serious stomach disorder.

He had a chance to win the United States Open, and didn't, finally finishing in a tie for fourth.

Although discouraged, he launched into the late summer and fall schedule full force. Starting with the Colgate Hall of Fame Classic, he played every event the rest of the way, cashing checks in the last seven and came within a putt of winning the Southern Open. He holed a difficult 12-foot downhill at the final green to force the playoff with Ed Fiori, but the latter won with a birdie on the second extra hole.

Long regarded as one of the most talented players on the Tour, Weiskopf proved in one dazzling spell in 1973 that he is capable of reaching unusual heights. During eight weeks that Spring and Summer he won five tournaments, including the British and Canadian Opens. Carrying over to two other tournaments, he shot in the 60s in exactly half of his 40 rounds.

Later in 1973, Weiskopf also won the World Series of Golf and the South African PGA Championship. Although failing to win in 1974, Weiskopf passed the $1 million barrier in career earnings and finished in the top 10 in nine of 21 events. In 1975 he was a winner again and easily topped $200,000 for the second time.

Fuzzy Zoeller came of age in 1979 and blossomed out as one of the game's genuine superstars. He won his first two tournaments and both were among the more dramatic events of the year.

The first was in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open and he finished five strokes ahead of his nearest challengers, one of whom was Tom Watson. The last day was one of the fiercest of the year, as an extremely cold and harsh wind blew in off the Pacific.

His biggest moment came in April at the Augusta National, and it wasn't expected. He was six strokes in back of Ed Sneed at the start of the last round, and, as Sneed faltered, Fuzzy was playing a steady hand.

When he finished, he still was thinking second place, but he sat in the scoring tent behind the 18th green with Watson, and watched Sneed bogey to force a three-way tie. They all parred the first extra hole, but Fuzzy won it dramatically with a long birdie putt on the second extra hole, leaving Sneed and Watson tied for second.

His victory did surprise the experts, because this was his first trip to the Masters.

Fuzzy first gained "fame" at the 1976 Quad Cities Open when he birdied the last eight holes of the first round to tie Bob Goalby's all-time Tour record, set in the 1961 St. Petersburg Open.

Zoeller grew up alongside a fairway at the Valley View CC in New Albany, Ind., and it seemed natural when he started swinging a golf club at age three. He entered his first tournament two years later. He enjoyed all sports while growing up, but when he was eight his father said to him, "Son, all we're doing is running back and forth between the golf course and the baseball diamond. You had better choose one."

Fuzzy chose golf, but during his days in high school he played varsity basketball, mainly, he said to "keep in shape for golf, and in Indiana in the winter you can't play golf."

He was second in the state scholastic golf tournament in 1970 and went to Edison Junior College in Florida, where he won the State Junior College title before entering the University of Houston.

Commissioner Berman presents TPC Trophy to Lanny Wadkins as wife, Penni, watches.

Lanny Wadkins becomes first player to beat par in TPC at Sawgrass

In the first two years the Tournament Players Championship was played at Sawgrass, none of the PGA Tour's finest players was able to break par for 72 holes. Both Mark Hayes, in 1977, and Jack Nicklaus, the following year, won the players' own championship with scores of 289—one over par.

The reasons for such high numbers were apparent to all. Sawgrass was, and is, a long and difficult course, but the layout alone would not be capable of keeping the Tour's top 144 players from beating par. But when 25 m.p.h. winds—make that swirling 25 m.p.h.—were added . . .

In the first round of the 1979 Tournament Players Championship, the finest field of the year found Sawgrass with its guard down and the players took advantage of the ideal conditions: 53 came in under the par of 72.

Kermit Zarley's 66, matching the course record Mike McCullough set in the first round of the 1977 TPC, gave him a one-stroke lead over three-time winner Jack Nicklaus, Andy North and Lanny Wadkins.

On Friday, the breeze picked up a bit, and 13 players broke par. And it was on this day that the 1979 TPC became Lanny Wadkins' private party. The confident, aggressive Wadkins played his second round without a bogey, and his four-under-par 68 gave him a three-stroke lead—at nine-under 135—over George Burns, who joined McCullough and Zarley in the "Sawgrass 66 Club."

Over the weekend, the wind velocity really picked up and so did the scores. The stroke average soared to more than 77 on Saturday. Although Lanny scored a four-over 76, he nevertheless maintained his three-stroke margin. Tied for second were Burns, Lee Trevino, Bill Kratzert and young Jack Renner, whose 71 was Saturday's only sub-par round.

Sunday's solitary sub-par card belonged to Tom Watson. His 71, on a day when the average score was more than 78, was good enough to vault him to second-place, worth $43,200 of the $437,292 purse. Renner finished with a 75 that gave him third place and a check for $27,200.

The week was Lanny's. His final-round 72, a gutty effort under the circumstances, gave him a 72-hole total of 283, five under par and five strokes better than Watson, whose 288 would have won either of the two previous TPCs played at Sawgrass.

Eligibility Requirements for the TPC

The starting field for the 1980 Tournament Players Championship shall consist of 144 players, determined as follows:

- 1) All designated players.
- 2) Winners of major PGA Tour co-sponsored or approved events beginning with the 1979 Tournament Players Championship and concluding with the tournament immediately preceding the 1980 TPC.
- 3) The current British Open champion.
- 4) Leaders in the PGA Tour Official Standings as necessary to complete the field, beginning with the 1979 TPC and concluding with the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic, which concludes March 9, 1980.

Lon Hinkle holds World Series of Golf trophy as he awaits going on national television to tell about his victory. The group includes Edith and Monique Hinkle, Ken Venturi and Commissioner Beman.

Lon Hinkle's World Series Victory Came After Thrilling Finish

Big Lon Hinkle found a fitting way to climax a thrilling and exciting year for himself. He won the World Series of Golf on the South course at Firestone Country Club in Akron after a tense duel down the stretch the last afternoon.

He had played well all week, posting an eight-under 272, but the outcome remained very much in doubt as he slipped into the press tent to watch on television as the final groups finished play.

Andy Bean had set the tone for the week by unlimbering a six-under 64 on Thursday — further insulting the "Monster" by using his driver only four times. Graham Marsh and J. C. Snead had rounds of 66, but would fade under the heat of competition the next three rounds. There was no heat on Friday; there was rain. And the second round was played on Saturday, leaving a 36-hole wrapup for Sunday.

Tom Watson, with a chance to become golf's first half-million dollar winner, rolled into the lead with a second-round 65, with Hinkle one shot back after his second 67. Larry Nelson, Tom Kite and Lee Trevino were deadlocked another shot back at five-under par 135. Sunday morning's third-round further complicated the script as Jerry Pate roared into contention with a 65, Bill Rogers picked up ground with a 68 and, in general, the best players from around the globe pushed and shoved for position for the final 18.

Nelson and playing partners Trevino and Watson, were the big attractions, and for most of the day, Nelson had things his way. Hinkle put up his third 67 in four tries, took his 272 and tuned in on the final groups from a TV monitor vantage point in the press tent. What he saw caused the big man from Carrollton, Texas, to smile — very broadly.

After having two shots in hand, Nelson watched in dismay as a slightly fat shot into the 17th green produced a buried lie in the front bunker and a resulting double-bogey. Since Hinkle had drained a lengthy birdie at 17, Nelson's two-shot cushion had disappeared completely, and now he was a shot back — as were his playing partners Watson and Trevino.

Facing the 18th hole, the four par of size and strength, needing birdie to tie Hinkle, the threesome went at it. Watson drove into the fairway bunker and bogeyed, Nelson saved par out of the rough and Trevino hit the fairway, then green, but saw his 15-footor for the tying birdie slip away.

Bill Rogers' final-round 69 pulled him into a second-place tie with Nelson and Trevino. Watson's final-hole bogey left him at 274, tied for fifth place with Hale Irwin.

Hinkle's victory in the World Series, worth $100,000 boosted him into third place on the money list and also made him the first man eligible for the 1980 edition of the climactic championship.

RYDER CUP MATCHES

The Ryder Cup Matches developed from a match played between representatives of the American and British Professional Golfers' Association in England in 1926. That unofficial match, incidentally, was won by the British 13½ to 1½.

Following this highly successful exhibition, Samuel A. Ryder, a wealthy British seed merchant, offered to donate a solid gold trophy bearing his name to be competed for in a series of matches between professionals of the two nations.

From the start of the series through the 1959 Ryder Cup matches, the competition was comprised of four foursome matches one day and eight singles matches the other day, each at 36 holes.

In 1961, the format was changed to provide for four 18-hole foursomes the morning of the first day and four more that afternoon, then for eight 18-hole singles the morning of the second day and eight more that afternoon. As in the past, one point was at stake in each match, so the total number of points was doubled.

In 1963, for the first time, a day of four-ball matches augmented the program to add new interest to the overall competition. This brought the total number of points to 32.

In 1977, the format was altered once again. This time there were five foursomes on the opening day, five four-ball matches on the second day, and ten singles matches on the final day. This reduced the total number of points to 20.

For 1979, eligibility for the Great Britain-Ireland side was expanded to include all British PGA/European TPD members who are residents of European nations.

THE VARDON TROPHY

The PGA Vardon Trophy, named in honor of the internationally famous British Golfer, Harry Vardon, was placed in competition among American professionals in 1937 as a successor to the Henry E. Radix Trophy, which, prior to that time, had been awarded annually to the professional having the finest tournament record in play in this country.

Today, the Vardon Trophy, a bronze colored plaque measuring 39" x 27" is awarded each year to the member of the PGA of America maintaining the finest playing average in those events co-sponsored or so designated by the PGA in each such period. A minimum of 80 rounds in tournaments considered official by PGA is required to win.
